VOL. LVI., No. 134 PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1925 PRICE THREE CENTS

The Presbyterian Church Assembly

By R. E. KNOWLES

(SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER)

Dr. Thomson . . with his crushing claim, by God and man attested now, that the liberty of a Church cannot be abridged as it seeks wider fellowship and larger usefulness.

TORONTO, June 9. — Not without some elements of greatness was yesterday's all but closing activity in the Presbyterian General Assembly.

The evening meeting especially was great. And it is not reasonable to presume that there were but few who were quite unconscious of the very significant fact that another "General Assembly" or convocation preliminary thereto was in progress down at MacDonnel's Old Church on King Street; the most portentious feature of whose programme is that the name of their greatest does not appear on it at all.

That name is Dr. McQueen—he is in Toronto. Perhaps the next most remarkable thing about it is that the name of Dr. D. R. Drummond also does not appear. This, however, is due to a stern, but unalterable law.

A sort of grim antiphony seems to have been carried on last night in chant echoing and re-echoing still, between St. Andrew's and College Street. In the former, wisely chosen, the stern Dr. Perrie, of honored name, pleaded for the need of "a restoration of the traditions of the forefathers of the Kirk," while in College Street, his well-loved face turned toward the morning light, the gallant C. W. Gordon sounded the ownward note to forward-looking men. At the Assembly churches meantime they were receiving the congratulations of the world. These were from men of varying greatness and of varying excellence, though all were magnified by sharing the greatness of an hour whose age-long portent is ever yet but slowly breaking in the churches and in the world. Previous to these addresses, Dr. Gandier gave a great message, eloquent of trans-Atlantic impressions.

But to our delegates and their benedictions, the stalwart Irishman, Dr. Hannah, was not at his happiest.

Too cautious, too oScotch, too severe in delimiting the confines of his commission, too conscious f the segment, to indifferent to the circle complete and glorious of the Presbyteryian churches in Canada. The speeches of Dr. Main and Dr. MacGregor were evidently but preliminary to the greater arena of an approaching and a greater day.

The laurels of the evening were for Dr. Thompson. For he came unafraid, fresh from kindred battle and assured of kindred victory.

Frm the United Free Churches of Scotland came he, and in the fullness of the power, demonstrated at great sacrifice and cost, of any living churches of Christ to join hand in hand and heart to heart with any kindred body of believers and toilers and evangelists. Very adroit were the tactics of this dexterous Scot, who began by sympathizing with the Antis in their forlorn estate, cheers from he desolate few leaping to meet his utterance.

But all the sugar-coating was over now. Then followed the medicinal as the convincing delegate literally smoth them hip and thigh with his crushing claim, by God and man attested now, that the liberty of a church cannot be abridged as it seeks wider fellowship and larger usefulness—which is the crux, the vital point of this whole great contention, the ever-growing authenticity of which shall light the proponents of Union down to latest generations.

Really, it does to the most charitable heart, look for all the world like a choice between the forward view and the backward gaze; between the conflicting claims of your grandfather on the one hand and your grandchildren on the other.

Narrow Escape For Boy; Touched Live Wire In Tree

BROCKVILLE, June 9. (Canadian Press)—Hidden from view amid the surrounding foliage, John Mars, a local boy, had a narrow escape from electrocution when in climbing a tree opposite his home, he accidentally touched a charged electric wire. His screams finally attracted the attention of his parents and others, among them Thomas Hughes, who at his own peril, climbed the tree and succeeded in releasing the boy.

PAINT STREAK PUT FOUR MEN BEHIND BARS

NETS STOLEN.

Thieves Start Their Three Year Terms in Portsmouth To-day.

BELLEVILLE, June 9.—(Canadian Press.)— When a launch painted green scraped against the jetty near Picton, leaving a green mark, it left a clue which sent four men to Portsmouth penitentiary for three years each.

The theft of $325 worth of nets, the property of Allan Harrison, when reported to the Provincial police, found them with little to work on till some one noticed the green paint. So the search for a green painted boat was started. Simcoe Island, opposite Kingston, furnished the green boat and it showed a scar. Further search provided the stolen nets. To-day Walter Scott, Wallace Sudds, Overton Scott and Victor Sudds, all young men, started their terms in the pen, having been convicted before Magistrate Williams at Picton.

By-law Breaking Brought Man Into Good Company

At the Police Court this morning George Sloan, charged before Magistrate O. A. Langley with driving a car of lumber down Water Street, with a projection overhanging the rear in excess of the five feet permitted by the Highway Traffic Act, told the Magistrate that he was over sixty years of age, and had never been in court before.

Magistrate Langley, however, in imposing the minimum penalty of $5 partly consoled him by remarking that he was really in good company, as, since the introduction of the automobile, thousands of the most honorable members of society, from princes right down the social scale, had found themselves in a similar position.

WEATHER

The highest temperature yesterday was 89 degrees. Last night's lowest was 65. Apparently the hot spell is near its finish, and there is a freshness in the breeze blowing this morning that has been conspicuous for its absence during the last ten days. We have many varieties of weather in this part of Canada, good, bad and indifferent, but perhaps the least desired, the most debilitating, and that causes the most suffering, is the oppressive heated periods that sw across the country occasionally.—W. P.

Around The City.

The Fire Department was called to 269 Romaine street at 1 p.m. yesterday when a gasoline motor launch took fire. The flames were extinguished before any serious damage was done.

Two local men were charged in the Police Court this morning with being intoxicated on June 8 in Wescott Street. Both cases were adjourned by consent until Wednesday, June 17.

Another local man appeared on a charge of having kept liquor for sale in his house on June 8. He was released on finding two sureties for bail of $1,500, the case to come up on June 17.

A domestic quarrel led to a husband appearing on a charge of wife assault. At the request of the police the accused was remanded until June 11.

C. W. Rose, pastor of Murray street church, will outline a New Plan for Church and Sunday School, and Rev. N. S. McKechnie, of Belleville, will speak on the B. Y.P.U.

The closing session on Thursday evening will have a Scripture Exposition by Rev. Mr. Edgar, on "The Secret of Spirituality," a musical programme, and an inspirational address, delivered by Rev. J. A. Johnston, B.A., pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Toronto.

REPORT MADE BY COMMISSION ON DISARMAMENT

Many Obstructions Placed by Germans in Way of Investigators.

KEYS LOST

Could be Found After Incriminating Documents Had Been Removed.

PARIS, June 9. (Canadian Press). The report of the Inter-Allied Military Control Commission, which formed the basis of the Allied note to Germany regarding disarmament, was made public yesterday afternoon. The annexes, which contain the details of violations of the treaty of Versailles by the German Government, however, were not published.

The Commission, after recapitulating the various measures of obstruction to which the Germans resorted to prevent effective resumption of control over German armaments, concludes with the statement that the evidence collected, despite this obstruction, shows that Germany is far from having disarmament as obligated by the treaty of Versailles.

The document tells how German officials held themselves to be the sole judges of what evidence the Commission ought to be permitted to have, and how the keys of office were lost, and found only after documents or other evidence the Commission was seeking had been removed through side windows.

The members of the Commission, the report states, were frequently told on approaching a munitions depot, where they had reason to suspect they would find unauthorized stocks, that it was worth their lives to try to open the doors, which had been arranged with powerful mines that would be touched off and blew everything in the vicinity to atoms.

This obstruction, the Commission concludes, was strong presumptive evidence in itself that Germany had not complied with the Treaty, but it refers to other, more specific evidence, contained in the annexes, which, it is understood, are being kept secret because, otherwise, German citizens who had denounced violations to the Commission would be compromised.

ABD-EL-KRIM IS PREPARING FOR NEW ACTIVITIES

Concentrating Forces to Attack Two French Strongholds in Morocco.

WATCH "PIANOS"

Guns Are Being Landed in Cases Marked as Containing Pianos.

FEZ, June 9—Abd-El-Krim, the rebel leader, continues the concentration of his forces before the Bibane and Taounat sectors with a view to renewed activities against the two great French strongholds north of the Ouergha River.

The French General Staff under instructions from Paris is committed to strictly defensive warfare against the Moors, and the French are digging themselves in and making other preparations to repeal the attacks.

The artillery activities of the Moors on the Taounat have become more intense. Cavalry has entered the action on this sector, the French having sent out several squadrons in an attempt to scatter or capture Riffian scouting parties.

Marshall Lyautey has informed Paris that Abd-El-Krim lately has received several cannon of .77 calibre and has asked that a sharper lookout he kept at Agadir, a port in Alhucemas Bay where they were landed labelled "pianos."

Check "Piano" Shipments

PARIS, June 9—It was stated yesterday that negotiations betwen the French Foreign Office and Spain dealing with the shipment of guns to Abd-El-Krim's forces through Spanish territory have reached the point where it could be said tonight that henceforth shipments in boxes labelled "pianos" would be carefully scrutinized.

BRUSSELS, June 9. —(United Press.)—Four balloons which started from here Sunday in the Gordon Bennett Cup race, were still to report to-day. They were the Belgian balloon Belgica; the French, Picardie; the French, Grand Charlese, and the Belgian Prince Leopold. The Belgica was rumored to have crossed the North Sea toward England, but the other three were entirely unheard from. The Italian Ciampino V, which descended near Pontivy, 375 miles distant, had the best record of the balloons so far reported.

MONUMENT TO NEWFOUNDLAND DEAD UNVEILED

War Memorial Erected in Beaumont Park, Near Amiens, Dedicated Sunday.

HAIG SPOKE

Many Distinguished People Present from Britain, France and Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., June 9 (Canadian Press)—The inauguration ceremony and the unveiling of the Newfoundland war memorial in Beaumont Park, near Amiens in France, took place Sunday in the presence of hundreds of visitors including a distinguished gathering of French officers and Newfoundlanders. Hon. J. R. Bennett, colonial secretary of Newfoundland, representing the government, made the opening address in which he referred to the glorious part taken in the war by the Newfoundland soldiers and sailors in particular to those of the regiment who fell at eBaumont Hamel concluded, "that this park should be concluded, "that this par should be opened and that a memorial should be erected in the historic land of France whose gallant people fought side by side with our own in a common cause. I wish to express on behalf of the Newfoundland Government and people our gratitude to the free nation for setting apart this fine tstate for one of our memorials."

"We are here to unveil a memorial which will remind generations still unborn of the loyalty and courage of the Newfoundland men and on the unity and strength of the mighty Empire which is our pride and inheritance. There are many other localities in France and Flander where memorials of the glorious achievements of the Newfoundland men in the Great War might fairly have been erected. There is, for example, Masnieres where on the 13th of November, 1917, the Newfoundland Battalion with other battalions of the 29th Division, earned the special gratitude of the British army for the splendid defence they made. There was also the occasion when on the 12th of April, the Newfoundland Battalion was called upon to hold the line against the German attack and did so. These fields where fell so many of your best and bravest are sacred to their memory.

"There your comrades died in the hope of that victory they would never see. To-day, that victory achieved, you set up in the place where they died a monument to their faith and courage. This spot will become a place of pilgrimage which generation after generation will draw Newfoundlanders to France."

The Battalion added a glorious and never-to-be-forgotten chapter to the honorable history of England's oldest colony."

Then followed the sounding of the last post, after which the memorial having been dedicated by the Vicar General of Amiens, an inspiring address was delivered by Marshal Lafayette of France.

BRITAIN PROPOSES NEW PACT TO REPLACE 'SCRAP OF PAPER' REJECTED BY GERMANY IN 1914

RHINE SECURITY.

Government Officially Interprets Provisions of Proposed Agreement—Halts Revenge.

LONDON, June 9 (Canadian Press).—The British Government today gave official acknowledgment of Franco-British agreement on the reply to Germany's security pact proposal announced at Geneva yesterday. The British Government issued a statement emphasizing that the proposed pact is one of mutual assistance.

The statement said that Great Britain has guaranteed to protect both sides of the Rhine and therefore to assist either Germany or France against aggression of each other. This abandonment by Great Britain of her long-standing policy of isolation from continental affairs is a concession to the peace and security of Europe, the statement said.

The statement added that acceptance of the pact by the Allies if approval is given it by Germany, is contingent upon Germany's entrance into the League of Nations. Before the pact can function it will be necessary for Germany to enter the League as a full member, which is an entire change of the former policy under which it had been maintained that Germany should become an unconditional member of the League before security could be discussed.

Under League.

The security pact is subsidiary to the League of Nations, the statement clearly pointed out. The League's agreements regarding the eastern frontiers to Germany which are closely allied to the security pact, take precedence over the pact which will be registered with the League as its guardian for fulfillment. In effect, the pact is an entente between European powers, as successor to the treaty of 1830, the famous "scrap of paper" treaty which was supposed to guarantee the security of Belgium. The new pact, however, is on broader lines. The statement said the most important accomplishment of the pact would be the renunciation by Germany of all efforts to revenge herself upon her neighbors for the loss of Alsace-Lorraine and other territories, and the agreement of European Powers that the status quo under the Versailles treaty is the basis of permanent boundaries of Europe.

The giving out of this official statement leaves no doubt that the government of great Britain believes the proposed security pact can make effective the treaty of Versailles and that its success rests in the hands of the German Government.

Pictures Done In Seeds, Of Norsemen, Draw Attention

MINNEAPOLIS, June 9. — (Canadian Press).—A Canadian Government exhibit is attracting wide attention at the Norse American centennial celebration at the Minnesota State Fair Grounds this week, particularly two large pictures in the Dominion's pavilion.

The first shows Lief Ericson, the Norse explorer, approaching the shores of Nova Scotia in his Viking ship in the year 1001 A.D., 491 years before Christopher Columbus discovered America. In the second he is about to step ashore at what is now Cape Breton.

These two pictures, like huge oil paintings with the colors all accurately shown, are done in grain and grass seeds.

A typical Canadian farm scene is another feature of the exhibit, while there are large panels of grains and grasses, and tiers of products of the farm and orchard collected from various parts of Canada.

It is the first time that Canada has had an exhibit of its resources and products on the Minnesota State Fair Grounds.

THREE CHURCHES IN ASSEMBLY AT TORONTO READY FOR HOUR OF UNITED CHURCH'S BIRTH

Greetings From Old Country To Last Presbyterian General Assembly.

METHODISTS MEET.

Continuing Presbyterians Request Change in Date of Commission.

TORONTO, June 9. Canadian Press. — It is the view of our church at home that this union has been carried through by due Presbyterian procedure, and on terms which our church has found to be consistent with the Presbyterian faith and practice."

This statement made to the Presbyterian General Assembly last night by Rev. Dr. D. D. Thompson, minister of Kelvinside Church in Glasgow, and fraternal delegate from the United Free Church, brought loud applause from the commissioners.

Dr. Thompson said that he brought greetings and cordial good wishes from the United Free Church."

"This does not mean," he added, "that we have ceased to take an interest in those who have not found it possible to enter union with you. They belong to the great Presbyterian family."

Rev. W. M. MacGregor of Glasgow, ex-moderator of the United Free Church, united with Dr. Thomson in conveying greetings.

Rev. Archibald Main, representative of the Established Church of Scotland, Very Rev. Joseph Rorks, for the Presbyterian Church in England, and Rev. R. K. Hanna, of Dublin, for the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, also conveyed to the assembly the good wishes of their organizations.

DRAFTING DIFFICUTIES.

TORONTO, June 9, Canadian Press. — Records of Methodist endurance tests were broken by the extension of the final session of the Toronto Methodist conference till after five o'clock this morning.

The brethren had demanded that business be concluded in order that they might take part in the so-called "general conference" which will officially end the Methodist church in Canada under that name, in the merger into the United Church.

Difficulties of the final session of the Toronto conference were largely with the final draft of stations. In the end there were 60 changes from the first draft. Twelve of the older clergymen were superannuated.

No way was opened to provide for Rev. Dr. Aikens, of Winnipeg at Howard Park Church, to which he had been invited. Rev. W. E. Baker formerly of the Parkdale church, takes the Howard Park appointment.

Rev. E. H. Foye, who was slated in the first draft for Sault Ste Marie, stays in Toronto, at Westmoreland Ave.

Dogs Will Howl When They Read This Startling News; Peterborough's Dog Catcher Was Discharged Last Night

Because there are so many stringent laws, he said, binding people at all turns, Alderman Nagle Phelan last night relieved the city dog catcher of his duties. It is now up to the citizens to protect themselves, their property, and their dogs.

Alderman Phelan to whose good judgment this problem of hiring a dog catcher was left by the Council, has arrived at the conclusion that there are too many laws for the people to attend to properly and still have time to do their washing. He suggests that in case of complaints about vicious dogs or destructive dogs, the police be called to attend to the trouble maker.

CONCERT AT ALDERVILLE.

Alderville is very much indebted to the able talent from Campbellford who gave such an excellent and splendid concert at the church on the Alnwick Indian Reserve recently. The people of this place gratefully appreciate the kindness and the spirit in which this entertainment was given. Every number on the programme deserves special mention.

The proceeds of the concert, which amounted to $45.00, go to the aid of the War Memorial Fund, This memorial, which it is hoped will be erected in the near future, seems rather a big enterprise for this little community to undertake, and any extra help which is given will be most gratefully received and appreciated.

A tea your grocer recommends is usually good tea

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

And most grocers recommend it.

Everything was lovely, quiet and peaceful, when I left the blind, behind which I was hiding. The Catbird couple were like two newly married folks, and all was happiness.

But that was only the lull before the storm.

I returned just before the birds got back, and was sitting on a stepladder, well hidden by old sacking, watching the nest, when Dapper Dan arrived at the nest. He was out of luck in arriving first, maybe, for he perched on the rim, looked down into it, and seemed to admire the two eggs that I had seen there. That was his mistake, in seeming to admire the eggs, for, unknown to any of us, the cowbird had laid her fatal egg while we were all away.

Mrs. Catbird came lovingly to his side, perched on the nest rim and looked down into the nest, possibly just before she would settle on it. But say!

She took one look and the fireworks began to sputter. The first inkling I got, that something was rotten in the state of Denmark, was a raising of the head and neck feathers in anger and a wicked peck at poor Dapper Dan. He took the first danger signal and moved to a nearby branch.

Mrs. Catbird struck an angry blow at the cowbird's egg and seemed, for all the world, to be bent on smashing the furniture. She almost wrecked the nest. Dapper Dan came over, in good faith, to sooth her and see what the trouble was, and then she turned on him.

She blamed him for the extra egg. She took after him in fury and life was one sweet song of discord for Dapper Dan. The row brought the kind lady out into the garden and I left the blind and came out in the open, and then she included me in the unwelcome egg business and what she said to me was worse than what she said to her poor innocent husband.

Now, her husband, though only a bird, was as sly as any young human husband on earth. He began to do some fault finding himself, picking me as the victim, and throwing all the blame on me. He convinced her that I was the sinner, and I had to leave, for the sake of domestic peace.

—Editor.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—The United Church of Canada has practically endorsed modernism or the refusal to accept the whole Bible as the word of God without a single protest. It calls its new-found freedom in that particular "emancipation," just as Bob Ingersoll and the other sceptics did. The new church will be known as the united sceptics. It has endorsed prohibition, however and thus shows faith in its own works if none in the word of God. There is no emancipation in that. But I just want to endorse what one of your correspondents said the other day. The day of Protestant christianity is plainly enough done and ended. The old idea of "resistance" to temptation is now to be succeeded by the "removal" of temptation altogether. The one was God's way. The other is man's. Truly, what sense is there in putting down on a table a lot of booze for people and then saying, You must not touch it. That is the old way. It is nature's way. It is as in the Garden of Eden the way of God. But prohibitionists are sick of that way and have introduced one of their own. How long will these churches last? Twenty years? No, nor ten.

READER.

P. S.— Saskatchewan's election showed no reaction in favour of prohibition. It was not even a sub-issue. Isn't that wful?

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: I see by a late paper the town council has closed the swimming places on Sundays. There are a number of protests, as though the Sabbath was the most important day of the week for bathing.

In the early history of the earth, there was promulgated a law by a Power or Authority far above the power or authority of any law in the British dominions.

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, neither thy son, nor thy daughter, the man servant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates."

"For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day—wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it."

This proclamation is brief but comprehensive regarding the Sabbath day and probably no Scripture is as often referred to and its observance as the Sababth.

The council should be commended for their action.

There are a number of other things under the control of the council if prohibited Peterboro would be a better city.

A LINE-O-TYPE.

The dog-catcher is gone—long live the dogs! Some things have been done by aldermen recently that pleased nobody, but here's one rule that will win a lot of support for Alderman Phelan. Every dog in the city will acknowledge him a benefactor.

And many citizen dog owners who were in daily terror of losing their canine pets will join the doggy chorus of approval.

Some, of course, will look at upturned garbage cans and perhaps dug-up gardens and will try to mar this paean.

But it is doubtful whether Alderman Phelan, having taken the daring step of removing a civic institution, will care for either blame or praise. He frankly admits there are too many regulations hampering citizens.

Evidently he's out to "get" the surplus rules, and this seems to be the open season.

Cries of "Swat the fly" find us in no condition to respond. Just at this moment our morale is so low that when we hear a blue-bottle buzzing we simply lie down and let him walk all over us.

That proposal to hold Sunday band concerts in the Oval isn't a half bad idea for one born in so hot weather. The permission of the two bears has not been obtained, but probably there's only one musical organization in the city to which they would object and we give you three guesses as to which it is. Maybe the bears have heard worse caterwauling in the wilds; maybe not. And we're Scotch an' a' that.

Im Mr. Crane and the Nicholls' Park Trust give the use of the Oval—and the bands give their services—then the people may still have the Sunday concerts to which they are accustomed and which they heartily appreciate, without treading on the tender consciences of the aldermen.

And everybody will be happy once more—if only something can be done about Sunday bathing, too.

The heat wave is due to an "air fence off the Atlantic coast, according to the weather bureau. Now somebody will blame it on the bootleg fleet; still, you can't convince some people W.P. hasn't something to do with it.

"Is the dog wagging it's tail, or is the tail wagging the dog?" asks a correspondent whose query must be referred to the interpretation branch of the League of Nations. He refers particularly to that appendage to civic life—the City Council.

No respectable dog would be bothered with a tail that persisted in wagging him, and come to think of it, it IS lowering to the dignity.

Maybe that's why the little pup on Rubidge Street was howling so much Sunday. Maybe his tail was trying to wag him.

But why didn't he go to the chopping block and make signs to have the offending pendant member removed?

What's the use in growling?

UNITED COUNTIES COUNCIL HOLDS MIDSUMMER SESSION

DEPUTATIONS.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, June 9.—The Council for the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham convened in midsummer session at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon, with Warden J. L. McCamus of Cavan presiding. The session was brief, the only business of importance to come up being the appointment of the Committee on Equalization. By rotation the Reeves of the different municipalities compose this committee this year, the Deputy Reeves having constituted it in 1924, when the equalization of the towns and villages in the two counties was raised 10 per cent. In 1923 the Reeves raised the urban municipalities 16 per cent., so that for the past two years this has been the most important question to come before the midsummer session.

Millbrook Reeve Chairman.

Council took a brief recess while the Reeves retired to organize their committee, which they did by electing Reeve W. T. Wood of Millbrook chairman, a position which he held last year. As Millbrook has no Deputy-Reeve, Reeve Wood is a member of this committee every year.

It was announced that a meeting of the Equalization Committee would be held at 8 o'clock Monday evening and that the Committee on Schools, of which Deputy-Reeve Nelson of Percy is chairman, would meet at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Caring For Children.

Dr. J. T. Daley, superintendent of the Children's Shelter at Port Hope, who is recovering from a serious auto accident, addressed the Council, asking that the monthly grant be increased from $300 to $350 a month, as the number of inmates of the Shelter is increasing. Dr. Daley's request was referred to the Finance Committee, which will meet to-day.

The grant from the Counties Council is the only steady income which the Shelter receives, although it is supplemented by private donations and sometimes by the parents of inmates paying for the support of their offspring. When a judge commits children to the Shelter the municipality in the counties responsible for their care is designated, and if parents have the means an order is made for the payment of a certain amount.

Dr. Daley has the confidence of the councillors, who recognize in him a careful and efficient official, whose heart is in the humane work in which he is engaged, and it is likely that his request for an increase in the monthly grant will meet with no opposition, either in committee or when the matter is taken up in the Council.

Paying for Highway.

In a brief address Warden McCamus said that an important matter to be disposed of was the question of paying for that portion of the Provincial highway—about 50 miles—which lies within the limits of the United Counties. Last year Northumberland and Durham share of the outlay on this thoroughfare was nearly $75,000. When the highway is completed next year the Counties share of the total cost will be approximately $300,000.

At the January session a special committee consisting of Reeves Holdaway, of Port Hope, chairman; Reev Baker of Darlington, and Deputy Reeve McGuire of Cobourg, was appointed to consider a method of payment; whether the cost was to be paid year by year as the work was done or whether there should be a debenture issue.

The special committee will bring in a report at today's session, and it is likely that a debenture issue will be recommended. At least that is the plan favored by Clerk-Treasurer MacNatchtan, whose financial judgment is above par with the councillors and under whose administration the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham are among the least debt ridden municipalities in Ontario. The total debenture liability is a trifle over $30,000 and on this debt the rate of interest paid is only four per cent.

As a rule Clerk-Treasurer MacNachtan believes in the Counties paying as they go. During the war the amount expended yearly for the patriotic fund was $120,000, and this was done without the issue of a single debenture. In the case of paying for the provincial highway, however, Col. MacNachtan believes that a debenture issue is the only fair method. As regards the county provincial roads, he is still in favor of meeting the bills as they come in.

The County Roads.

There are about 278 miles of county roads in Northumberland and Durham and the Department of Highways recommends this mileage be reduced to about 78 miles, the roads cut off to revert to the various townships. A large map showing the proposed changes has been sent here for the guidance of the councillors. The matter will be brought up for discussion before the close of the session.

Hastings to Send Deputation.

The village of Hastings will send a deputation today to back up Reeve Hess in his application for a grant to help pay the cost of paving certain street in Hastings that are connecting links in the county provincial highway. The deputation will consist of Councillor McDonald and Alex. Wilson, village clerk.

Meeting Held.

When the Committee on Equalization met at 8 o'clock Monday night Reeve Elliott of Murray was elected secretary, and a short time was spent in discussion after Reeve Wood of Millbrook, the chairman, had read the statutes dealing with the question of equalization.

There seemed to be a general opinion that the assessment in both townships and urban municipalities was not high enough, but to have the entire two counties equalized according to law would be a slow and costly affair.

On motion of Reeve Elliott of Murray, seconded by Reeve Grills of Seymour, it was decided to leave the equalization as it is for the present.

No Chance For Dispute.

At the midsummer session a year ago the rural members combined to reduce the road grant to the towns and villages from five to three mills on their equalization.

The Ontario Government, to head off all possible future disputes between township and towns, has taken this matter out of the hands of the county councils of Ontario, and has set this particular grant at 75 per cent. of the amount paid to the county roads system.

This grant is supposed to be expended for maintenance of the connecting links of county Provincial roads, but if it is shown to the satisfaction of the engineer that these links are in good condition, the grant can be spent on improving some other street in the village or town.

CONTINUING PRESBYTERIANS IN PRE-ASSEMBLY CONGRESS

Rev. David Perrie Declares Church at End of Unseemly Struggle.

MANY DELEGATES.

St. Andrew's Church Crowded With Three Thousand Delegates.

TORONTO, June 9. (Canadian Press).—A note of enthusiasm and optimism marked the opening session of the pre-assembly congress of the Continuing Presbyterian Church in Canada at St. Andrew's last night when the edifice was filled far beyond its seating capacity. There are upwards of three thousand delegates registered. The general keynote of the gathering was that the Presbyterian Church will continue in Canada, in smaller numbers, but undiminished in enthusiasm and courage.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. David Perrie, D.D., of Wingham, who pointed out that the Presbyterian Church "has come to the end of an unseemly struggle.

"It was a struggle in which there was much to be regretted," he declared. "And is was a struggle which hardly seemed possible in a Christian land. Many are living with hearts sore on account of depredations and injustices to which they have been subjected, and the same stories are reaching us from all parts of Canada of clerical interference and domination."

A call to a church revival sounded through the welcome to the delegates by Principal D. J. Fraser, D.D., of Montreal, president of the Presbyterian Association. An outburst of applause greeted his declaration: "Notwithstanding what ecclesiastics and politicians have decreed, we shall continue to be the Presbyterian Church in Canada."

MORE ARRESTS IN COURT CASE

TRIAL ON FRIDAY.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, June 9. — Two more arrests have been made in connection with the alleged confidence game which "Dr. Court" was carrying on in the vicinity of Campbellford, last week, and for which he was brought to jail here by Chief Brown of Campbellford. Provincial Officer Cousans arrested Lewis Gabel and Andrew Klein, who are held here charged with being confederates of Count. All three have elected to be tried by the County Judge, and the case will be disposed of in the court here on Friday next. Gabel is supposed to be the man McDonald who sent telegrams to Count praising him for his good work and who was supposed to be president of the chain store "company" that Count said he represented.

Count was not taken to Campbellford yesterday for a hearing as he elected to be tried by the Judge at Cobourg.

committee wished to know which it should accept. Rev. Dr. W. J. Clark, of Montreal, explained that the first clerk had refused to declare himself on the question of Union, and his office therefore had been declared vacant on April 28 last, and Rev. Wm. Munroe appointed as his successor. He moved, and the Assembly agreed, that they should recognize only the documents and minutes submitted by Mr. Munroe.

The Assembly heard Rev. Dr. Rochester, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, and voted continued support of that organization. Dr. Rochester said it had cost the association $12,000 to carry the Manitoba Sunday trains case to the Privy Council, and they were continuing their efforts to give Manitoba the protection of the Lord's Day Act.

IS THIS NOT TRUE.

Is it not a general rule that the smaller the family the more selfishness is in evidence?

SEYMOUR GETS A ROAD GRANT

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS

CAMPBELLFORD, June 9.—Seymour Township has received from the Department of Highways a grant of $3,130, being 30 per cent. of the amount spent on the township highways in 1924. The total amount expended on the roads last year was $13,000, but this included the cost of a new grader and stone crusher. The Department paid 40 per cent. of the salary of the road superintendent last year, but in the future 50 per cent. will be allowed on the salary outlay.

These special grants are given only to townships in which statute labor has been abolished. Percy Township ratepayers voted at the last municipal election to retain statute labor, so that no grant is received to improve the highways.

Seymour Council has set aside $10,000 to be expended on the township roads this year.

At St. Andrew's.

"Is the young man, Absolom, safe?" was the text chosen by Rev. Edwin E. Preston, of Colborne, for his discourse in St. Andrew's Church last evening. Taking the son of David as the symbol of the young men and women of to-day, the preacher applied the same question to their condition. It was not sufficient ,he said, to legislate against liquor, pool-rooms and cigarettes, and other institutions that were regarded as temptations for the young. Temptations would still exist to a certain extent in spite of all laws made to remove them, and the only young people who were really safe were those who had the advantage of careful training in home and church.

The anniversary services in St. Andrew's will be held on Sunday, June 21, and the annual garden party on the manse lawn the following Monday evening.

Dr. G. A. Hay, one of the officials of St. Andrew's, leaves for Toronto to-day to attend the Presbyterian Congress.

Heat Was Intense.

According to local weather observers, the thermometer marked 100 degrees in the shade at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. It was 85 at the hour for church services, and the attendance of worshippers in the different congregations fell off as a result.

CAMPBELLFORD COMMISSION REFUSES TO DROP BUYERS AS ORDERED BY THE HYDRO

H.E.P.C. Tells Town It Has No Right to Sell Outside.

OTHER CASES

Hastings Road Lighted Outside Limits—Farmers Served There.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 9—S. P. Iler of Toronto, one of the big men in the Hydro Commission has sent a communication to the Water and Light Commission here asking them to drop from their list of customers eight patrons of the civic lighting plant whose homes are beyond the town limits to the north and who are connected with the lines that run from the plant to Campbellford The Hydro is in a position to serve these customers and Mr. Iler sets up the claim that the Campbellford commission, is prohibited by statute from distributing light or power to any residents not inthe corporation.

This communication has been acknowledged and the request is politely but firmly declined. The service will not be interefered with and the customers referred to will still be carried on the books of the local commission.

Outside Service

This service beyond the town limits is not the only case of the kind here. A farmer on the Hastings road about a mile from the town has his premises lighted from the town plant and that thoroughfare is illuminated from the same source as far out as Beattie's Grove. It has been held here that while the civic commission cannot extend their lines into the township they are not barred by statute or agreement from distributing light or power provided the township customers themselves erect the lines. The farmer in question built a line from the town system to his premises and the preliminary cost of lighting the Hastings Road was borne by the township of Seymour. Other farmer in the vicinity are negotiating for light and power on the same terms.

To serve the customers to whom the Hydro people make objection it was only necessary to connect their premises with the town's transmission line which passes through that district.

In their answer to Mr. Iler the commissioners say that they have taken on these customers and are morally under obligation to provide them with light as agreed to. The Hydro is reminded that in the past the local commission by authority of the Town Council, stretched a point and allowed Percy C. Denyes, at that time an employee of the Hydro, to connect his residence with and to secure light from the Hydro using the town's poles for the purpose.

George Ironsides, another Hydro, employee, was given the same privilege over a year ago on the same terms. The Campbellford Cloth Company get light and power from the Hydro in return for water rights made over to the latter and it was from this source that Messrs. Denyes and Ironsides secured their supply.

Purchased New Pump

The question of the purchase of a new pump for the pumping station, which has been before the commission for some time has been finally settled, the successful bidders being the Turbine Equipment Company of Toronto, agents for the DeLaval Company of the United States. The pump now in use was installed in 1912 by the Morris Machine Company of Baldwinsville, N.Y., and has always given satisfactory service. The capacity, however, was only 750 gallons a minute and the underwriter rated this as too low for a town the size of Campbellford. The new pumps capacity is 1000 gallons.

The contract with the Toronto firm has not yet been signed as there are yet several details to be arranged including the question of the purchasing of the trans formers. It is not yet possible to give the exact amount of the expenditure which the improvement will entail.

It has also been decided to purchase a 100 horse power Westinghouse motor in place of the one of 75 horse power now in use to operate the new pump.

HOGS SAVED.

Liberal Sprinkling of Water Gave Relief in Intense Heat.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 9. — Hogs shipped from here yesterday in the intense heat were saved from a premature death only by the liberal use of water squirted over them from the hose connected with the pipes which the shippers put in some time ago at a cost of $71 after both the town council and the C.N.R. Co. had refused to do so.

There was no change in prices from those of a week ago, hogs bringing 12c and the best grades of calves 8c.

Why thousands of Fords now run more smoothly

A new economy oil made exclusively for Fords has made this possible

WHEREVER you drive now, you will meet Ford cars that have acquired a new ease and efficiency of operation. They run more quietly and develop more power. There is a complete absence of jerky chatter when they start, stop and reverse. They are seldom sent to the shop for overhauling or engine repairs.

This marked improvement in the operation has been made possible through the use of a new economy oil. This oil is Veedol Forzol.

How to make your Ford operate more smoothly

Your Ford, too, can have this same smoothness and economy if you use Veedol Forzol. Veedol Forzol makes this possible because it is specially designed to lubricate both the Ford engine and transmission which must be lubricated by one and the same oil.

Veedol Forzol does both these Ford lubrication jobs perfectly It was created by Tide Water engineers only after four years of thorough scientific experiment, supported by hundreds of practical road tests. Veedol Forzol is made for Fords exclusively. It gives these 8 economies in operation.

The Eight Economies of Veedol Forzol

1. 10 to 25% gasoline saving.
2. 10 to 25% saving in oil.
3. 10 to 25% less carbon.
4. Eliminates costly chatter.
5. Resists heat and friction.
6. Increased ability to coast.
7. Resists fuel dilution.
8. Reduces repair bills.

Veedol Forzol is sold by dealers displaying the orange and black Veedol Forzol sign. Have your crankcase drained and refilled to-day.

RESEARCH WORK.

The appeal that is being made on behalf of the Banting Research Foundation by which it is hoped to raise a fund of a half million dollars is encouraging in the hope that it creates that at last Canada is beginning to pay some attention to the all-important question of research work.

It is intended to supplement the funds now available for maintaining the Banting and Best Chair of medical research in Toronto University, and also "to establish a fund for the adequate financial support of such scientific workers as may nave proposed definite problems of medical research and for whom funds are not otherwise available."

Too much cannot be said in support of this movement.

The fight against disease is a battle in which every citizen should be glad to engage.

But the Examiner would like to think that research work in other lines could be sure of similar assistance.

The scientific researcher in industrial problems in this country should of all men be encouraged, for surely Canada needs the benefit of such investigations in many fields of industry.

Dr. Thomas Wickett expressed the point in one sentence recently when he declared that "Industrial scientific research is our country's highway to prosperity."

SHOULD BE RESCINDED.

The official announcement of the opening of Peterboro's civic bathing beaches yesterday stated that the beaches would be open on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week.

Sunday, of course, was not mentioned, seeing that the Chairman of the committee had no authority except so far as was given him by the Council's vote, which declared against Sunday bathing.

The Examiner's position is that the vote that has so offended public opinion should be rescinded, and that the matter is of sufficient importance to justify the calling of a special meeting of the Council to consider it and the other vexed question of Sunday band concerts.

The feeling of the majority of the people in regard to these matters remains so heated that to refuse to recognize its existence is to add an error of omission to a very serious mistake of commission.

In defence of the Council's action it has been claimed that it is a protest against the American Sunday.

It is nothing of the kind.

Unless it is accompanied by an attempt on the part of the Aldermen to curb Sunday golf and Sunday motoring and the Sunday sale of gasoline, etc., it is merely class legislation.

It only hits the individual who is most in need of innocent and innocuous recreation on Sunday—in other words, the worker and his family.

It is a narrow, one-sided, puritanical decision that is resented not only by those hurt by it but by hundreds of other fair-minded citizens to whom it makes no personal difference.

PETERBORO'S TAX RATE.

Although Peterboro's citizens are inclined to grumble about the high amounts mentioned in their tax bills—and they are not by any means low—yet a comparison with the taxes paid in other cities in Ontario shows that perhaps we are not so badly off in this respect after all.

The latest Government report issued on May 29th shows that, having regard to the amount of municipal taxes per head of population, Peterboro stands seventh lowest, eighteen other Ontario cities having contributed more per capita than ourselves.

In fact, Peterboro is only beaten by Kingston, Stratford, Woodstock, Guelph, Oshawa and St. Thomas, the latter being the cheapest city in the Province on the basis of municipal taxation, the total per capita tax being $25.85, as compared with $31.96 in Peterboro.

Port Arthur has the distinction of being the dearest from a taxation standpoint, the municipal levy there being $56.96 per head of population, while Fort William, the Port's nearest neighbor and greatest rival, is not far behind with $51.49, and Toronto finishes third highest with $49.07.

When the matter is considered from the angle of taxation for municipal purposes, the school taxes not being included, Peterboro was indeed the fourth lowest in Ontario, only Guelph, Oshawa and St. Thomas being lower.

Peterboro's levy for school purposes was higher, however, than ten other Provincial cities, with the result that a comparison of the totals leaves this city in seventh place.

The centres which pay less than Peterboro's $12.59 per head for school purposes are: Galt, $12.10; Niagara Falls, $11.66; Kitchener, $11.58; Belleville, $9.84; Kingston, $9.69; Stratford, $10.61; Woodstock, $8.86; Guelph, $11.74; Oshawa, $9.80, and St. Thomas, $9.65.

THAT 4.4 BEER.

Windsor McCay, in today's cartoon, visions Canada engaged in ringing up huge profits from American consumers of 4.4 beer in Ontario. The dream may come true. Anyway, the drawing conduces to thought.

When the United States went in for prohibition we adopted no half-way measures, we made no experiments. We said, "Let's quit," and wrote it into law; and some of us did quit, while others resorted to extra-legal means to continue tippling. We might have abolished hard liquor, and committed ourselves to wine and beer, to see how that scheme would work. But we didn't. And millions have been dissatisfied ever since.

Ontario is now providing us with an experiment, which we can watch with interest and perhaps with considerable profit. She is permitting the sale of beer that is mildly alcoholic. It is too soon to estimate the results. It may be a year, it may be several years, before they can be written down and judged. But among the questions which we failed to answer, and which Ontario's experience may settle, are these:

Does this beer contribute to drunkenness and disorder?

Does it work hardship on the family?

Does it conduce to crime?

Does it increase farm production?

Does it injure or help general business?

Does it bring in a profitable revenue to the state, not thrown right back to police and prisons and asylums and reformatories?

Does it make politics crooked, corrupt voters, and bring back the infamous role of the ante-prohibition saloon?

Does the beer satisfy the drinker, or does he still seek something more potent?

In short, is 4.4 beer any better solution of the drink problem than we have found prohibition to be?

Given a sufficient trial, the Ontario scheme ought to provide an answer to all these questions, in the light of which America, which acted in haste, may re- to consider at leisure - To pre-judge the matter is to confess to a prejudice; and prejudice never yet made a good law, or one that could be enforced. Let us watch the Ontario experiment with open minds.—Detroit News.

WEEK-END ACCIDENTS.

The long list of week-end accidents, the majority being automobile fatalities or drownings, suggests that, important as it is at all times to follow the principle of safety first, such a policy becomes imperative on Sunday.

The week-end casualties are always heaviest, of course, because of the increase in motor traffic and because that the Sunday holiday brings on to the highways a small army of motorists who are rarely seen there on any other occasion.

Many of them are not skilled drivers, and some add recklessness to their inexperience.

It becomes, therefore, the duty of drivers generally to recognize that many of the motorists they meet are "green," ignorant often of the rules of the road and shaky in the handling of the machines whose movements they are attempting to control.

The Sunday situation thus calls for unusual care.

It is not safe to presume too much on the other fellow's knowledge of the etiquette of the road.

He may be a much less skilful driver than you are, and the thing you would do under the same conditions he perhaps knows nothing about.

Very little should be taken for granted on a road teeming with Sunday motorists, many of them novices.

Another feature, too, that adds to the danger is that Sunday has become the day for family outings.

Such a condition was responsible for a local accident on Sunday when a little girl was hurled out of a car on the pavement by the door she was leaning against suddenly opening.

The Monday list of accidents is appalling enough surely to lead to a genuine desire on the part of everybody with the least iota of grey matter to resolve that so far as he is concerned conditions will be safer henceforth.

BANK MERGERS NOT OPPOSED.

Winnipeg must evidently console itself with the thought that a branch executive office of a powerful bank is better than the headquarters of a weak one, says the Monetary Times. There is no doubt that the West regrets the prospective passing of the Union Bank, as this leaves only the Weyburn Security, operating over a very limited area, with headquarters there. "A matter of grave public concern," is how the "Manitoba Free Press" refers to this new development. It concludes:

"Canada, in the interests of national unity, will have to set to work to find out why small banks and territorial banks cannot live in Canada. When the cause is discovered—and we do not think any great search will be necessary—it will have to be dealt with and removed. The merging of these banks simply as a business proposition may be regarded as a triumph; but from the viewpoint of national interests it is not far removed from tragedy."

"The Regina Leader" concludes that, while one bank disappears, "no one is the poorer thereby, as might have been the case if the directors of the Union Bank had decided to pull through on their own power." It adds:

"Anyway, whatever the end may be in Canada, a tendency towards mergers has been apparent since the war; and the people themselves are responsible for it. They have patronized the larger banks, which they felt were safer; and in doing so they have unwittingly weakened the smaller banks and forced several of them to choose between selling out or going under. The idea that the bank mergers which have taken place during the past few years were either desired by the banks which have sold out or were engineered by sinister-motived financiers is absurd. The banks that have gone out of business, with the exception of the Home Bank, which was wrecked from the inside, were unable to weather the storm, with diminished earnings. They have been absorbed for much the same reason that scores of newspapers in Canada have been absorbed during the period following the outbreak of the war. They couldn't carry their overhead and make a profit out of their income."

These are sentiments very different from what were heard expressed a few years ago. It is evident that the failure of the Home Bank has changed the public viewpoint entirely, and depositors are satisfied if their money is safe. In other words, the coast is clear for this merger movement to run its course. Whether it has done so already no one can tell. But apart from the Weyburn Security, all executive head offices are now in Montreal and Toronto, and the merger of two banks in either centre would not arouse opposition, though there would probably be objection to any pronounced movement from one to the other.

Neither can one foretell what position will ultimately be reached. The best public policy, however, is to let business and finance move along its own lines and reserve interference until such time as it is necessary.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Canada has lost a great Canadian and a fine citizen in the death of Col. Denison, for many years Police Magistrate of Toronto.

Those Peterboro Aldermen do not believe that cleanliness is next to godliness as they have put down the lid on Sunday ablutions at the civic bathing centres. A few weeks ago they also turned a deaf ear to a largely signed petition for daylight saving. It looks as if some of the city fathers will be in the "also ran" class at the next municipal election.—Lindsay Post.

A THOUGHT.

WHAT IS THE WORD SO NECESSARY IN SUCCESS?

Wha one thing is absolutely necessary in order that an employee may earn more money and get more pay?

Is it experience? Experience is not the word. Even those with much experience are often inclined to lack the very thing that is so necessary in advancement.

Is it hard work? The hardest workers in the world seldom rise above a day's pay simply because they lack this one word.

And now that the thoughts of "exeperience," "intelligence" and "work" have been presented (and these are the important factors in the success of an employee), what is the word that is absolutely necessary for any employee to apply before he can be bigger and better in service and get more pay?

Is it honest? The dishonest will eventually be discharged, so why discuss this thought?

Is it ability? Ability is of little account without the word I have in mind. The application of ability is seldom practiced without this one word that is so necessary in the success of an employee.

Let me give you the word—Interest.

In any organization, it is no trouble to tell which of the employees lack individual interest. All men who rise in responsibility and receive more pay must have individual interest.

Individual interest in what you are doing prevents you from half-doing, or from saying. "That's good enough." The easiest employee to replace is the "Thats good enough" man who has no personal pride or indivual interest in anything but his pay envelope.

All the outstanding elements in the make up of a valued employee can easily be discounted by the lack of individual interest.

Individual interes seldom needs much supervision. It is always striving to give a little better service—always trying to improve things. Individual interest is intelligence industry and integrity doing their level best in constructive work and real co-operation.

I..To have any important share in sucess, we must give to such success our individual interest or forever remain small potatoes.

Increased pay demands that you give incessant work. Promotion or advancement is not the answer to just hard work. There will be no real "hard work" when you get thoroughly interested.

There may be dishwashers that break more dishes than they are worth, but even a careless dishwasher, though individual interest, can save the dishes.

AUNT MARY'S ALBUM.

Ladies' Aid of Colborne Put on Play at Frankford.

FRANKFORD, June 9.—At the Frankford Opera house on Friday evening the Ladies' Aid of Colborne Methodist Church, put on a play entitled "Aunt Mary's Family Album" in interest of the Ladies' Orange Lodge of Frankford.

The programme was opened by the Rainbow Orchestra singing and playing "How-do-you-do", and several other good selections. A splendid chorus was rendered by eight young Ladies dressed in pink and blue.

The play called the 'Family Album' consisted of two acts, the first scene was Aunt Mary showing her family album to her visitors. In the second scene Aunt Mary has a quilting bee, and an afternoon tea, after which the visitors entertained the crowd with their duets, songs and comics.

Supper was served afterwards for the Ladies Aid by the Ladies Orange Lodge of Frankford.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 9 Canadian Press).—Rains and lower temperatures brought about a decided fall yesterday in the price of wheat. Besides, the United States visible supply of wheat failed to show as much decrease as had been expected. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy at 3 1-4 to 3 7-8 cents net decline, July 165 5-8 to 165 3-4 and Sept. 162 1-8 to 162 3-8, with corn 3-8 to 1 7-8 cents off; oats at 1-4 to 7-8 cent down, and provisions varying from a setback of 30 cents to 7 cents advance.

Expectation that the government crop report tomorrow would prove bullish as to wheat, led to considerable buying on the declines in price, but profit-taking on the part of holders became much more than an offset whenever the market rallied.

Rains eased down corn values as well as wheat, but oats displayed stubborn resistance to selling pressure.

In line with hog values, the provision market averaged lower.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 9 Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain in Montreal yesterday was quiet owing to the fact that the foreign demand was again of a very limited character. Bristol cables that sales of No. 4 barley were made at 36s. per quarter for June shipment. The demand here for ocean grain room was also very quiet.

There was no improvement in the volume of business in cash grain in the domestic market which was attributed to the fullness of the export trade and the fact that Winnipeg sellers were asking more money for oats and barley than buyers here were disposed to pay. There was some demand from country buyers for and prices were steady.

The spring wheat flour market was very quiet, there being practically no demand from any source. The undertone at the close of the day was easy in sympathy with the weakness in the cash wheat situation at Winnipeg, but there was no actual change in values announced. The trade in winter wheat flour was also very dull.

The enquiry for all lines of millfeed continues good, but on account of the somewhat limited supplies available on spot, the volume of business was cheked owing to the fact that sales in most cases have to be confined to broken lots in mixed car orders. The tone of the market was firm. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was inactive and prices were steady.

The market for baled hay remains quiet, but the undertone was steady and prices were unchanged with car lots of good No. 2 timothy selling at $14 to $15 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at 11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

A feature of the local egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market, and prices scored an advance of 1 to 2 cents per dozen for the higher grades, which was attributed to the excessive heat of the past few days and the smaller percentage of the above class of stock. The demand was steady for small lots to meet actual wants and a fair trade was done in a wholesale jobbing way, the receipts were 3,608 cases, as compared with 2,347 for the same day last week, and 3,353 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of butter in Montreal were 1,512 packages, as compared with 192 for the same day last week, and 2,190 for the corresponding day a year ago. A stronger feeling developed in the market and prices scored an advance of 1 to 1 1-2 cents per lb, which was attributed principally to the continued strength in the cheese situation during the past year. A moderate amount of business was done for domestic account. In a wholesale jobbing way prices were also marked up 1 cent per lb., with sales of finest creamery at 35 cents per lb in solid packages, and at 36 cents per lb. in 1-lb blocks.

The receipts of cheese were 7,864 boxes, as against 5,766 for the same day last week, and 5,451 for the corresponding day a year ago. The

Have You Enough Insurance

THIS is a matter for each man—especially each family man—to decide for himself. It is easy to answer this question. Take the amount of insurance you carry—compute it at 5% (which is all money can safely earn) and set down the result. Could your family exist on what your present insurance would bring them at 5% interest? If not—plan to-day to increase your insurance.

SAMUEL BLACK ARDENT MEMBER UNITED CHURCH

Has Been 50 Years Connected With St. Andrew's, Warkworth.

ELDER IN CHURCH

Congregation Voted Non-Concurrence—Now Worships With Methodists.

NORHAM, June 9.—A prominent figure in ecclesiastical circles and one well known in other spheres of life is Samuel Black, of Warkworth, who has been a member of the Presbyterian church for over sixty years but who recenty withdrew from that body to enter the United Church of Canada. For three quarters of a century Mr. Black has been known among his friends as a man of sterling character, strong convictions, earnest purpose and punctual in the performance of his duties.

Mr. Black is a son of the late James and Agnes McBride Black, and was born at Rasharkim, Antrim County, Ireland, on August 15, 1833. Throughout his boyhood days he was a regular attendant at the Rasharkim Presbyterian Church. He came to Canada at the age of seventeen to join two older brothers, John and Robert, who had crossed the Atlantic in search of fortune a few years before. His first Canadian home was with a Mr. Mitchell, of Gore's Landing, on the shore of Rice Lake. After a short sojourn with Mr. Mitchell he went to live with William and George Isaac, near Harwood, where he spent several years and during which time he became a member of the Presbyterian church.

On Dec. 11th, 1862, Mr. Black married Mary Sherwin, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sherwin, of Harwood. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Black settled on a farm near Bowmanton, where they resided for fourteen years. In 1876 they came to Percy township where Mr. Black has resided ever since, having spent thirty years on a farm west of Warkworth, and the balance of the time in town. For almost half a century he was a faithful and ardent supporter of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, until a short time ago, when on account of his church voting non-concurrence to entering the United Church of Canada, he withdrew and with the unionist minority of 84 members came over to the United Church and with that people on Wednesday, June 10th, will enter the United Church.

For a long term of years Mr. Black was Sunday School superintendent and for the last thirty-seven years, until he resigned to become a member of the United Church, he was an elder.

He had visited his old home in Ireland twice, first in 1855 and again in 1901. In 1912 Mr. and Mrs. Black celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding and had the please of having with them their three sons and four daughters. Although nearly 92 years of age Mr. Black is a regular attendant at Divine worship. He has had the honor of being president of the Warkworth Agricultural Society.

In 1918 Mrs. Black passed to her reward and since that time Mr. Black has resided with his daughter, Mrs. William John Harper, of Warkworth.

ACCORD REACHED BY BRITAIN AND FRANCE ON PROBLEM OF SECURITY ALONG RHINE BANKS

Four-Power Pact to Include Belgium and Germany, is Proposed.

BRITISH SUPPORT

Entire Strength to Aid France in Case of Attack on Rhine Frontier.

GENEVA, June 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Great Britain and France reached a complete accord yesterday on the problem of European security, and if Germany, to whom the accord will soon be sent, agrees to the conditions, a four-power pact will come into being based on the inviolability of the Rhine frontiers as delimitated by the Versailles Treaty.

The pact will include Great Britain, France, Belgium and Germany. Italy is not included, though the text will be communicated to her for reasons of courtesy, and Poland and Czecho-Slovakia are not directly affected, though they will benefit by the operation of France's alliance with them.

The next step in the negotiations will be the despatch by France to Germany, also on behalf of Great Britain and Belgium, of a letter replying to Germany's offer to negotiate a pact of guarantees for the German frontiers bordering on France and Belgium. There are some indications of disappointment in Polish and Czecho-Slovakian circles that their countries do not specifically enter the domain of the proposed pact.

It is understood that Great Britain agrees to come to the support of France with her entire military, naval and air forces in case France is attacked or in case of any aggression across the Rhine district. This constitutes an elaboration of an obligation already contained in the Versailles Treaty whereby the Allies agreed to regard as a hostile act any infringement of the demilitarization between France and Germany.

Great Britain declines to commit herself to guarantees concerning Germany's eastern frontiers, because she realizes that the British dominions would not approve of such a committment.

Italy's exclusion from the pact is due to the fact that it is based on the Rhineland, and Italy is free to make a separate agreement with Austria and Germany.

The conclusions of the Rhineland pact is conditional on Germany entering the League of Nations, and this agreement, like the others, will be linked with the league covenant and operate under it.

The next word is with Germany, and both Mr. Chamberlain and M. Briand voiced their confidence that the allied offer was such that Germany would accept. They announced the establishment of complete harmony between the British and French governments in the council chamber of the League of Nations before a hundred or more international journalists.

M. Briand poetically termed their accord "A perfect entente attained in the peaceful and impartial atmosphere of Geneva," and then added "sweetened by Geneva's perfume."

At this moment vociferous applause broke out in the adjoining chamber, where the Arms Traffic Conference Commission had reached an accord on one of its problems. M. Briand swiftly exclaimed: "See, the world applauds us already."

Speaking both for himself and Mr. Chamberlain, the veteran French diplomat declared there was every chance that they were on the eve of the creation of a solid instrument for the consolidation of European peace. Concerning Italy's non-inclusion, M. Briand explained that the negotiations with Germany were merely for one of a series of treaties, saying that they must realize those things now which were possible of realization. He believed that both Poland and Czecho-Slovakia would find in the proposed pact an increased feeling of security.

Mr. Chamberlain told the Canadian Press correspondent last night that he was extremely gratified that a Franco-British agreement had been reached with so little difficulty. From the outset, he remarked, they were really united on fundamentals. The note to be sent to Germany would be couched in the most friendly terms, and should lead to successful negotiations.

Mr. Chamberlain added that there was nothing in the situation to give offense to Poland or cause her the slightest disquietude, and in conclusion said: "It will be found much easier to deal with this situation than may be supposed."

CRIMINAL LIBEL SUMMONS ISSUED

Vancouver Editor to Appear in Court for Article on Murder Case.

POLICE MAGISTRATE

VANCOUVER, June 9. — Canadian Press. — Magistrate J. A. Findlay issued a summons against J. S. Cowper, editor of the Saturd Tribune, to appear in the police court here next Monday to answer to a charge of criminal libel laid by F. L. ker on Saturday night. Service of the summons on Cowper was made yesterday afternoon.

The charge is a sequel to the publicatios in the weekly newspaper of an article relating to the Janet Smith murder case.

G. L. Fraser, counsel for Mr. Bal. er, was in consultation at noon with Magistrate Findlay as to whether a warrant should be sworn out or only a summons issued against Mr. Cowper. Under a warrant Cowp would be placed under arrest, while under a summons he would merely be ordered to appear in court at a certain time to answer the charge.

In the meantime the provincial police are investigating the alleged statements of a Vancouver woman, which form the basis for the article.

INVESTIGATE COMBINE.

You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure

There is one simple, safe, and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of peroxine powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The peroxine powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

SENDING POLICE

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(Canadian Press.)—The decision of the Canadian government to send mounted police into the Arctic to establish patrols over islands north of the mainland was received with interest in Washington, although officials declined to comment upon the press dispatches telling of the plans.

Indications have come from Ottawa for some time that Canada might take active steps to support claims she had made to islands in the Arctic, and it is thought likely that the intention of the MacMillan Expedition this summer to claim any lands discovered in previously unexplored regions of the Polar sea may have been a factor in the Ottawa government's decision to move by physicial possession towards consolidating her claims in that region.

Officials here have denied receiving any communication from the Canadian government bearing on the situation. It was said yesterday at the State Department that a letter from Donald B. MacMillan had been transmitted to it through the Secretary of the Navy, but its contents were not made public.

MacMillan plans to traverse Ellesmere Island by airplane from Etah, Greenland, to Cape Hubbard on Axel Heiberg Land where he will establish his advance flying base. Ellesmere Island is claimed by Canada, but whether actual permission will be required of that government for MacMillan to make his proposed crossing has not been definitely stated. The Danish government it has been announced has given permission for the MacMillan expedition to base at Etah and to visit the Ancient Norse Ruins in Greenland, and has offered its cooperation in every respect to the expedition.

Should any question of sovereignty of new lands arise as a result of the MacMillan exploration, it is expected simmers down to a case of possession by right of discovery as contracted by the claims of a government to lands lying off its border even though they be far beyond the customary three mile limit.

UNITED CHURCH BUDGET TO BE FOUR MILLION DOLLARS A YEAR, SUGGESTS PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Methodist and Presbyterian Objects Each Need Nearly $2,000,000.

YEAR'S CONFORM

General Council Will Take Steps to Close Finances on Same Date.

TORONTO, June 9. (Canadian Press).—From the Presbyterian General Assembly there goes to the first General Council of the United Church a suggestion that the first Union budget be for $4,000,000, which would be intended to cover all activities of the united denominations for all of the year 1925 and the first three months of 1926. Rev. Dr. Laird, treasurer of the Church, voiced the suggestion yesterday afternoon in behalf of the General Board, and the Assembly sent it along to the Council. Dr. Laird explained that the Presbyterian Church was entering Union in much better financial condition than he had dared to hope a year ago. The board had fixed their 1925 budget at $1,500,000, and added $300,000 for the first quarter of next year. The Church had a total debt of about $220,000, a reduction of $210,000 in two years, for which they should make some provision. They had decided, therefore, to suggest in all a budget of $1,970,000 to take adequate care of their work. The Methodists would ask for the same, and the Congregationalists for $60,000, making the total United Church budget of $4,000,000.

Dr. Laird said that the General Council would take steps to bring into conformity the financial years of the uniting denominations, and it was to harmonize financial operations that the proposal was made that the budget provide for funds to the end of March of 1926. Givings of congregations in 1924 showed a decrease of $23,000, he told the Assembly, but total receipts from all sources were $1,498,475, exceeding any former year. Rev. John W. Woodside, of Ottawa, was elected chairman of the General Board, succeeding Rev. Dr. D. R. Drummond of Hamilton, an opponent of Church Union, who resigned some months ago.

The commissioners devoted to business three sessions in a very trying temperature. In addition to the report of the General Board, consideration was given to the foreign missions report and to the work of Sunday schools and among the young people. It was stated by Rev. Dr. Cochrane, in presenting the latter report, that the United Church would have the charge of approximately one million children and young folks. Last night the Assembly heard an address by Rev. Dr. C. W. Gordon of Winnipeg on the contribution of Presbyterianism to the United Church, and received greetings from representatives of the overseas Church.

The Assembly declined to go all the way with the Presbytery of Macleod, and the Synod of Alberta, which wanted all war declared a crime. On a resolution of Rev. Dr. David Christie of Winnipeg, the Assembly declared it could not pronounce all war to be a crime. "But it believes all war originates in crime," added the resolution, and unceasing vigilance was urged to prevent war," except on the insistent demand of the general Christian conscience in the interests of righteousness."

The Judicial Committee sought advice from the Assembly in a difficulty which the Church Union controversy had developed in the Montreal Presbytery. A clerk of presbytery who had been relieved of his duties, and also his successor, had sent in sets of minutes, and the

NO CHANGE IN USE OF FLAGS

Those Flown Victoria Day Were Ones Usually Flown on Such Occasions.

QUESTION ANSWERED

OTTAWA, June 9 (Canadian Press).—The incident of the lack of flags flying on certain government property on Empire Day was again referred to in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

Hon. J. H. King, minister of public works, pointed out that on May 25 last, L. J. Ladner Conservative, Vancouver Centre) had "intimated to the House that there had been a deporable absence of flags on government buildings, stating in his remarks that the practice followed this year differed from that of the previous year." Dr. King pointed out that at the time he had promised to make enquiries. "My enquiries show that there has been no change," stated the minister. "The practice followed this year was the practice that had been followed each and every preceding year."

In reply to H. C. Hocken (Conservative, Toronto West). Dr. King stated that he had "instructed the department that these flags around the Parliament Buildings which have never been flown before on occasion of that kind, will be raised and be on hand at that date."

Mr. Ladner stated that he had simply pointed out the absence of flags on Empire Day and had made no comparison with previous years.

MAN ATTACKED BY FRIEND WITH KNIFE

Foreigner Stabbed While Sleeping in Hammock at Friend's House.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., June 9. —(Canadian Press.)— A murderous attack, apparently without motive, was made early yesterday on Mike Spenchuck, of Rosslyn village, who came to the city and was spending the night at the home of Mike Dirda, on Alberta street. While Spenchuck was asleep in a hammock behind the house, owing to the house being crowded, he was assaulted and stabbed in the head with a knife, which he alleges was wielded by Dirda. That this is possible is gathered from the fact that Dirda has disappeared and is now sought by the police. Spenchuck is badly gashed and his condition is quite serious.

RICHARD HALL & SON

W.M.S. MEETING WELL ATTENDED

Outlook for Continuing the Presbyterian Society is Very Promising.

INSTITUTE MET

MILLBROOK, June 8.—The Women's Missionary Auxiliary of the continuing Presbyterian Church held an interesting and well-attended meeting this week, the newly-elected President, Mrs. R. J. Doak, being in the chair.

A solo by Miss Kathleen Lancashire was much enjoyed, as was also a missionary reading by Miss Anna Hawthorne.

The Secretary, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, gave a brief report of the recent meeting of the Peterboro Presbyterial held at Cobourg. Mrs. Eakins and Mrs. Doak were delegates to the gathering.

Mrs. (Rev.) W. Johnstor. who was President of the auxiliary of Grace Church when it was organized thirty-one years ago, was present and gave a most impressive and helpful address on "Faith," basing her remarks on the fourth chapter of Romans, with special reference to the example of Abraham, who "staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief, but was strong in faith, giving glory to God."

Mrs. Johnston stated her earnest desire to have a "heart-to-heart talk," with the workers present, encouraging them in the present crisis to recall that "strong and simple faith, with persistent labor, will accomplish wonders in God's moral kingdom."

The members of the C. G. I. T. group had been specially invited to join with the auxiliary for the gathering, and a number availed themselves of the opportunity of hearing Mrs. Johnston's address.

The auxiliary is but recently organized, and already the outlook, from a financial and membership standpoint, is most encouraging.

Women's Institute.

The annual meeting of the East Durham Women's Institute was held in the Town Hall on Friday at 2.30 p.m., the retiring President, Mrs. T. A. Skitch of Bailieboro, being in the chair.

Delegates from five out of the eight branches were present, and in spite of the intense heat an interesting and important business session took place.

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Skitch welcomed the delegates and expressed her pleasure that so many were in attendance when weather conditions were so trying. The excellent work being accomplished by the various branches of the district was favorably commented on by the President, who particularly commended the assistance given charitable institutions and objects by more than one of the branches. While not neglecting local work for home and community, the wider outlook which took in needy causes at distant points, resulted beneficially, Mrs. Skitch felt assured, by broadening the sympathies of the members and making a richer moral tone evident in the organizations.

Sidewalks and street lights for rural communities, with sign-boards at the entrances to a number of the villages, the maintenance of community halls, circulating libraries, social gatherings and public entertainments were among the improvements and activities carried on under institute auspices throughout the district, as revealed in the report of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Eakins. Mention should also be made of assistance given the schools in some instances, equipment for preparing hot lunches at the noon hour, and also for healthful recreational periods having been provided through the generosity of the local institute.

The financial report showed all the branches in good standing, each one having a fair balance on hand with which to begin the activities of the ensuing year. Bailieboro raised $.61.20 last year; Bethany, $717.19; Garden Hill, $198.55; Elizabethville, $62.60; Mount Pleasant, $108.85; Millbrook, $667.50; Charlecote, $74.41.

These amounts include the balance on hand at the beginning of the year and the expense figures are not given. Most of the branches provide plants for the members, the Millbrook branch buying those set out round the soldiers' memorial, and also the wire fence which protects the flowers once they are in place.

Some discussion took place relative to the entertainment of the speaker who comes annually to address the institutes of the district, and it was resolved to continue the present arrangement of having the delegate remain in Millbrook each night, going out from this central point on her round of visits.

On motion, Mrs. T. G. Sowden of Elizabethville and Miss Pearl Burnham filled the Secretary's and President's chairs, respectively, while the election of officers was proceeded with. The following is the list for 1925-26:

President—Mrs. T. A. Skitch, Bailieboro.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. Wood, Bailieboro.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Millbrook.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Millbrook.

District Director—Mrs. A. Muldrew, Elizabethville.

Auditors—Mrs. R. J. McKnight and Mrs. W. Armstrong.

Directors of Brancnes—Bailieboro, Miss L. Jackson; Millbrook, Mrs. R. J. McKnight; Cavan, (not sent in); Mount Pleasant, Mrs. C. Morden; Bethany, Mrs. W. McCartney; Garden Hill, Mrs. S. Gray; Elizabethville, Miss V. Blanchard; Charlecote, Mrs. S. Sculthorpe.

The financial report of the district showed a balance of $74.64 on hand, and the President, on resuming the chair, urged that the branches consider, at their earliest meeting, some manner of spending this money so that each benefit equally. The Executive will consider all plans submitted and come to some definite decision at its September meeting.

On motion, it was decided to ask each branch to send a delegate to the annual convention held at Toronto, probably in November, this plan to supersede the usual arrangement of sending one delegate to represent the district at this important gathering. Each branch is thus assured of having a detailed report of any helpful suggestion gleaned from the Provincial convention.

The benefit of working unselfishly and harmoniously together in the local institutes, avoiding unkind criticism and aiming at securing the most helpful results from the monthly meetings, was stressed by the President in her concluding remarks before the meeting was dismissed with the National Anthem.

UNVEIL MONUMENT BEWDLEY FAMILY

Hundreds of People Attend Ceremony—Rev. D. S. K. Byrne Promoter.

MILLBROOK, June 9.—The unveiling of an "Historic Monument" at Bewdley on Sunday afternoon made that village the mecca for scores of cars, hundreds of people coming, many of them from a considerable distance, to be present for the ceremony.

Rev. D. S. K. Byrne, whose birthplace was at Bewdley, and who is rather widely known because of his claim to being heir of a large American estate, has already erected two monuments in the neighborhood at his personal expense, one at Port Hope, and the other at Kidd's Corners, both a tribute of gratitude to the memory of Joseph Scriven, author of the well-known hymn, "What a Friend We Have In Jesus" who gave practical, Christian assistance to Mr .Byrne in his boyhood years.

The monument unveiled on Sunday is in the burial plot of the Kidd family, in the little cemetery which crowns the hillside back of the white, frame church.

His Honor H. A. Ward, K.C., of Port Hope, was chairman, and music was furnished by the Port Hope Citizens' Band, under the leadership of Mr. L. F. Unit, and by the orchestra of the Christian Workers' Tabernacle, Toronto, where Rev. Mr. Kidd Byrne held evangelistic services during the past winter.

The monument itself was draped in a large Union Jack, and for the convenience of speakers, and musicians, an open tent was put up immediately in front of the plot where the ceremony of unveiling was to take place. A rug was spread on the grass, and chairs were provided for as many as could be conveniently seated under the awning, the protection from the burning sun being gratefully appreciated.

Dr. Byrne has a summer home at Bewdley, and a luncheon for officials only, was held at his cottage at the noon hour, the march to the cemetery taking place from this point at 2.30 p.m.

Knows Facts.

In his opening remarks, Judge Ward explained, "I am present today at the request of my old friend, Dr. Byrne, whom I knew as a boy, and I am glad to be here on that account."

Dr. Byrne, the speaker said, had once rendered a very great service to a wealthy man, Dr. William G Byrne, of Pittsburgh, Ohio, and had been requested to take the place of the latter's daughter, who was dying, thus becoming heir to one-third of the estate, and appointed one of the executor's as well.

"I have been associated with Dr. Byrne since that time (1898), and I wish to pay tribute to his dogged perseverance in trying to bring this estate into his own hands." The mother and son shared equally with Dr. Byrne in the property, and were the other two executors, but absolute proof was forthcoming that the widow and her boy lost their lives on the ill-fated "Empress of Ireland," leaving Dr. Byrne the sole heir to the large estate, which is situated in various parts of the world.

"I know all the ins and outs of the matter, because I have access to all the papers connected therewith, and I believe Dr. Byrne will eventually come into full possession."

"You have practical knowledge that Dr. Byrne takes loving care of his dead, for you have only to look around you and see that he is spending his money to beautify their last resting-places so that there is no reason for him to be ashamed. I believe him to be a man of sincere religious convictions, and that the whole neighborhood will be benefited, since he will spend his money freely to advantage the village from whence he came, his good heart prompting such action."

The hymn, "Rescue the Perishing," was sung, and the chairman then called upon Rev. D. S. Kidd Byrne, who spoke on, "A Living Memorial,—A Sign Between Thine Eyes", basing his remarks, which were an earnest appeal for Christian living, on Exodus 13: 8-9: "This is done because of that which the Lord did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt. And it shall be for sign unto thee, upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the Lord's law may be in thy mouth."

A silent tribute to his mother, "who gave her life to rescue me from the flames which destroyed our humble home', was paid by Dr. Byrne who stood with bowed head at her graveside while the band played softly, "In the Christian's Home in Glory."

Mr. Dougherty, of Toronto, sang "The Holy City", and Rev. R. J. Hall, also from Toronto, gave a stirring evangelistic address from the text, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The story of the rescue of the millionaire's daughter, Lucy Byrne, who had fallen into a life of shame, and who was converted under the influence of Or. Byrne (then Rev. David Kidd), after the latter had encountered the unfortunate girl in a Chicago restaurant, was briefly outlined during Mr. Hall's address.

The ceremony of unveiling was performed by Mr. J. D. Bradford of Toronto, a son of Dr. Byrne's legal adviser in that city. With a few well-chosen remarks, Dr. Bradford prefaced his action of drawing the cord which released the flag, and gave the public full view of the granite shaft. Immediatey afterward, Dr. Dougherty sang, "He wipes the tear from every eye," and the benediction was pronounced, all remaining standing, however, until hymn of world-wide fame, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," was sung, the band furnishing the music.

Unable To Attend.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, M.P., who was announced in the press as the one to perform the unveiling ceremony, sent the following telegram: "I do not knw how I can possibly be at Bewdley on June 7. Arrangements were made by Mrs. Gordon I did not know of, and it would upset plans I had in mind too much."

The monument is a shaft of two-tone granite, on white base, and bears inscriptions on its upper part to the memory of the donor's first wife, Mary Ann Johnston, who died in 1892; to three children who passed away in infancy, and to a son, Clarence E. Kidd, who reached the age of twenty-four years, and whose death from flu in 1918 was feelingly referred to by his father during his address of the afternoon. On the fourth side the inscription is, 'In memory of William G. Byrne, Senior, who died at sea, near Montevideo, September 14, 1908, aged 77 years. Also his wife, Lucy S. Francis, aged 65 years, and their son, William, aged 47 years, drowned on the Empress of Ireland disaster, May 29, 1914. Lucy William Byrne, their daughter, died at White Springs, Florida, July 6, 1908, aged 31 years. My Benefactors, Rev. D. S. K. Byrne.

The substantial base has on one side the hymn, "In the Christian's Home in Glory," as transcribed by Joseph Scriven, and on another side a copy of the legal deed by which David S. Kidd changed his name to Byrne.

Unionist and Non-Concurring Members of Society Held Last Gathering.

NORWOOD, June 8.—The last meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Young Women's Auxiliary was held on Friday evening, June 5th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Webster. This society of young women was organized five and a half years ago and has since organization been doing a splendid work

After the vote on church union was taken the Unionist and non-concurring members decided unanimously to stay together and carry on until June 10 and this meeting was the closing one. The program opened with devotional exercises followed by a solo rendered by Miss M. Clare. This was followed by a paper on Korea by Miss Burgess and a reort of the Perterborough Presbyterial held in Cobourg on May 27 and 28 given by the delegate, Miss Stella Burgess. Instrumental numbers were by Miss Wanda Frost and Miss Jean Tedford. The autographed quilt made by the society was auctioned off during the evening. Eleven auto loads were present. After the meeting was over refreshments were served by the hostess. The girls much appreciated the many kindnesses shown to them by Mrs. Webster and voiced their sentiments by a hearty vote of thanks.

ROME FALLS AGAIN.

ROME, June 9.—The crossword puzzle craze is now at its height here, and several firms have posted notices prohibiting employees from working on the brain teasers during working hours.

IT'S DIFFERENT IN JAPAN.

TOKIO, June 8.—Mrs. Yumiko Ikeda, beautiful wife of a young engineer, tried the new freedom theory for women and failed. She left her home to obtain work as an "extra" in a movie studio. Almost overnight, because of her ability and beauty, she became a star.

But then her troubles began. Her friends and relatives, instead of congratulating her sent her threatening letters and said she had disgraced her husband. After two weeks as a star, she returned to her home.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burto

THE STORY SO FAR:

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling young lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes. . . but no work or children!

She refused to cook or keep house, and hires Ranghild Swanson to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she swamps Dick with debts for her clothes and a new automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with an out-of-work actor, Stanley Wayburn. She sees him constantly. Finally Wayburn is offered a job in New York as leading man for a Russian actress, Sonya Chotek. He needs money. Gloria lends him $200 of Dick's money, which she gets from his secretary, Miss Briggs. She tells Miss Briggs she needs the money for the house.

Dick is ill with pneumonia and almost dies. When he recovers, Dr. John Seymour sends him away for a long rest. Gloria refuses to go along, because Dick's mother, whom she hates, is going.

As soon as they leave town, Gloria sets out for New York. She goes straight to Wayburn. But he spurns her, telling her that he has just married Sonya Chotek. Then Gloria goes to Kit Cameron, a friend of hers who is a chorus girl, to ask her to help her out. But Kit's manager refused to give Gloria a place in the chorus.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

For a week Gloria dragged herself up and down Broadway hunting for a job.

She went from one manager to an, other just as fast as she could go.

She started out with Bob Lingard whose show, "Frills," was breaking all records on Broadway. And she ended with the manager of a cheap burlesque show on Fourteenth street.

It was the manager of the burlesque show who told her what was wrong with her.

"Now, listen, kid," he said to her, shoving his brown derby hat back on his head. "You're pretty but you ain't go nothin'! Some's tall and lean, some's short and fat—but they gotta have somethin'. You can't be just a cake o' ice, and get away with it in the show business!"

Gloria went away puzzled. What did the man mean . . . that she was a cake of ice?' Perhaps he meant that she wasn't a type, like Kit Caemeron . . . that she looked like any other pretty girl.

So she tried to look "different." She brushed all the wave out of her hair, and plucked her eyebrows, until they were only a thin black line.

But no one had a job for her. Her money was all gone. She sold her rings and her wrist-watch.

Every morning she would start out, with a prayer in her heart. And every night she would drag herself back to her hotel room . . . tired and dirty and discouraged, sick at heart.

. . . They said that Broadway was paved with broken hearts! Well, hers was one of them, Gloria told herself bitterly as the days went by.

Why couldn't she land a job, she wondered.

Wasn't she really as pretty as Dick had always said she was? Was he the only man in the world who could see her beauty?

To all these theatrical men was she just one more stage-struck girl?

. . . It began to look that way to Gloria.

She wondered if she dared go back to Dick, who loved her. . . . Oh, what a fool she had been ever to leave him!

But would he take her back? Oh! Would he?

She sat one night at her window looking down into the moth-brown twilight of West Eleventh street. She rubbed her face and neck with cold cream, to remove the grime of New York from her soft white skin. She polished her nails.

Tears filled her eyes and ran down her cheeks, making little furrows in the cold cream on them. The sobs that she had been choking back for days, burst from her, suddenly.

"Oh, what am I going to do? What am I going to do?" she wailed over and over. Despair covered her like a cloak of darkness.

It was at that moment that the telephone rang.

Gloria sat up and looked at it, curiously.

Who could be calling her?—Stan Wayburn? Kit Cameron? — Probably only the hotel manager, to ask her why she didn't pay her bill! It was overdue. . . .

"Hello," she said wearily.

A man's deep voice answered her.

"Bob Lingard speaking," he said briefly.

Bob Lingard! The producer of "Frills"! . . . Gloria's heart gave a wild leap.

She had left her telephone number with Lingard a week ago. But she had neve expected to hear from him again. And now—this!

He wanted her to go out to dinner with him, to talk business, he said.

"To talk business! That means a job!" Gloria laughed to herself, as she left the telephone. She danced around the room for very lightness of heart.

She smiled joyously into her mirror as she dressed.

"Listen and don't say much . . . that's the way to make a hit with a man!" she knew. And she'd make a hit with Lingard that night if she never opened her mouth!

Gloria rubbed the tiniest bit of rouge on her cheeks, and dusted her nose with powder. She didn't want to look "made-up."

She had learned that the more fresh and a natural a girl was the more chance she had on Broadway. There were too many painted beauties there. They all looked alike. . . .

She was blooming like a half-opened rose when she met Lingard in the lobby of her little hotel at eight o'clock. She looked up at him shyly, and smiled her greeting.

Bob Lingard was a tall, heavy-set man with a bulldog jaw. His brown eyes bulged a little. In her secret soul, Gloria thought him repulsive.

But she did not flinch when he drew her arm through his. They stepped out into the warm May night.

"Whither away?" he asked pleasantly.

"Anywhere! I don't care where we go," Gloria cried gaily, recklessly. She was too excited to care! Too excited to think!

She simply couldn't believe that this man beside her was the great Bob Lingard, whose name was known from one end of the country to the other! Surely it must be a dream. . . .

"Well, then—we'll go to a place where we can have a private dining-room," Lingard said. "A place where we can talk. . . . I want to tell you about the new show I'm putting on next season, Miss Gordon."

He tucked her hand under his own on the driving wheel, as teh gray car slid into motion.

Gloria's head whirled. A new show! Was Lingard going to give her a job in it? . . . It sounded that way.

She leaned back and drew a sigh of happiness. The night wind lifted the little curls that edged her forehead. She closed her eyes. . . . She did see the queer, side-wise look that Lingard turned on her as she lay back against the soft leather cushion.

. . . Ah, this was something like it!—she thought.

To be rolling along in this purring car with a man who could give her a career!

She felt she was stepping into a new world. She sighed with the sudden joy of living. . . . This was the sunrise after the darkness of the last two weeks!

"Queer little room," she murmured.

She felt unreal . . . as if the were a part of a dream. As if the bright little room with its mirrors and its red carpet was the background of a dream.

But the food, when it came, was real enough. Gloria ate greedily. She was half-starved after her week of coffee and sandwiches.

The dinner came to an end at last. Lingard leaned back in his chair and stirred the highball the waiter had mixed for him. He was silent. Gloria felt uneasy under his steady gaze.

She had never looked lovelier in her life than she did that night.

Her face was thinner . . . worn down to the last expression of its girlish comeliness by the misery of the last two weeks. And against the pearl of her skin, her mouth was like a red nasturtium.

Lingard leaned forward and took her hands, where they lay on the table-cloth, in his. He stroked the silky palms.

"You look like an old sweetheart of mine back in the little Ohio town where I grew up, Gloria Gordon," he said suddenly. "Ever since you came into my office the other day, I've been thinking about you. Your face has stuck in my mind for the last four or five days . . . and I see a lot of girls in four or five days."

There was a long pause. Then Lingard went on.

"This new show of mine is called 'Morning Glory'," he said. "I want to get together a brand-new chorus for it . . . none of the girls that Broadway has seen before. I want new faces, faces fresh as morning glories for it. . . ."

He stopped and lighted a thick cigar.

"I think that, with three months' training, I could make you into a pretty nifty chorus girl. But you'd have to work, and work hard!" he said. "How about it?"

Gloria was scarcely breathing. She trembled with excitement.

"I've made many an actress out of a nobody in my time," Lingard went on. "A good show and plenty of advertising will make any girl a star, over-night. All she needs is the looks . . . and you've got 'em, believe me! I could always fall for a redhead, kid!"

His voice grew suddenly thick. He got up from his chair. With the eyes of a dove that watches the approach of a serpent, Gloria watched Lingard come around the table toward her.

He put one of his big hands under her chin, tilting her face up toward him. Gloria struggled hard not to be afraid. After all, what could happen. . . . ?

"I'm going to put you across as the livest chorus-girl in America," Lingard said. "How about it?"

It took all of Gloria's courage to smile up at him. But she did—ravishingly.

Gloria tore herself away from him.

Lingard laughed. He moved toward her . . . towering.

"Too good to live, aren't you, honey?" he asked cheerfully. "That's what they all say! . . . What do you think the world's made of? What do you think I'm giving you a job in my best show for? For the joy of doing good in the world? You make me laugh!"

He seized her in his arms again, almost lifting her from her feet.

They struggled together, bumping against the table. Gloria made a wild sweep with her hand, and picked up Lingard's highball glass. She leaned back and dashed it in his face.

Instantly he let her go, his face dripping.

"You little fiend," he roared, "what are you trying to do?"

He took out his handkerchief and wiped his face. His cheek was bleeding where the breaking glass had cut it.

He was out of breath, and furiously angry. But his eyes were puzzled. He couldn't understand Gloria's attack on him. His simple code was that you offered a service to the woman you fancied . . . and that she paid.

He rang the bell for the waiter. Then he walked over the window.

"Get the lady a taxi," he said, without turning around.

As Gloria followed the waiter out to the street, she knew that her last chance to star on Broadway was gone, forever! She was utterly beaten. . . . But suddenly she didn't care. She wanted nothing but home . . . . . and Dick. They seemed a million miles away! Her own room! The sights she knew! Home!

The Gloria who unlocked the door of her own house a few days later was not the defiant young creature who had left it three weeks before.

The old Gloria would have come swinging up the steps, singing a bit of rag-time. This one crept into the house wearily. The grandfather's clock in the hall struck the hour as she came in.

Gloria looked up at it. She had learned a thing or two since she had last heard the striking of that clock!

She looked around the corner of the door into the living room. There in his arm-chair, sat Dick!

"I knew it was you," he said.

"Dick," Gloria said. "I've come home to you!"

She took no step toward him—only looked at him with unhappy eyes, wondering what he would do or say.

Dick gave a short laugh. "So I see," he said.

There was no warmth in his voice.

All the way home from New York, Gloria had longed for this moment. Her heart had sung an old nursery rhyme to the noise of the train. . . .

"Home again, home again!
Jiggedy Jig!"

She had thought of home as safe harbor. She had wanted to throw herself on Dick's breast—to sob out all her heart-break and shame to him. For she was honestly ashamed of herself.

But Dick's coldness kept her away from him, against her own will. It was like a wall between them.

But neither Gloria's beauty nor her misery could touch Dick at that moment, or move him to pity.

"Come here a minute!" he said.

Gloria moved slowly into the room. She thought that he meant to take her in his arms, to tell her that he forgave her.

But he waved her into a little chintz-covered chair that stood across the hearth from him. Gloria sank into it.

"Oh, Dick, don't look at me as if you could murder me!" she pleaded. "Don't be mean to me! You wouldn't if you knew all I've been through."

Her sobs broke out afresh.

"Why, what happened to you? . . . Did Wayburn throw you down?" Dick asked coldly.

Gloria knew that Dick wouldn't take her back if she told him the truth. So she lied.

"You thought I'd gone to New York to be with Stan?" she asked. "No, indeed. Although I did see him. . . ."

"Sure you saw him!" Dick broke in. "Sure you saw him! You know you followed him to New York. And I know it! So what's the use of lying? Stick to the truth!" His fist came down hard on the arm of his chair.

Gloria started. All right, she thought, she would tell him the truth! She'd let him have it, if that was what he wanted.

She told him almost all of it.

Her voice was low and flat, almost without feeling. Dick knew that what she was telling him was the ugly truth. Drop by drop she drank her misery.

She began with her visit to Wayburn's rooms. She ended with the story of her struggle with Lingard in the private dining room where she had gone with him.

Dick clenched his hands.

"You! Going to such a place with a man like Lingard!" he said. "Letting him look you over, to see if you'd do for a chorus-girl in his cursed show. . . . You! My wife!"

He groaned.

"Well, I'll say this for Lingard—he was crazy about my looks," Gloria told him complacently. "And he was very nice at first. But when he got fresh . . . well, I just smashed a glass right in his face! I never was so frightened in all my born days . . ." She shivered. Her little shoulders shook.

At that Dick rose and went to her. She laid her head on his breast. "Don't hate me," she begged.

But he turned away.

"Run upstairs and wash your face while I make some coffee for you," he said gruffly.

"Why can't Ranghild make it? What are you paying her for?" she asked.

"Ranghild left a week ago," Dick answered. "I figured that you were gone for good, you see. And besides, we can't afford a housemaid any more. . . . You just won't get it into your head that we're poor, will you, Glory?"

APSLEY SUFFERS MANY ACCIDENTS

Animals Killed Mysteriously and Several Persons Injured in Week.

APSLEY, June, 9—The past week has been an unlucky one for this district in the matter of misfortune and accidents more or less serious, and unusual. Charles Tanner of Chandos early in the week lost a cow. It had been missing for two days, and was eventually found with a broken back, having evidenty fallen from a precipitous rock about twenty feet. It was still alive, but was quickly dispatched when its injuries were ascertained.

Duncan Brown of Apsley had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse. It was found dead on Wednesday morning in the barn on the farm where it ond other horses were pasturing, and was presumably struck by lightning during the storm on Tuesday night.

Mrs, Harry Everett of Chandos, suffered a severe and painful accident on Saturday morning, being kicked in the face by a calf. Besides a severe cut on the brow, and cheek, her nose was split open She was brought to Apsley when Dr. Shepherd dressed her injuries. The same afternoon Rub Waiters of McThuen was brought to the surgery in a collapsed condition, suffering from injuries sustained in the sawing mill while cuttings logs. Part of a rivot flew off and struck him in the face and eye. It was feared that the sight of one eye was destroyed, but hopes are entertained that it may be saved.

During Saturday evening, Harry Everett was returning home from Peterborough, when about a mile north of Apsley he had a head on collision at a bad turn of the road with Harry Tanner. Luckily none of the occupants were hurt, but both cars were badly damaged, and had to be brought to the village for repairs.

A.Y.P.A. Outing

A delightful outing was experienced by the A.Y.P.A. on Friday evening which took the form of a Moonlight Excursion on Moon Lake Mr. C. Hawkes' steam boat was chartered, and the party headed by Mr. and Mrs. Spence went oboard at Couch's Landing at 8. p.m. After cruising couple of hours a stop was made at an island where supper was served, consisting of potato salad, sausages and coffee, after, which the trip was resumed, finally returning to the landing at 1 a.m. with perfect weather conditions and brilliant moonlight, and after tropical heat of the day, the outing was voted the most enjoyable the A.Y.P.A. had ever participated in.

Heat Wave

The last three days have seen high temperatures, official readings of the theomometer being: Friday, 90, Saturday, 90, Sunday 93. The hottest day last year was August It with only 80.

The library of St. Georges's Institute was lately augmented through the kindness of Mrs. Quatermaine of Peterborough who sent a most acceptable and appreciated gift of books and magazines.

The Rev. J. W. Ogden was in Clydesdale on Sunday conducting the funeral service of Mrs. James Trotter who died on Friday. Her husband passed away only one month ago, and the district loses two of the pioneers of the township in their deaths.

PARADOX.

The palm tree is over the grass,
The sky is over the tree;
I am over my horse,
My sombrero is over me.
(Paraguayan folk song in June Poetry.)

Sure, the grass is under the tree,
But I wonder, oh, I wonder,
Why my underwear is over me
And my overshoes are under.

FEAR BOY LOST ON LAKE HURON

Stiff Gale Destroys All Hope For Rescue of James McCoy.

HEAVY SEA.

FORT HURON, Mich., June 9.—(Canadian Press.) — A stiff gale blowing up suddenly yesterday afternoon over Lake Huron just about dispelled any last lingering hope for the rescue of 13 year old James McCoy, of Harbor Beach, who was given a life preserver and thrown from a sinking rowboat on Sunday by his father, John McCoy. The storm came up about 3 p.m. It whipped a tremendous sea into action and was accompanied by electrical disturbances and a severe downpour of rain.

MISSING AIRMEN DIED IN DESERT

Bodies of Four Italians, Who Were Lost in March, Have Been Found.

ENGINE TROUBLE

CAIRO, June 9 (Canadian Press). —The search for four men who have been missing since they flew over the Italo-Egyptian frontier in a giant Italian airplane early in March ended yesterday, with the discovery of four bodies in the desert between the Sellum and Siwa oases. The war ministry has delegated a commission of officers and doctors, to be accompanied by two Italian officers, to proceed to the spot where the bodies were found and definitely establish the cause of the deaths, which were apparently due to starvation.

The airplane used for the flight over the frontier country between Egypt and Eritrea, was found on March 15 by search parties sixty-five miles due south of Bir Rabia in the western deserts, miles away from caravan routes.

Apparently the four passengers, one of them a high officer in the Italian Air Force, were forced to land owing to engine trouble. They evidently endeavored to find their way to a caravan route, but their tracks were lost in the sands.

Great Britain offers to place at the disposal of France and Belgium in order to guarantee security of the Rhine frontier in case of attack, the entire British military, naval and air forces, according to this report. The guarantee does not extend to Germany's eastern frontier between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

GRADUATION OF NURSES' CLASS

Nicholls Hospital Graduates Centre of Ceremony at George Street.

PLEASANT EVENING.

The Graduation Exercises of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses took place last evening in the George street Methodist Church, which was well filled for the occasion. Mr. E. A. Peck presided, and presented diplomas and medals to the graduates, who wore white uniforms and carried roses. Rev. W. Harold Young gave the address of the evening, and Dr. Ray Scott read Dr. Yelland's message to the graduating class, based on the ethics of their profession. An enjoyable musical programme was in charge of Mr. J. H. Renwick.

A telegram received from G. N. Gordon, K. C., M.P., was read:

"Rev. W. Harold Young, pastor of George street Methodist church, Peterboro:

"I am pleased that Peterboro is honoring the graduate nurses of the Nicholls Hospital this evening. There is no profession which is doing more for the upbuilding of Canada than those nurses who are daily giving their care and attention toward the effort of renewing health and bringing back to strength those broken down by sickness and disease. To the Nicholls Hospital nurses-in-training I extend my heartiest congratulations."

The musical programme included two organ numbers by Miss Cora Smith, Halsey's "Berceuse," and Nevin's "Marche Nuptiale," a vocal solo, "Out on the Deep," sung by Vaughn Walker; a vocal quartette, sung by Messrs. Jones, Lillow, Renwick and Thorpe; a reading by Mrs. F. McNeeley, and a vocal solo by Miss Daisy Murray.

Presentation of prizes for proficiency was made by Dr. J. A. Morgan to the Misses Hazel W. Little, Garden Hill; Jessie I. Paul, Peterboro; Cora Parker, Norwood; Daisy Metcalfe, Peterboro and Helen Russell, of Napanee.

Life of Sacrifice.

At the present moment I find myself vividly reminded of the truth of that old and classic verse composed once to comfort those who found a somewhat chilly welcome in life—

Though in this world you're left out in the cold
Don't complain of your lot,
'Twere worse, when the gates of hereafter unfold,
To be left in the hot.

If any conceivable circumstance could be expected to enforce the essential truth of those lines upon us, the temperature of this evening must do so. You will not think me lacking in esteem for the Nicholls Hospital or blind to the importance of this occasion if I make my remarks decidedly brief.

First of all let me extend by heartiest congratulations to those who are to-night completing their course of training in the splendid nursing profession. A well known comic strip in the papers depicts from time to time the high esteem of the Hon. Mr Jiggs for nurses—and Mr. Jiggs but speaks for the rest of mankind in that attitude. Those of us who have the opportunity to observe the difficult and exacting work which they do, and still more those of us who have been the objects of their careful ministrations, can never have anything in our hearts but admiration for them. Now that you ladies have come safely through the arduous course of your training, now that you are in a position to wear the coveted pin, put your white cap on at any angle you may wish and bob your hair if you choose, we congratulate you, and wish for you many happy years of service, and success in the profession you have chosen to make your own.

Such an occasion as this cannot fail to remind us of the dignity and worth of lives in the heart of which is enthroned the ideal of service to mankind. Few people, I imagine, have ever taken up the profession of nursing for selfish ends, and if they have done so they have not long retained their enthusiasm for it. It is in very essence the living out of the spirit of service to mankind, of easing the misery of human bodies, of making the lot of men and women a little easier in the very hour of distress and helplessness. Have you ever stood beside a river swollen with the floods of the early spring and tried to imagine to yourself what song the river is singing as it flows along. There are two songs it may be singing. The first is the song of self-seeking. "Here I flow along," it may be murmuring to itself, "gathering to myself all that I can. Rivulets, brooks that sing their way through the sunny meadows, rich soil of the river bank, I sweep them all into my arms as I go, ever growing deeper and more powerful. All things are tributary to my greatness." That is one song the river may be singing. The second is the song of self-giving. "Here I flow along enriching all the country side through which I pass. If I receive from others, it is that I may the more improve the valley. My moisture I give to the soil to make it richer; my beauty I lend to the landscape to make it lovelier; my waters I return to the clouds every hour that refreshing rain may descend upon the earth, and at the last I shall pour myself in oblivion and self-forgetfulness into the bosom of the ocean for the enriching and refreshing of its mighty deeps." The river may be singing two songs—that of self-giving or that of self-seeking. As of a river so of life, but of life at its best only one thought is possible. Life at its best is the incarnate spirit of service for the well-being of mankind, the resolute endeavor to make the world a better place, and increase the sum of happiness in the hearts of men. It is an old old thought, of course, that achieved its finest exemplification two thousand years ago in Galilee in the life of a man called Jesus, but though old it is ever true, and to stand in the presence, as we do to-night, of those who have in a particular sense set about to live out that principle of living is to be reminded vividly of it again.

Parable of Life.

Nor dare we turn away in disdain from the prospect of even humble service in ordinary things. There is an old Jewish legend that tells of the completion of the great temple which King Solomon built in Jerusalem. When the work was done the king proclaimed a great feast for those who had taken leading parts in the endeavor. The feast was prepared, the guests were gathered, and the festivities were about to begin when suddenly there was a disturbance at the door, and a rough, uncouth figure burst through the guards to join the revellers. The king was quick with his rebuke: "Who are thou that dost come so violently and all unbidden to my feast," he demanded. To which the answer was given: "I come with violence, O king, because the guards sought to restrain me, but I come not unbidden, for thou hast proclaimed a feast for the chief workers on the temple, and I am come to enjoy it with the rest." "Who are thou, I know thee not," cried the king. "Are there any here who know this fellow?" And he that had carved the cherubin made answer and said: "He is not of the cutters of stone, we know him not." And he that had wrought skilfully in the inlaying of the roof with gold said: "He is not of the artificers of precious metals, we know him not." And he that had labored to raise the walls, cried: "He is not of those who pile stone on stone till the building is complete, we know him not." And those who had placed the timbers in the roof cried: "We who are cunning in cedar know not this man, he is not of us." Then the king turned to the fellow and said, "Why should I not now condemn thee to death—these the chief workmen on my temple proclaim thee an impostor. What hast thou to say?" And the man turned to the one who had carved the cherubin, and asked: Who made the tools with which you cut the stone? and he answered the blacksmith. And he demanded of the workers in precious metals: Who made the instruments with which you fashioned beautiful ornaments for my lord the king? and they answered, the blacksmith. And of the workers in wood, he asked: Who made the tools with which you carved the cedars of lebanon into form and beauty, and they answered the blacksmith. Then turning to the king he said: These men have said truly, I am not of them—I am their superior. I am the blacksmith. Without my faithful humble labor first, their achievements could not be. And the king replied: Take thou the seat of greatest honor on my right hand—it is thy due, for by thy faithfulness in little things, the greater has been possible.

It is after all, a parable of life that that old legend speaks. Service, translated into the common little duties of the common ordinary day—this is the path to happiness and greatness alike. To-night, as we honor those whose feet are by deliberate choice set in that pathway, may we not catch a little of their spirit for ourselves, and afresh resolve to make the spirit that is theirs a larger factor in our daily lives.

MAKING THE GROOM WAIT.

PAPA LOVE MAMA? MAMA LOVE PAPA?

My Wife Is Never Around to Greet Me When I Come Home

In plays and books the little woman is always waiting eagerly for her man and rushes to the door to throw her arms around his neck.

But in real life—my real life, that is—she's just as likely to be out at a card party or downtown on a shopping expedition.

Even if she is at home, the chances are ten to one that she's in the back of the linen closet, counting towels and sheets, or else she's in the midst of cutting out a shirt-waist somewhere upstairs.

In either case, she couldn't be disturbed by running to any door to meet any husband who happened to be arriving.

I have to hunt her up, instead. And all I get is a kiss from a mouth half full of pins or a greeting that's sandwiched in between a count of pilowcases.

I hate to admit it, but I'm forced to believe that the homecoming of the husband is just one of the minor events of the day around our house.

This Minute Fad

NEW YORK, June 9.—(United Press).—

This moments' joy may be tomorrow's sorrow
For what's worn today, becomes a "ford" tomorrow!

With warm days many women are wearing chamoisette or silk gloves in preference to kid. Most popular colors are light tones of tan or gray.

The younger element in New York is wearing blond shoes and hosiery. Both blond satin and kid shoes are used for street wear and hosiery matches shoes.

Several women are carrying canes One sees them on the street with mannish suits and at teatime at the hotels worn with gowns of Directoire type. Canes are of mannish type rather than colorful.

Hand-painted dresses are shown in the shops on the Avenue. These are not batiks, but beautifully hand-painted designs on evening and afternoon frocks.

Turtle-necked sweaters are vying with V-neck. Opinion had it that smart women prefer the turtle-necked types, whereas the cheaply gowned women prefers the lower necked models. Turtle-necks with the side opening, made of silk jersey or cobweb in pastel shades, are most in demand and they are usually worn with pleated flannel skirts.

Coats and frocks with ripple backs are agian to come in vogue. At present there is no attempt toward the reinstatement of the bustle, since the fulness begins just above the knees. However, we'll soon be reversing our fulness from the front to the rear.

Wide, transparent horsehair hats are frequently worn on the Avenue these afternoons. Brown is the popular shade and trimming almost a minus quantity. Models recently seen are not extremely short in the rear but slope off gradually from front to rear.

Stockings trimmed in colored rosebuds below the knee were seen on three women, a girl in a small candy shop, an elderly would-be flapper and a negress. This is a pretty good proof they will not be chosen by smart women.

GROVE SCHOOL WON AT CRICKET

Defeated Team From Upper Canada College by Inning and Eight Runs.

SECOND VICTORY

Upper Canada College boys were the guests of Lakefield Preparatory School on Friday and Saturday June 5 and 6, occasion being the return cricket match which commenced on Saturday, May 16, was won by 21 runs by the Lakefield boys, who were again victorious by an innings and 8 runs, but it must be said for the losers that they have been accustomed to playing on matting, and often seemed to find it difficult to time the ball on the slower turf wicket.

Lakefield batted first, sending in Loosemore and Barnard, who were opposed by Thompson and Gundy. The score opened with two byes and runs came very slowly, both bowlers keeping an excellent length. A fine drive by Barnard brought the score to 10 when Barnard gave a difficult chance to square leg which was not accepted. With the score at 20 and his own at 11, Barnard was well caught by Smith in the deep field, the partnership with Loosemore having lasted thirty minutes. 1 wicket for 20. Fawcett came next and Gundy replaced Ely with the ball. Loosemore was unfortunate in being caught in the slips by Ely from a fast rising ball rom Thompson; his score was only 5 but his innings as usual, was very valuable. Rainnie joined Fawcett and Powell took the ball from Ely. Fawcett drove Powell's second delivery to the boundary, and shortly after, Thompson bowled Rainnie for 5. 38 for 3 wickets. Flick came next and livened things up, one mighty hit endangering the lives of the occupants of the chicken pen. Fawcett, after making 13, fell a victim to a "shooter" from Ely, and Flick was bowled by Thompson for 9. 54 for 5 wickets. Runs then came very slowly; Pullen, after making 3, was run out owing to a misunderstanding with his partner Robertson, and the Lakefield innings closed for 66 runs.

Cameron and Smith opened the innings for U.C.C. to the bowling of Barnard and Fawcett. Misfortune quickly overtook them, three wickets falling for 2 runs. Cameron and Smith being bowled and Ely well caught by Young at square leg. Runs came slowly and wickets fell fast. At the luncheon interval the score was 9 runs for 7 wickets. On resuming play Thompson (not out, 10) and Morrow (5) managed to keep the side in for a short time, but the innings closed for 26 runs, and it should be noted that owing to the efficiency of the Lakefield wicket keeper, no byes were recorded, and the fielding throughout was good.

Going in again U.C.C. only very slightly improved upon their previous score and five minutes before time, the side was out for 32, leaving the Lakefield team winners by an innings and 8 runs.

U.C.C. boys seemed to thoroughly enjoy the trip, and Wilton, their captain, is to be congratulated on being the leader of a team of good sports.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

The Petes make their second invasion of Kingston tomorrow when they are billed to stack up against Joe Daley's squad in a twilight fixture. It should be a red-hot battle, for the Ponies will be in a fighting mood after Saturday's debacle, and will be out for revenge. The Petes, with four straight wins to their credit, are going into the struggle full of determination and hope to come back in undisputed possession of first place.

* * * * * * * * *

Oshawa is giving the Petes a chase in the matter of home runs by cracking out three circuit wallops Saturday. The home-run hitters so far this season are Harrison, Rose, Ross and Hall of Peterboro, Roddick, Breckenridge and Warde of Oshawa, Batstone of Kingston and Wicky Ross of Belleville.

* * * * * * * * *

Belleville are on the right path at last. They used a couple of youngsters Saturday, and Post, a graduate from the junior ranks, turned in a great card at second, contributing the feature play of the day.

* * * * * * * * *

There is a movement on foot in Kingston to apply for the reinstatement of Compeau, the ex-Pony shortstop, who after a trial by the Kitchener M. and O. team has been released, and is now on the shelf. The attempt will get nowhere, unless the amateur rules are a joke, for Compeau must have gone into the thing with his eyes open and cannot reasonably expect now that his excursion into professional ball can be pardoned by the amateur authorities. The moral is plain: Youngsters should hesitate a long time before taking the plunge, because there is no turning back afterward.

* * * * * * * * *

The appointment of M. M. (Bobby) Robinson of Hamilton to the Ontario Athletic Commission will be popular here. Bobby is an old Peterboro boy who made his start in the newspaper game in this city, and his long association with and interest in sport should make him a valuable commission.

* * * * * * * * *

It looks as if Halbert, the Ponies' shortstop, will be lucky if he hits his weight in the Central loop.

* * * * * * * * *

Although Belleville are the foot of the Central Ontario ladder, they will prove a strong attraction for the week-end game at Riverside Park, because of their habit of keeping their best ball for use against the Petes here. There must be something in the air at Riverside Park that arouses the Trunks' fighting spirit, for they are all ten-minute eggs in action on the stamping ground of the Petes. They came within an ace of beating Manager Johnston's squad here two weeks ago, and will doubtless be just as menacing on Saturday.

Offside Change Sure.

Amateur organizations in the old country are seeking to raise a strong opposition to the proposed alteration of the off-side law. The Isthmian League started the ball rolling and every amateur body and club in full membership with the F.A. has been asked to vote against any change, but theirs promises to be a futile effort because even though many old players are dead set against it the alteration is almost certain to be made. The older heads among the opposition maintain that only a little common sense is required to defeat the tactics exploited to jockey forwards offside and on their recent trip on the continent the Austrian players showed Notts County how easily it could be done.

ARE YOU TORTURED WITH ECZEMA?

Eczema, or Salt Rheum, as it is commonly called, is one of the most agonizing of all skin diseases.

The intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when the parts are exposed to heat, are almost unbearable and relief is greatly welcomed.

The most reliable and effective remedy for this trouble is

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Mrs. J. R. Johnson, R.R. No. 1, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled with eczema, and had that terrible itching and burning sensation, and could find no relief for it. Finally, I was advised to use B.B.B., and after my second bottle I began to see a great difference, and I can, now, advise anyone troubled as I was to use this wonderful remedy."

EXAMINER WON IN MERCANTILE LEAGUE BATTLE

SCORE WAS 6-4

The Examiner baseball players returned to their old form in last night's game against the Lock Works, giving Scates and Duggan airtight support and winning a hectic encounter 6-4.

Franks and Dugan were the star fielding performers for the winners. Franks played first like another Hap Harrison, grabbing off all kinds of hot grasscutters sent his way by the Lock Works stick artists. Dugan, across from him at the hot corner, turned in a whale of a game, cutting off what looked like sure hits several times. He was late in reaching the scene of battle but made up for delay by the wonderful performance he gave on his arrival.

Scates started in the box for the winners. He lasted two-thirds of an inning, when Manager Swanston decided he had enough. When he departed for the far regions of left field, yielding up the burden to Duggan, the Lockmakers had broken into his delivery for two runs and the bases were densely populated. One of the runners managed to get in, and from then until the sixth, Duggan kept them where no harm was done. Duggan allowed only one hit in the six and a third innings he pitched.

In the first and second innings the printers set up four runs on the scoreboard, two in each column. This gave them a one-run lead which looked safe until the sixth when two walks and one hit, the only hit off Duggan, gave them one run to tie up the game. The Examiner got right after Lefty Donnelly in the seventh and scored two runs. A double to left field by Collins in this inning was too much for Thorndyke, who permitted the ball to get away, and Collins didn't even hesitate until he crossed the pan with what proved to be the winning run. Another run was scored in the same inning for good measure.

The Lockmakers made a dangerous attempt to tie it up. They got the bases crowded with two out in the last of the seventh but Franks made a spectacular stop of a sizzling grounder and retired the batsman for the last out of the game.

The teams were:

Examiner—Collins, ss; Delahaye, c; Franks, 1b; Marchen, 2b; Duggan, lf, p; Dorrington, cf; Tedford, rf; Phillips, 3b; Dugan, 3b; Scates, p, rf.

Score by innings:
Examiner ..... 2 2 0 0 0 0 2—6
Lock Works ..... 3 0 0 0 0 1 0—4

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER THORON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

One point in golf that apparently is a constant source of bother to players is: How does the swing change with the different clubs? The swing doesn't change with any of them until the putter is drawn from the bag, but the manner of taking the clubs back does change some. Beginning with the driver the player should take this club back with the idea of sending it in back of him — not up so much. That is, don't lift it. The turning of the body forces it upward so the player's concern is to get it in back of him. Many golfers lift the club directly up with the hands. Instead, keep it down as it leaves the ball, then keep it down still more. Reach outward with the left arm—and keep the clubhead down. Do this slowly, observe the path of the club-head and see how it swings in back, which is correct for the wood.

SCOTSMAN WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Tommy Milligan Gains Decision Over Frattini for European Middleweight.

NOW HOLDS TO TITLES

LONDON, June 9.—Tommy Milligan, a Scotsman, last night took the middleweight pugilistic championship of Europe away from Bruno Frattini, the Italian titleholder, winning a twenty-round bout on points at Holland Park.

Milligan, who also holds the welterweight championship of Europe, piled up his points in the early stages of the bout, largely by skilful boxing. When it came to fierce fighting, the Italian, with superior strength, had much more power in his blows. He lacked the Scotsman's cleverness, however.

Milligan is considered by the boxing critics as having no equal at his weight in Great Britain. He has his mind set upon a trip to the United States to meet the best of the middleweights there.

BASEBALL SIMPLIFIED

What are the rights of the fielder and the baserunner relative to a batted ball?

The fielder always has the right of way when making a play on a batted ball. He must be given clearance by the baserunner at all times.

If a baserunner in any way comes into contact with a fielder making a play on a batted ball, he creates an interference. For this act he is ruled out. No bases can be run on such a play, except to make room for the batsman who is entitled to first base.

The baserunner can run as wide of the fielder as he sees fit in order to avoid interfering with him, unless he should have the ball in his hand waiting to make a touch play on the baserunner.

The moment the fielder makes a play on the ball, the baserunner must remain within the three-foot lines in advancing. If he avoids the fielder with the ball in his possession ready to make a touch play he can be called out for running out of line.

However, as long as the fielder is in the act of going after the ball, the baserunner can continue his course as he sees fit, just so that he does not come into contact with the fielder or by his actions, if he runs in front of the fielder, obscure his vision.

Puzzle Plays in Baseball

THE PLAY.

The bases are full and two are out. The batsman grounds sharply to the third baseman.

The runners are off with the pitch. The runner on third gets a much longer lead than the others. The third baseman gets the ball about three feet from third base and juggles it momentarily.

The runner coming up from second slides into third base and is touched out by the fielder, retiring the side. The runner on third had scored before the third out was made.

Did the run count? Was it a force play?

THE ANSWER.

It was a force play and the run did not count. No run can count on a play in which the third out is a force. This was the case here.

It makes no difference that the fielder touched the runner instead of the base, the general accepted way of making a force play.

A force play is created when base runners must vacate to make room for the batsman, who has hit the ball.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

THE HOODOO MAN.

Old Man Jinx relentlessly pursues Connie Mack.

After 10 years of patient waiting, Connie appeared ready to break into the select circle of the first division and remain there. Enter the jinx.

He probably will, despite the fact that injuries to star players are making the task far more difficult than it ordinarily would be.

First he lost one of his veteran pitchers, his only experienced southpaw, Fred Heimach. A dislocated shoulder put him out of the running.

This happened in spring training. He is still out and there is no telling when he will return or how effective he will be.

Just before the opening of the season Joe Hauser, Mack's hard-hitting first sacker, suffered a broken knee cap. At the time the doctors said he was out for the season.

Manager Mack was fortunate in digging up so capable a substitute as Poole for Hauser. He has helped greatly in the early success of the Mackmen.

Out in front after six weeks of play, it was apparent that the showing of the Athletics was no flash. Then came more trouble. It remains to be seen how serious it will be.

SERIOUS HANDICAP.

Take Walter Johnson from Washington and you deal that club a knockout blow. Remove Jack Bentley from the New York Giant's lineup and his absence will be severely felt. Eliminate Alexander from the Chicago Cubs and his passing will soon tell.

The Athletics recently suffered an even greater loss in Sam Gray, the pitching sensation of the majors to date. In winning his eighth straight game, Gray suffered a fractured thumb.

It is said that Gray will be out a month. Since the accident I have talked with a number of star pitchers. All agree that if it is a bad fracture it may be two months before Gray gets back into his pitching stride.

The pitchers pointed out to me that the thumb was the index to pitching success. It is the thumb that really makes possible the purchase on the ball. It is the action of the thumb that determines the break on the ball.

The thumb is the basis of curve ball pitching. Gray is such a pitcher. A painful thumb, which will not permit of a tight grip, practically eliminates the use of the curve ball.

A few days later, Gordon Cochrane, the catching sensation of the majors, the greatest young catcher to break in the big show since Ray Schalk, according to Connie Mack, suffered an injury somewhat similar to Gray's.

Losing the pitching and catching sensations of the majors in Gray and Cochrane, is a terrific blow even to a club as good as Connie Mack's. The jinx is relentless.

JOHNSON'S SHOWING.

Fandom is more than pleased at the great showing being made by Walter Johnson. He is the leading winner of the world champs.

It was apparent in the last world series that Walter was beginning to feel the toll of hard work. He admitted it himself.

He sought to buy a minor league franchise and retire, taking with him the glory that went with the final game of the 1924 world series.

Unable to put over the deal for the minor league club, he returned to Washington. It is well he did. His great pitching has kept the club up there.

Manager Harris is nursing Walter along. He isn't being called on for relief work and is getting from four to five days rest. So handled, he is proving he still has many a winning game in his system.

What are the rights of the catcher or an infielder as to blocking a base in an effort to retire the runner? What are the rights of the base runner?

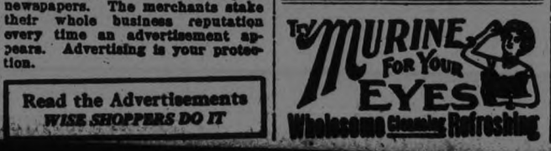
If the catcher or any other infielder has the ball in his possession before the baserunner reaches his objective, the fielder has a perfect right to block the path of the runner as he sees fit in an effort to make sure the out.

The baserunner is not restricted as to the methods he may employ in an effort to overcome the blocking tactics of the man with the ball. A certain code of sportsmanship, however, is usually followed by the runner when he realizes the fielder is awaiting his arrival with the ball.

If the catcher or any other infielder making a play at a certain base has not the ball in his possession, he has no right to block the pathway of the runner in an effort to handicap him until the ball arrives. For such an offense the umpire should grant the baserunner the base that was blocked by the fielder, whether or not the out was made.



FAIR EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS

Dr. F. C. Neal Presents the Prizes to Winning Young Ladies.

Dr. Neal's remarks on presentation of prizes to the winning young ladies in popular ticket-selling contest:

"One has often heard of what may be accomplished by the right man in the right place, but I am afraid to-night, I am the wrong man in the wrong place.

"Naturally, Mr. Breyfogle should be occupying this position on this occasion, but Mr. Breyfogle is one of those modest hard workers, who would rather do many hours of strenuous work than get up on the platform for ten minutes, and while he is in Peterboro, not only 'The man of the hour,' but 'The man of the week,' in regard to this big exhibition, still, we could not persuade him to appear.

Mr. George McDonald also could tell you many things about managing an effort like this 'Made-in-Peterboro' Exhibition, that do not appear to a casual observer, but he, too, begged to be excused. So, here is where I am, the wrong man, in th wrong place.

"Early in the work of planning for this exhibition, Mr. Dickin, of the Scottish Woollen Mills, came forward with a brilliant scheme for getting the young ladies of the city to enter a contest in selling entrance tickets.

"To prove how really brilliant this idea was, I have only to quote you some very interesting statistics:

"Last year advance sale of tickets amounted to $74.75.

"This year advance sale of tickets amounted to $2,050.00.

"Last year total gate receipts were $817.00.

"This year $2,450.00.

"About 17 girls entered the contest, and although the work was entirely new to them, they went at it with a zest, and even when it became quite evident that many would receive no prize, they loyally went on working, and turned over their receipts to those above them. So while only three prizes have been awarded, still the committee in charge feel very grateful for the work done by all the young ladies. We give them credit for the initial work, making popular the idea and virtually ensuring its financial success, before ever the doors were opened. Then, of course, nothing could have been done, if the manufacturers had not responded so enthusiastically to the idea, and while the immediate results to them may be small financially, still we have all benefited in learning more about all the wonderful things manufactured in our own city, and eventually it will prove to have been A1 advertising.

"The ladies in charge of and assisting in the various booths deserve our utmost thanks and appreciation. The decorations, the management, and the results have all been wonderful.

"Splendid work was also done by the Kiwanians and Rotarians, and when the fall exhibition comes along President Denne will not need to import any talent for the midway.

"Then, I am not forgetting the very generous public, who not only bought the tickets, but who came and entered enthusiastically and unselfishly into the spirit of the exhibition. We have also to thank the press for their generous and loyal support.

"But to come back to my especial duty to-night, I hold in my hand the cheques given by the management in appreciation of the work done by the young ladies selling the entrance tickets.

"Miss Noonan sold $390.00 worth of tickets, and I have much pleasure in handing to her the first prize, a cheque for $100.00.

"Miss McKone sold $342.00 worth of tickets, and to her comes the second prize of $50.00; and to Miss Evans, who sold $277.00 worth, the third prize of $25.00.

"In addition to these cash prizes there has been added very substantial prizes by Mr. McKone, of the Peterboro Business College. To the young lady winning the first prize he is donating a six months' course at the Peterboro Business College, valued at $100.00; as a second prize, a three months' course, valued at $50.00; and as a third prize, a two months' course, valued at $35.00.

"The Health Association invite all to visit the summer camp at Jackson Park, and to become acquainted with the various phases of their work, and the thought that our efforts of this week will mean weeks of happiness to the unfortunate children who have not the blessing of robust health, will help to make us forget the hard work and the intense heat."

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

THE DUMBELLS

The power of the Dumbells as a magnet was never more convincingly demonstrated than last night when practically a capacity audience defied the heat to see Capt. Plunkett's famous entertainers in their latest revue "Oh, Yes" at the Grand. No other attraction on the road playing under such conditions could have turned the trick.

"Oh, Yes" is a brand new show. Every number is absolutely fresh except Red Newman's classic "A Lovely War," which he is singing by popular request and which is as enjoyable as ever. It is a masterpiece in characterization that the Dumbells do well to preserve.

The old favourites are all in line again but with new stuff. Up to the minute songs, plenty of comedy features and the usual Dumbell surprises in costumes and lighting and scenic effects, the direction of Les Appleby being responsible for the latter.

The Dumbells orchestra with Harold Rich at the piano was the same big hit last night as on its previous appearances. The musicians played "By the Lake," "Peter Pan," a new arrangement of "Il Trovatore" with an appropriate setting with Red Newman at the anvil, and "Doo Wacka Doo" with Harold Rich supplying the vocal solo and Morris London cutting some queer capers on the trumpet. The audience could not get enough of this feature and a double encore had to be given.

Al Plunkett had a bunch of new songs "Since Ma's Gone Crazy Over Crossword Puzzles," "The Best Looking Girls Get the Worst Looking Men" and of course a mother song. "A Mother's Lullaby" one of the most tuneful numbers this popular singer has yet given us.

Red Newman, a little stouter, but just as dashingly amusing as of yore contributed largely to last night's success. His new songs "How Does the Milk Get Into Cocoanuts" and "Keep the Money in the Country" scored heavily and the "Lovely War" number never went over better.

Ross Hamilton's gowns were more gorgeous than in any previous revue and his characterization of beautiful feminity was surpassed in no previous effort. He offered "I Love Them All," "The Sunrise and You," "And Lips That I Have Kissed,' and all his numbers were enthusiastically received.

Glen Allan's dancing was another high spot in performance, notably his Indian dance which was worthy of a place on any programme, and Jimmy Devon also "stepped" a bit in his usual acceptable fashion.

Stan Bennett had a new number too. One of his best in "Co. Lipstick of the Cold Cream Guards" a typical Bennett number. He and "Jock" Holland combined their talents in a splendid sketch "Seen and Heard in the Fog" in which their song numbers were heard to greatest advantage. Earlier in the programme Holland led the beauty chorus in "The Girls of the Old Brigade."

Ben Allen told some new gags with the assistance of Morley Plunkett, sang "Rock abye Baby Days" in fine voice as a solo and with Morley Plunkett contributed "Twenty-five Years from Now."

There were two comedy sketches "A Home from Home' and "Red Justice" in which Jock Holland, Pat Rafferty, Red Newman, Stan Bennett and Morley Punkett did great work.

The programme ended with a fitting finale, "The Midnight Cabaret" a setting in keeping with the high standard at the whole revue.

"Oh Yes' is the Dumbells at their best. It is scarcely necessary to say more. The programme will be repeated at the Grand tonight and another big house is assured.

GREATEST AGGREGATION OF WILD ANIMALS EVER CONCEIVED

AT THE CAPITOL

NORMA TALMADGE IN "THE LADY."

The charming Norma Talmadge stars in "The Lady" at the Capitol Theatre this week. Something like "Smilin' Through," the picture holds its interest in the somewhat pathetic nature of its theme, and it has a reminiscent flavor also of "Secrets," by reason of the fact that the star appears in sections of it as an elderly woman. While other feminine stars are fighting to retain their hold on their public by presentations of youthful roles, this courageous young thing has no qualms whatever in donning the grey wig and the lace fichus of an older generation and making her audience like her just as well, or almost as well, as an old lady, as they do in the heyday of her young freshness.

As a portrayer of emotion, Norma Talmadge can hardly be surpassed. She poses to a certain extent, but there is a verity about her acting that wakes it wonderfully holding. Her presentation of the woman who goes from youth to middle age, looking for a lost son, is extraordinary in the perfection of its acting. Probably no other actress on the screen to-day could do it half so well

The old times and the old costumes come back in "The Lady." It is set away back in the early years of the century, when women wore trailing dust catchers, long tight sleeves and high collars and marvellous pompadours. There is even included in the picture a model of the old motor car in its "begincement," with a funny little rear entrance to a stiff, high-perched seat and a laborious cranking arrangement at the side.

STAN. BENNETT

As in "Secrets," the picture opens with Norma as an elderly woman, presiding over a low-brow cafe where sailors and migrants from other lands congregate for a glass of liquor and a rowdy dance. Even in this environment, she longs to be a lady, and here, to a sympathetic listener, her story unfolds itself, as the screen throws back to former times and ways. As Polly Pearl, the idol of a London music-hall stage, she had aroused the admiration of the son of the house of St. Aubyns. Married secretly, disowned by his father, and then left stranded by her fickle-minded husband, who turns to an aristocrat for consolation from the common ways of his little bride, the girl is befriended in a rude Marseilles cafe by the hard-faced proprietor, the same hatchet-visaged female, by the way, who made such an unforgettable impression on her audiences as the leader of the trio of village gossips, in "Way Down East."

Then St. Aubyns, Senior, comes and claims the child of the unfortunate marriage, and the mother, in desperation, gives him to a friendly English woman, who departs to an unknown destination with the baby. Through the years that follow, Polly searches London streets for her child, selling posies to passers-by and looking always for the little boy. The denouement to the sad story comes in the cafe where she is mistress, when the quest ends at last, on a note of tragedy that has the possibility of a happier sequel as the curtain falls.

The elements of romance and the heart interest woven into the story of the coster girl who always longed to be "a lady" make it very realistic, but the interest centres always about the splendid acting of the little star, presenting to perfection a picture that makes "The Lady" another of her successes.

There is a really laughable comedy of lion manoeuvres and mix-ups presented with this feature, as well as the usual fun of interesting short reels.—Jeannette.

AT THE REGENT

LIFE ON A PULLMAN CAR BARED IN NEW PICTURE.

A night in a Pullman car. A nearly wed couple looking for a minister. A French girl, fleeing from her husband, who gets the nearly wed male to pose as her husband and gets her baby to call him "papa." A travelling salesman joyously boiled. A porter who knows everybody's business and who takes care of everyone when they least want it.

With these as his leading characters, Ruper Hughes is said to have written one of the most amusing screen farces of many years in "Excuse Me," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which is now playing at the Regent Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The cast is headed by Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel, Rene Adoree, Walter Hiers, John Bole and Bert Roach.

AT THE ROYAL

"WORLDLY GOODS," CLEVER MATRIMONIAL COMEDY.

"Worldly Goods," a Paramount picture starring Agnes Ayres, is the feature at the Royal Theatre. The production is an adaptation of Sophie Kerr's Ladies' Home Journal serial and popular novel of the same name. Paul Bern directed and A. P. Younger wrote the screen play.

Miss Ayres' role in the picture is that of a secretary to the manager of a large department store. She studies fashions when not punching her typewriter. Into Eleanor's life comes a breezy young auto salesman. Hopper, played by Pat O'Malley, devotes part of his time thinking out schemes and deals calculated to make him a millionaire over night. He has great confidence in his ability to put over the "big idea" and sweeps Eleanor off her feet in a glamour of romance. Fred sells himself to her 100 per cent. He tells the girl of his million dollar plans and she is convinced that her future husband is about the cleverest man alive. Fred promises her automobiles, fur coats, travel, servants and every luxury and in time they are married.

Six months later Fred is still making promises, but the automobiles and servants have thus far failed to materialize. He flits from scheme to scheme but never sees any of them to a successful issue. In the meantime the pair begin to feel the touch of poverty and it is then Eleanor decides to get her old job back. She does so.

"The other woman" enters the story here just as Fred stumbles upon some wonderful news and cleans up on his "hunch." Instead of rushing to Eleanor with the good news he is summoned to her lawyer's office to face divorce proceedings. Then the story takes another novel twist, a reconciliation is effected, and the picture closes with every promise that his air castles are about to become realities.

"Worldly Goods" is entertainment for everyone, a matrimonial comedy-drama that is not just another picture of married life. It's something new, and you'll like it!

SEWING SAW AND UP AND DOWN

GEORGE STREET

See-sawing up and down George Street I saw Alderman Nagle Phelan, hirer and firer of dog catchers, who had just acted in the latter capacity in the interests, he said, of a less intricate existence in the city. .....Saw Mr. Upton, a travelling gentleman, whose train had passed through two storms that were heading this way, accompanied by lightning and hail. .....Saw P. G. Towns, of Douro, originator and chief engineer of the Old Home Week to be held there this month, and he seemed very cheerful in view of a promised big attendance. .....Saw Rev. W. Harold Young, who is soon to leave George Street Methodist Church, where he has made a record for activity, and he was rushing to catch a train to attend the United Church inaugural. .....Saw Charles Cook, president of Kiwanis Club, who was taking deep-breathing exercises to recover from the strain of his hard work in the Made-in-Peterboro Fair. .....Saw paper cups and plates in a store window, reminding me the picnic season is here with all its ants. .....

I gave warning last night there were changes pending in city by-laws, and if there were any regulations particularly favored you should notify the committee immediately.

You put it off too long and the dog catcher has been relieved of his duties.

Cynthia Grey Says

LESS FLAME MORE YOUTH.

Take heed, oh Flaming Youth, for your path is about run.

Abberations from the giddiness of liberty are due for replacement by the moderations of sanity.

Necking parties, petting parties and gin on the hip. These are madnesses of too sudden freedom—the new freedom that came with unannounced descent.

Flaming Youth, whether to pity or chastise you, a wiser mind and bigger heart must pass judgment.

But remember the morrows, Flaming Youth. They are the things that count.

Moths in the flame—Flaming Youth! Do not burn yourselves out till the morrow comes.

Remember that you, too, are destined for parenthood. A little less worship of Mammon, then.

Your father and mother were good enough in their day. Get back into the stride and pattern after them. Let us have less flame and more youth.

QUESTIONS-ANSWERS.

Dear Miss Grey: I came in from a small town to Peterboro' a few months ago and since then I have been going with both rich and poor girls. Do you think it is true that as a class poor girls are better than rich girls? I have found that the rich girls are freer with their kisses than the poorer maidens.—Jack Martin.

No, I can't agree with you. I think there are just as many good rich girls as good poor girls, despite your experience. Even though you seem to proclaim yourself as a heart crusher of the first rank, I don't think we can draw any general conclusions from your "experiments." You will find good people and bad among both the rich and the poor and in Peterboro' as well as the small villages.

Dear Miss Grey: I am a bachelor of 30. I cannot say that I have honestly been in love with a girl in my life, although I have made love to dozens and dozens of them. In fact, I have petted practically every girl I have ever met. After I have learned how "easy" they are I have no desire to marry them. What is the matter with the girls of today, anyhow?—Sheik.

Nothing at all is the matter with them, Sheik. The girls of today are no different than the girls of yesterday, or the girls of a hundred years ago. Women have always foolishly believed that a man who made love to them was in love with them, honestly. And very often the men are sincerely in love with them, too. But occasionally a man like you comes along, who kisses a girl only to see how "easy" she is. He's what I call a cad.

Dear Miss Grey: I hear that the man I expect to marry this month is running around with a married woman who is separated from her husband. Shall I speak to him about it, or pretend that it is beneath my notice.—Gwendolyn.

Nothing that your future husband does is beneath your notice. For it may affect your whole life's happiness. You owe it to yourself to ask the man you love just how much truth there is in the story you've heard. And be sure that you get the truth. If he has been paying attention to a married woman while he is engaged to you, and supposes himself deeply in love with you, I cannot see wherein your married life with him is going to be a sanctuary of trust and peace, can you?

MRS. P. J. CLANCEY

The death occurred on May 26th of Mrs. P. J. Clancey, Lindsay, which is deeply mourned by many. Mrs. Clancey's maiden name was Ann Marren. Though born near Kirkfield she spent the greater part of her life in Duluth, St. Paul and Rochester. She travelled extensively on the Atlantic coast, and spent some time in Atlantic City. In, June, 1900, she was married in London by the late Archbishop McEvay to Mr. P. J. Clancey(a popular farmer of Ops township. They settled on their farm south of Lindsay. During their sojourn they were blessed with happiness and prosperity.

Four years ago her health began to fail, and Mr. Clancey, in hopes that rest and quietness might prolong the life of his dear wife, retired and took up residence on Glenelg St.

She bore her sufferings with patience and christian fortitude, always being resigned to the will of God. She was ever and always noted for her charity, kindness, love and affection. She was ever ready to extend help to those in need thus winning the esteem due only to one of such a type . Many times she was titled "the exemplary woman."

She was a devout member of St. Mary's church, a member of the Sacred Heart League, Altar Society, Catholic Women's League, and Our Lady of Victory. The innumerable spiritual offerings, and the large numbers from town and country, who came to pay the last tribute of respect to the deceased was evidence of the love in which she was cherished in life and death,

The funeral took place on Friday morning, May 29th, from her late residence 21 Glenelg St., to St. Mary's church, thence to the R. C. cemetery, where interment took place. Rev. Fr. Collins sung requiem high mass. Services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Dean Whibbs. The pallbearers were her son, James Clancey, and son-in-law, Frank Crowley, of Peterboro, and four nephews, Ed. Clancey, Albert Clancey, John McCarthy and Dennis Marren.

Those who deeply mourn her demise are her devoted husband, Mr. P. J. Clancey, Glenelg St.; her son, James R. Clancey. South Ops; and one daughter, Mrs. Frank Crowley, Peterboro. Her sisters are, Miss M. Marren, Lindsay; Mrs. A. McCarthy Uptergrove; Mrs. Nugent, Centralia, Washington; her brothers are: Messrs. Thomas Marren, Kirkfield; John Marren, Duluth; Peter Marren, Montana; Luke, of Prince Rupert, B.C.; and Michael, Weyburn, Sask.

The grave hides forever the form of a noble christian and true friend, but time shall not soon efface the memory of her who was so dearly loved in life and deeply mourned in death.—Lindsay Watchman-Warder.

LIFE SAVERS INCORPORATED SPEND MONEY TO MAKE MORE

Twenty-four Reasons Why Newspaper Advertising Pays This Firm.

TELL THE STORY

Only Medium to Reach All the People, Serving All the People.

Manufacturers of an article retailing at 5c find it good business to spend half a million dollars with newspapers and buyers of advertising, big and little, will find their reasons for this decision very interesting reading.

1. Newspapers permit controllable and apportioned expenditure by states and provinces.

2. They permit of explanatory as well as exclamatory copy.

3. They make possible a quick checking up of the pulling power of specific appeals. (Our copy policy involves 4 specific appeals, and we wanted to test these out by running one appeal in one territory and the others elsewhere, so as to compare results).

4. Newspapers reach a larger proportion of urban population than some other mediums that might otherwise be acceptable.

5. Newspapers reach the masses. (Because Life Savers are a high-class product without a special class appeal, we do not consider it essential to our plans that we use the choice selection of population largely represented, in our opinion, in the circulation of some national advertising mediums).

6. It is easier to control and eliminate circulation duplication by the use of newspapers than with any other group of mediums.

7. Newspapers offer the greatest amount of circulation per dollar for "explanatory" copy.

8. Newspapers furnish the greatest amount of circulation per city for "explanatory" copy.

9. Newspapers are particularly valuable for a product of daily sale because of their daily appearance.

10. Newspapers have come to be regarded practically as a necessity in the humblest homes, and hence, for a product of mass appeal, they seem to us logical to use.

11. Newspapers are local in their influence and hence have the most intimate influence upon jobbers and retailers in each community.

12. Publishers of newspapers, because of their local influence, are able and often willing to assist where needed in effecting better personal contact with jobbers, retailers and chain stores. In other ways, too, they are able to give us merchandising co-operation of great value.

13. Newspapers provide local advertising for the local customers of local retailers. They provide a means of exploiting the retail distribution and consumer demand created by our past sales and advertising efforts.

14. Newspapers are flexible in many ways. If distribution is spotty we can hold off the campaign in centres until the goods are on the shelves. Or if we wish to change the style of copy or illustrations quickly we can do so. Moreover, instead of dividing the appropriation arbitrarily by 12, and running a fixed amount of advertising each month, we can adjust our schedules to sales increases or territorial conditions from time to time throughout the year.

15. Our previous experience with newspapers has been very satisfactory. A special newspaper campaign, conducted for 3 years in the New England territory, reveals nothing that is inefficient or uneconomical, but rather the reverse.

16. The effective and continued use of newspapers in a large way by other national advertisers indicates that they have profited by their use.

17. In large urban centres it is possible to use one newspaper for a while and then another, if the first does not pull as expected, or if the copy seems more suited either to the morning or evening audience.

18. Having used other mediums very extensively in the past our concentration in newspapers will bring Life Savers advertising before the public in a fresh way, which probably will add to its attention value.

19. Our exclusive test of newspapers should provide a test of the relative worth of mediums. We should be able to tell whether newspaper advertising can produce, let us say, $12 worth of business for every dollar spent, as compared with $10 let us say, that other meritorious national mediums have produced.

20. Concentration of expenditure should enable us to make a bigger impression. If an advertising appropriation is divided among several mediums no one medium has an adequate opportunity of doing the job of selling expected of it.

21. Local advertising makes more tangible the selling arguments of our salesmen among local retailers. They can discuss sales plans from a local standpoint.

22. Newspapers can be used in a way that enables us to profit by any mistakes made during the early months of the campaign. Mistakes can be limited to a few units of population. It is possible to feel your way in small or limited markets. You can add or eliminate markets. In other words, you can creep before you leap.

23. In addition to large home-delivered circulations, newspapers are sold to thousands of persons who read them on the way to and fro from business. These "travelling" readers frequently pass near a display of Life Savers. They are close to the point of sale.

24. Newspapers are the first influence to popularize fads, slang terms, personalities, etc. (This characteristic of the newspaper, while possibly detrimental to the advertising of some products, is an advantage in the case of a product like Life Savers).

New High Territory For Public Utilities

NEW YORK, June 9.— (Canadian Press.)—With bullish demonstrations revived in a number of public utilities, in Wall Street, enabling them to forge into new high territory for the year, buying of popular shares expanded, but enough weak spots developed to show that professional sentiment was divided as to the immediate course of market. Prospects of higher dividends and increased earnings were the propelling influences in certain shares such as International Telephone, Cnandler Motors and Pan American Petroleum.

Report Of Poor Crops Adance Price Of Wheat

CHICAGO, June 9. — Canadian Press. — With active buying on the part of commission houses and with but little pressure to sell wheat prices scored a material advance today in the early dealings.

One of the chief factors was the statement by a trade authority here, that the United States this season would raise only sufficient wheat for domestic use.

The opening, which ranged from 5-8c decline to 1-8c advance, July 165 5-8 to 165 7-8, and Sept. 161 3-4 to 162 was followed by a rise that carried July to 167 1-8 and Sept.. 16 163 3-4.

Brazilian Led Market Improving Half Point

TORONTO, June 9. (Canadian Press).—Brazilian led the market on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning in activity and strength on the turnover of almost 900 shares, improving half a point at 55. The list as a whole showed a tendency to lower price levels, though another strong spot was Twin City, active and a point higher at 65. Dominion Canners eased off a point and Abitibi 3-4, though Canners Preferred strengthened a quarter point. Bank of Commerce had a recession of a point to 201. There was a fair volume of trade.

Maple Leaf Milling Co. Profits Exceed Last Year

Maple Leaf Milling Co., Limited, showed net profits from all sources of $520,603 for the year ended March 31, 1925, which compares with $334,061 for the company's previous fiscal year. The Maple Leaf Co. thus shows earning of nearly 8 per cent. on the common stock. The annual report is being mailed to shareholders, and the annual meeting has been called for June 17. At the end of the fiscal year the Maple Leaf Co. was still engaged in grinding flour for the huge Russian order, amounting to over $16,000,000. As a consequence its inventories and bankers' advances are considerably higher than in the current annual report than was the case in the previous year. Both the inventories and the bank loans have been very considerably reduced since the completion of the Russian order.

The company shows an improved working capital position. Current assets amount to $12,311,024, including inventory of grain, flour, feed, etc., of $7,406,744. Current liabilities are shown at $8,586,584, including bankers' advances of $6,929,170. The company's net working capital, therefore amounts to $3,724,430. By way of comparison, it is interesting to note that the annual report of the previous year shows inventories of $3,007,500, and bankers' advances of $1,711,298.

The depreciation reserve is shown at $1,551,086, as against $1,494,416 for the previous year. The contingent reserve was $142,737, which compares with $179,329. Reserve for bad and doubtful debts are carried at $120,112, as against $89,586 in the previous year.

The profit and loss account shows balance brought forward from March 31, 1924, amounting to $1,641,477. After adding net profits for the current year a total of $2,162,051 is shown. Deductions included bond interest $127,836, and preferred dividends $205,100, leaving a balance carried forward in profit and loss account of $1,829,115.

THREE CHURCHES IN ASSEMBLY

CONTINUING PRESBYTERIANS.

TORONTO, June 9. — Canadian Press. — The congress of the Continuing Presbyterian Church in Canada meeting in new St. Andrew's church this morning, adopted a resolution petitioning the Dominion government to change the date of the appointment of the Federal commission which will deal with the general property of the Presbyterian church. By the Dominion Act this commission was to be appointed nine months after June 10, 1925.

The request is being made so that the Continuing Presbyterian Congress will not have to meet again within nine months.

The session of Congress this morning was a review of the situation of the non-concurring Presbyterian churches in the Maritime provinces.

Dramatic Scenes.

TORONTO, June 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Dramatic scenes are expected to attend the closing late this afternoon of the last session of the last General Assembly of the present Presbyterian Church in Canada.

When the business of the Assembly is concluded and steps are taken for its dissolution, preparatory to tomorrow's meeting with the Methodists and Congregationalists, as the General Council of the United church, the antit-Unionists, who have close to eighty commissioners in the Assembly plan to register a formal and written protest against the action of the majority. Non-concurrents say they will move that Rev. Dr. D. G. McQueen, of Edmonton, an ex-moderator, take the chair, and they will proceed on the assumption that they constitute the legal general assembly of the church.

LONDON, June 9. — Famous paintings of John S. Sargent, which were in the studio at the time of his death, will be sold at auction July 24.

The United Church of Canada

By R. E. KNOWLES
(SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER)

How trivial is so much that has divided us; how sovereign so much that unites. It is an hour for national pride and hope.

TORONTO, June 10.—The thing is done. A quarter of a century of waiting, hoping, struggling has become to-day an hour of palpitating joy.

The United Church of Canada was born to-day, its advent attended by high revelry of rejoicing hearts. Not in temple or cathedral, nor amid long drawn aisle and fretted vault echoing the note of praise, but, as if a symbol of the power and purpose of the new born Church to hallow and to beautify, to make the place of its feet-glorious, the holy festivities were held within an area set apart to athletic prowess and physical endeavor. "Now these do it to obtain a corruptible crown—but we an incorruptible." Great and impressive was the scene. Several thousand reverent souls were there, they, too, but representative of the great host which no man could number, from ocean unto ocean, who have lived to see this day, and seeing have rejoiced. And who there but felt the "cloud of witnesses," the throng of "men once like us with suffering tried but now with glory crowned," who in the calm eternities must have realized long since how trivial is so much that has divided us, how sovereign so much that unites. It is an hour for national pride and hope. In the highest things of life Canada has led the world. Precedent for this there is none. The adventure is the sole work of these forward-looking pilgrims and the pilgrims' God. Blended forever are these three great Churches now, each living still, each glorying in the sacrifice of much that it might be possible for all to show to the world that nearness to Christ means nearness to one another and to call the whole Christian commonwealth to the vet to be fulfilled hope and dream of the Christian brotherhood of man.

One great line from an English poet beat its music upon my heart as I surveyed the epoch - making scene. In reality, if not in words, it had its sacred custody over all the subdued and wondering multitude. The words were these: "On to the bound of the waste, on to the city of God."

PAINLEVE GOES TO MOROCCO SEEKING PEACE WITH RIFFS

But France Cannot Tolerate Ejection From Africa, He Says.

BEHIND SCENES.

(By A. L. Bradford, United Staff Corespondent. Copyright 1925 by United Press.)

TOULOUSE, June 10. — France is disposed to have peace with the Riffian warrior, Abd-El-Krim—but not so long as the latter battles for Fez and seeks to stir Islam against France.

Thus Premier Painleve described to me to-day in the dawn before hopping off by air to Morocco, his position toward the Riffian war, which he had set forth to see with his own eyes.

"The day that the Riffians renounce their proclaimed intention of taking Fez and accept an honest peace with normal economic relations with our zone and the natives," Painleve said, "France will be ready to apply the word of Marshal Lyautey that the enemies of to-day will be the collaborators of to-morrow."

To Establish Peace.

He paused, and then with even more emphasis than before, he continued, "but peace is impossible while Krim has the intention of causing all the Moslem world to rise up and eject us from Africa and destroy our work there."

Then he reiterated what he had already told his deputies in Paris, namely that France's aim in Morocco was solely to establish peace with out any intention of taking "an inch of territory." "All our operations," he said, "are well within the French zone."

He explained that he had been thinking for some time of going to Morocco and the fact that he had suddenly taken the decision to fly to the battleground did not indicate that the French military situation there was serious." "I am going now," he continued, "because after parliament begins discussing financial projects I could not leave Paris. In fact, if I had waited for 24 hours I could not have made the trip and got back in time."

Behind the Scenes.

Painleve then gave me a little more of a peep behind the scenes regarding the hoped-for Franco-Spanish accord. "A necessary condition for peace in Africa," he said, "is a firm, definite accord between France and Spain.

"Negotiations are being pressed and we are going to agree with Spain on the terms of peace which the two countries will accept from Krim. We are going to establish a blockade of the coast against contraband arms and food supplies for Krim and when this programme is finished we will take all necessary military and naval measures to maintain the blockade. I shall confer with Marshal Lyautey about the present and future situation in Morocco and shall also discuss the condition of our troops and supplies. I do not expect to see Primo de Rivera, who is in Tetuan."

May Stop Offensive.

A Paris despatch to the United Press over night related that Parliament members were inclined to think Painleve was going to stop the offensive, just as he halted the Champagne drive in 1917, when he was the War Minister, and became amazed at the losses involved without material gains.

The above interview would indicate that there was to be a real Franco-Spanish entente, which would cease operations only when Krim should give up his plan of Moslem domination in Northern Africa.

Premier of France.

SENTENCE COMMUTED.

OTTAWA, June 10. (Canadian Press).—The death sentence imposed on Wm. George Watkins, formerly of New Westminster, B.C., who was sentenced to be hanged at Montreal next Friday for the murder of F. X. Beauvais, Verdun storekeeper, has been commuted to life imprisonment, it was announced to-day by the Department of Justice.

Refused Use Of His Boat To Save a Drowning Boy

WINNIPEG, June 10. (Canadian Press).—After witnesses had testified that George Schraeder, a resident of Elmwood, had refused to allow the use of his boat, the only one in the vicinity, for an attempt to save the life of 13-year-old Robert Beck, who was drowned in Red River on Saturday, a coroner's jury late last night brought in a verdict holding Schrader negligently responsible for the boy's death, and expressing the opinion that his conduct was such as to make him an undesirable citizen.

INDIANS MARRY; SURPRISE CITY

BASKET MAKERS.

OTTAWA, June 10.—(Special.)—Ottawa had the unusual experience of an Indian wedding in the city yesterday. At the home of Rev. H. T. Kalem, 516 McLeod street, formerly Presbyterian minister of Eastview, and now in charge of the churches at Beachburg and Micksburg and member of the Rama band of Indians from near Orillia, was united by the minister in matrimony to a daughter of the Rice Lake band. The names of the contracting parties were Michael St. Germain, a young Indian in his twenties, apparently, and Vera Naugon, daughter of William Naugon and his squaw, both well known characters in this district.

The whole party are basket makers and travel extensively plying their wares. After the ceremony they all left on the mid-day train to rejoin the Rama band. Rev. H. T. Kalem, who performed the marriage ceremony, says the parties spoke English and were able quite properly to give the responses. Witnesses to the marriage were Sergeant F. Syms of the R.C.M.P. and a maid in the home of the minister. The groom was able to sign the register, but his bride had to be content with making her mark. Arrangements for the marriage were made by officials of the Department of Indian Affairs. The license was taken out at the city hall in the usual way.

CHILDREN MISSING FROM FORT WILLIAM

Two Boys and a Girl Have Not Been Seen Since Saturday.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., June 10. —(Canadian Press.)— The police have been notified that two boys, Holly Clapp, aged 15, and Claude Cameron, 10, have been missing from home since Saturday night. On that night they were seen near the Canadian Pacific station and it is supposed that Clapp, who was in the Collegiate, and is said to be tired of school, may have run off, taking his smaller companion with him and jumped a train.

A girl, Mary Rocco, aged 16, a pretty brunette, is also missing since Saturday and her parents are anxious as to her whereabouts.

SASKATOON, June 16.—(Canadian Press).—Shot through the abdomen by a bullet from a revolver in the hands of her six-year-old brother at Wynyard, Sofia Proznick, aged two and a half years, died last night. The revolver had been laid down for a moment by the hired man and the lad picked it up and pulled the trigger.

Rev. G. I. Craw Criticizes Peterborough Unionists

TORONTO, June 10. (Special).—At to-day's meeting of the Continuing Presbyterian Church, Rev. George I. Craw said that in the Presbytery of Peterboro, they would have approximately twenty churches. Propaganda had been carried on in the Presbytery in some instances not reflecting great credit on those who were thus engaged. The opponents of the Union had sought to carry on their propaganda in such a manner and spirit that they did not need to hold their heads down.

PETERBOROUGH BAPTISTS OPEN ANNUAL CONVENTION IN PARK STREET CHURCH

Rev. C. W. Rose Is Acting Moderator at 123rd Annual Meeting.

LASTS TWO DAYS.

Seventy-five Delegates Present From City and County Congregations.

The 123rd annual meeting of the Peterborough Baptist Association opened this morning at Park Street Baptist Church, with about seventy-five delegates present from the city and district. In the absence, through illness, of the family of Rev. J. P. McLennan of Norwood, his place as moderator was taken by Rev. C. W. Rose, pastor of Murray Street Baptists Church. Mr. C. A. Bradley of Grafton acts as Clerk.

The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. S. G. Pinnock of Toronto, followed by devotional services led by Rev. W. S. Edgar, of Gilmour Memorial Church, who opened a series of devotional talks with an eloquent and thoughtful address on "The Secret of Endurance." Taking his text from Hebrews 11; 27: He endured as seeing Him who was invisible," Rev. Edgar based his talk on the endurance in hard things displayed by Moses, who had seen the Invisible, and was thereafter rendered unfit for the vanities of the world. Faith, a faculty that is fundamental in the religious life, must take the place of reason in the search after God. 'One of the great tragedies of life is the fact that men use their reason for purposes that were never intended, in taking the place of faith."

"Moses feared not the face of Pharaoh, because he had seen the face of God. There are many men who will strive mightily in a hundred-mile race, but be no good in a mile. It should be the distinction of the Christian that he prevails to the end, no matter what the goal."

Rev. N. R. McLeod, pastor of the Park Street Church, made a brief business announcement, announcing the offer of the church buildings at St. James' Methodist Church during this afternoon's session, when the ladies occupied the Park Street Church buildings. New ministers were also introduced, in the Rev. E. D. Ford of Campbellford and Rev. J. W. Edwards, of Brighton. Licentiates of McMaster University also introduced to the meeting were Messrs. E. A. Pinkerton, of Indian Rivtr. H. E. Buchner, R.R. No. 2 Bewdley.

Social Service.

An address on Social Service, delivered by Carl V. Farmer, B.A., followed. Mr. Farmer is Social Service secretary of McMaster University, Toronto, and son of Professor Farmer, dean of Theology at the same institution.

Opening his impassioned and fervent talk with a reference to the parable of the Good Samaritan and the young man woh desired to know what he should do to gain eternal life, Mr. Farmer proceeded to define social service as a broad-minded service to humanity in general; caring for the wounded man on the roadside of life, giving the cup of cold water, visiting the widowed and the fatherless in their affliction, feeding the hungry and clothing the naked, taking care of the stranger, seeing to it that every baby, whether born illegitimate or otherwise, was given a decent chance to reach maturity and

Three Great Church Bodies Join In Communion Service Symbolic of Linking in United Church

AMERICAN PRESBYTERIANS OF MONTREAL CAST IN LOT WITH NEW UNITED CHURCH

New Born Church Has Almost a Million Members and 9,000 Preaching Places—Blending of Three Types of Protestantism Makes Church History.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, June 10.—History was made in Toronto to-day In the presence of over 8,000 people in the Arena, Mutual Street, an epoch-making event took place, when the United Church of Canada was inaugurated with a deeply devotional and inspiring service.

The official declaration that the United Church had been constituted was made by Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown. "I declare," he said, in an impressive silence, "That the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Congregation Churches of Canada and the Methodist Church, along with the general council of the local Union churches, are now united and constituted as one church, to be designated and known as The United Church of Canada." The congregation broke into applause.

It was the most forward step yet taken in the direction of a union of all Christian people, and to Canada comes the distinction of providing the first blending into one communion of three distinct types of Protestantism.

There were really four bodies uniting, instead of three, for in addition to the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational denomination there is a group of Union churches in the West, the forerunners of the present Union, the little Prairie stations that could not bide the time of the more slowly moving East.

In the new Church there will be almost a million members and it will have close to 9,000 preaching places scattered over the broad Dominion.

Never has the Arena had an audience of just such a character as thronged it to-day. It was hardly an audience—rather a vast congregation, met on a great and historic occasion to witness the birth of a great Canadian church. It was the moment of twenty-two years of dreaming and planning, and working to bring a high ideal into the realm of actuality.

The culminating point of the service was in the administrating of the Communion. The entire congregation participated in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

It was appropriate that the titular heads of the three great uniting Churches jointly conducted the service. Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, Methodist general superintendent, was in charge of the hallowing of the new Church—the consecration section of the service. Rev. Dr. W. H. Warriner, president of the Congregational Union, read the prayers which had been prepared for the occasion. The Communion service was in charge of the newly-elected Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, and the brief sermon which preceded the Communion was delivered by Rev. Dr. S. P. Rose, of Montreal, a former pastor of Sherbourne Street Methodist Church.

Thousands Who Had Prayed.

The 350 members of the First General Council had seats fronting the platform at the north end of the arena. On either side of them were seated the 212 elders, stewards and deacons who administered the Sacrament. And behind and all around them sat thousands who had prayed and worked and waited for the consummation of this great union of Christian churches.

Ranks Mingled.

In a room at the north end of the arena the delegates to the General Council had met. In they marched just before 10.30, three streams of them mingling in procession together, appropriately typical of the mingling of the three streams of Methodism, Presbyterianism and Congregationalism.

When the singing was over, Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown voiced the prayer, "O Lord, open Thou our lips," to which all the Assembly answered, "And our mouths shall show forth Thy praises."

Then came the "general confession" by the whole assembly, just as it appears in the regular service of the Anglican Church. This was followed by the Lord's Prayer in concert.

The next item was the recital in concert of Psalm 118.

Then the Te Deum Laudamus was chanted solemnly.

The Scripture lesson chosen was taken from the Gospel of St. John, 17th chapter, verses 1, 2, 6 and 17 to

Subscription List Opened To Advance Jesuits' Work

QUEBEC, June 10. — Canadian Press. — As a testimonial to the good work, religious and otherwise, performed by the Reverend Jesuit Fathers since their arrival in Quebec three centuries ago, a subscription list has been opened here to further advance the work of the order in this province. The initiative has been taken by a group of prominent citizens in the interests of the Villa Manrese.

Chicago's Gangland Plans To Honor Slain Gangster

CHICAGO, June 10. (Canadian Press). — Chicago's gangland again is planning a lavish funeral for one of its fallen leaders, Walter O'Donnell, a beer runner who was slain mysteriously in a suburban roadhouse last Sunday. Walter O'Donnell will be the ninth prominent gangster to be buried in local cemeteries in recent years. Each of the nine was slain. Arthur Youngreen, former prohibition agent, and now claiming to be a real estate broker, was placed under arrest to-day in connection with the fracas which resulted in the killing.

KLAN BATTLE EARLY TO-DAY

Antis Attacked Klansmen and Police Charged the Riotous Mob.

SCENE OF WRECKAGE.

CLINTON, Mass., June 10. (Canadian Press).—Thirty-two men are under arrest awaiting formal charges of alleged participation in a riot between Klansmen and anti-sympathizers shortly after midnight to-day.

Although scores are known to have been injured in the fighting which was not quelled until twenty State police patrolmen had charged the battling crowd, only three were hurt severely enough to be treated by physicians as far as the police have been able to learn. Three were treated at Worcester police surgery. They said they were innocent victims, being the target for missiles while passing through town in automobile trucks.

The riot started shortly before midnight last night, when a procession of more than 300 Klansmen's cars was suddenly attacked by "antis." As the first car hove in sight, the crowd rushed it, throwing bricks and swinging clubs. Occupants of the Klan machines jumped to the ground, as the "antis" rushed them. Clubs and rocks flew right and left, windows in the surrounding houses were shattered and shrieks of women in nearby houses contributed to the disorder. Flower pots, porch chairs and other things moveable were taken from porches and lawns and used in the battle.

State and local police finally gained control of the situation and kept the 'antis' and Klansmen separate.

KEEP STANDARD UNTARNISHED.

To-day's Gathering Looked To Day of Co-operation With Those Separated For a Time—Not Non-Concurrents, But Simply Presbyterians, Speaker Says.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, June 10.—While today marks the birth of the United Church of Canada, the Non-Concurring Presbyterians at their Pre-Assembly Congress, in Cook's Church, at the same time the large meeting was going on avoided entirely anything in the nature of hostile references. Instead, they expressed determination to carry on the work of their Church in the highest interests of Christianity and of Canada. An excellent start was given to the tone of the proceedings by the Rev. J. S. Shortt, Barrie, who looked forward to the day of "co-operation with those from whom for a time we are separated, and when all the heart burning and pain of the present time shall pass away."

The most stirring address of the morning was by Rev. W. B. Brown, Red Deer, who declared that if they could find for him a firmer instrument for evangelism and for righteousness than the Presbyterian Church had proved itself to be, he would become a member of that church. He considered the Presbyterian the greatest Protestant church in the world. They had to eliminate all personal self-seeking and self-glorification and keep the standard of the old Presbyterian Church untainted and untarnished. They would stand together for God's glory, for evangelization in the frontier mission fields of Canada, and among the untold millions to the end of the earth.

ANTI-UNIONIST COMMISSIONERS MET AT MIDNIGHT

Held Meeting So There Would Be No Break in Presbyterian History.

PROTEST NOT HEARD.

Document Declared Engagement "To Defend Church" Had Not Been Kept.

TORONTO, June 10. (Canadian Press).—In a little corner of College Street Church, in the noise and bustle which followed a long and dramatic sederunt and with curious commissioners filling the aisles and pressing close, a little group of men bowed their heads late yesterday afternoon while Rev. Dr. D. G. McQueen of Edmonton led in prayer. It was the official birth of the Continuing Presbyterian Church in Canada, and the participants were the anti-Unionist commissioners to the nine-fist General Assembly of the Church.

The last General Assembly of the Church as it was constituted up to midnight last night was adjourned at 6 o'clock until 9 a.m. on Wednesday, June 24, unless in the meantime its powers had been removed by the Church Union Bill, which came into effect at midnight last night. There will, therefore, be no meeting on that date. The Assembly declined to receive a protest from the non-concurrents, which was offered just before adjournment, on the ground that it was out of order.

Last night at 11.45, standard time, the non-concurrent commissioners

TOO MUCH RED TAPE.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Even robins get tangled up in the "red tape" at Washington. A robin tried to pick up a long piece of red string, which it intended to use for its nest. One of its feet became entangled in the string, which then caught on a limb. Someone called the fire department to rescue the bird which was hanging head downward.

The terrible row that the cowbird kicked up by her disregard of the conventions of polite society, made me take a little interest in her doings and I must tell a little more about another mean trick she played.

First of all, I learned that the cowbird is a small blackbird, a relative of the highway robbers known as purple grackles or common blackbirds. The are an ill mannered lot, these blackbirds and the cowbird runs true to form.

The male cowbird had a glossy black or metallic head and neck, is generally like a blackbird but has a short, powerful, sparrow-like beak. The female is the same size but duller in colour, almost a sparrow colour.

Well, I went after experiences with cowbirds, and finally managed to locate a nest of a chipping sparrow, in which a cowbird had deposited her egg beside two others of the chippie.

What a pity. The chippie is such a sweet little bird, works so hard for us too, in keeping down insect pests, and here would be a wrecked home, or some sort of a muddle.

I visited the nest almost every day. The chippie eggs hatched out either the same day as the cowbird's egg hatched or the following day. At any rate, the young cowbird was much bigger and it seems to have an uncanny habit of hatching out ahead of or with the other eggs, regardless of time handicap, so that the young one, being bigger, as a rule, than the others, managed to get most of the food. It grew faster than the little chippies and eventually the famiy was reduced to only one young chippie and the young cowbird.

I watched the young cowbird after the nest was vacated, and it was curious to see the chipping sparrows trying to fill it with food. The tiny foster parents, working so hard for a baby three times their size.

The cow bird is a cousin to the English Coo-Coo, which plays the same trick, but the cowbird is not so clever. A coo-coo will specialize on one kind of bird, study its egg, and make eggs marked exactly the same. It is hard to believe but I have seen several examples.

MAN DISAPPEARS IN CITY STREET

Bridgeburg Man Left Wife in Parked Car and Did Not Return.

HAMILTON, June 10.—(Canadian Press.)—The police are unable to understand the mysterious disappearance yesterday afternoon of Mr. Vinehart, of 52 Highland avenue, Bridgeburg. He motored to Hamilton with his wife and three children, and after parking his car in the centre of the city, got out and said he would be back in a few minutes. He did not return. Mrs. Vinehart reported the case to the police and search was made, but without result. Mr. Vinehart is steady in his habits and his wife is at a loss to explain his action. He is 35 years of age.

LONDON, June 10. LOW COST FOUR-WEEK TOUR

Through Western Canada to the Pacific Coast, Yellowstone Park, Salt Lake City and Rocky Mountain National Park.

A never-to-be-forgotten four-week tour of Western Canada and the Pacific Coast with a trip through the United States on the return journey has been planned for Canadian teachers and their friends this summer, leaving Toronto by Canadian National Railways on July 9th.

The trip is simply crammed with scenic and historic wonders. A visit to Wainwright Park, Alberta, where the largest herd of Buffalo in the world is located. Two days are spent at Jasper National Park, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, where the beauty of the mountain scenery is indescribable. From Jasper Park westward the party passes snow-capped Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, and stops at the Indian village of Kitwanga, with its wonderful historic totem poles. Then westward again, following the mystic Skeena River to Prince Rupert, the North Pacific terminal of the Canadian National Railways.

At Prince Rupert a palatial steamer is boarded for the 750 mile trip through the Sheltered Scenic Seas of the North Pacific to Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle. This is recognized as one of the finest sea trips in the world.

On the journey homeward a 72 mile motor drive will be taken from Portland, Oregon, over the famous scenic Columbia River Highway, and five days will be taken for a motor tour of Yellowstone National Park. Then follows a visit to Salt Lake City, Utah, with a three-day motor tour of Rocky Mountain National Park to Colorado. Enroute to Denver short stops will be made at Clear Creek Canyon, Idaho Springs, and Lookout Mountain—where Buffalo Bill is buried. Chicago is reached on August 6th, and Toronto, August 7th.

In spite of the magnitude of the tour, the fare is remarkably reasonable, and as the leaving date is July 9th, arrangements should be made at once. Reservations and illustrated booklets with full information regarding the trip can be secured from A. E. Bryson, 44 Silverthorn ave., Toronto, Martin Kerr, 4 Beulah Ave., Hamilton, or any Canadian National Railways Agent. 4-10-16

MY EUROPEAN EXCURSIONS

By Edwin Robert Petre

THE CARILLONS OF HOLLAND

A famous writer on the carillons of the world says that Holland has more tower music than an other country on earth, with 60 carillons, France has 26, Belgium 43, Germany 14, Great Britain 10 and the 27 others in the world are scattered in other European countries, Canada and the States. It is a never ending delight in this old land, whether you wander the old streets of Amsterdam or Groningen or tarry at Alkmaar or Middleburg, to hear the ripple of the bells singing above the old houses. Tromp and De Ruyter were inspired by such music. Grotius felt its benediction. Vermeer and Rembrandt, Franz Hals and Pieter de Hoogh, listened to it as they painted the life of their time. Holland believes that bells, beautifully singing, add to the happiness of man and cares for them as Americans for their universities.

SPRING FLOWERS IN SWITZERLAND

Unfortunately most Americans see Switzerland in the summer. They would love it more if they could see it now, in all its floral beauty. Sir John Lubbock wrote years ago 'Swiss meadows are sweet and lovely with wild geraniums, harebells, bluebells, pink rest-harrow cherily, eyebright, gentians, red and white silenes and others for which we have no English names." March and April have to be seen in order to be believed, as all descriptions seem exaggerated. The shores of Lake Maggiore and Lugano are carpeted with blooms,—azaleas, magnolias, wisterias, camelas, and rhododendrons, riot amid oranges and lemon blossoms. Over thirty different kinds of Alpine flowers are cultivated and it is testimony to their beauty that touriss as often ask on arrival, where they can find the beautiful Edelweiss, as where they where they can climb the snow-caps for the best sunrises.

UNITED COUNTIES COUNCIL POSTPONES PAVING PLANS

Figures Given By Reeve Wood of Millbrook, School Secretary.

COST NOT HIGH.

Statistics Show That Average is $150 a Pupil a Year.

(By a Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, June 10—Councillors Neil McDonald and R. C. Dox-ee of Hastings appeared before the County Council Tuesday afternoon to ask for a grant for the paving of the connecting links of the county provincial highway in that village. Their case was presented by Engineer A. E. James of Toronto, member of the firm that prepared the plans and made the estimates for the village.

Mr. James explained that for the paving of the streets in question the department would pay 50 per cent of the cost of a strip 20 feet wide in the middle of the roadway provided the counties council would make a grant of an equal amount. This would leave only the pavement on each side of this strip to be paid for by the village.

The estimated cost of paving these streets with cement is $42000 and with asphalt $51,500. The total length of the street is 6700 feet and Hastings share of the cost would be about $27,000. The county bridge in the village will have to be refloored this season. As it is the only means of crossing the river for a distance of 12 miles one way and 34 the other the traffic across it is heavy and the plank flooring soon wears out.

Money Throws Away

Reeve Hess of Hastings also addressed the council on this subject. The village he said was spending from $2000 to $2500 a year oiling and grading these streets and the money was practically thrown away. The time had come to stop this waste by permanent improvement of the roadways.

Reeve Holdaway, of Port Hope, said that the proposition required some thought, as it was a new procedure, the law governing it having been passed at the recent session of the Legislature and if the request of Hastings were granted all the villages in the two counties would soon be looking for the same concessions.

On motion of Reeve Nelson, of Percy, the problem was referred to the county roads commission, consisting of Reeve Holdaway, of Port Hope, Reeve Clark of Cramahe and Warden McCamus.

Will Issue Debentures.

As forecast in The Examiner yesterday the special committee appointed at the January sessions to devise a plan for financing the counties' share of the provincial highway, recommended the issue of debentures to pay the outlay for 1924, nearly $75,000. This report, which was submitted by Reeve Holdaway, was referred to the finance committee.

Portrait of Ex-Warden.

Clerk MacNachtan presented the council with a portrait of George Greer, county superintendent of roads, who was warden in 1916. Mr. Greer was tendered the thanks of the council on motion of Reeve Elliott of Bowmanville and Deputy Reeve Murray of Murray.

Reduced Assessment.

On motion of Reeve Haig, the assessment of his township, Haldimand, was reduced by $2,350, the values of the land taken over by the counties as a site for the Northumberland forest.

Those County Roads.

The council was on the point of adjourning when some one brought up the matter of the county roads which the government has decided to turn back to the townships.

This decision was reached at a meeting in Toronto at which Warden McCamus, Reeves Holdaway and Clarke, were present. For these roads the townships received grants of 50 per cent and when they revert to the townships the grant will be reduced to 30 per cent.

Some of he councillors were vigorous in their criticism of the government's road policy. Reeve Lawson declared that the government had no right to take this matter out of the hands of he council, and Reeve Baker of Darlington asserted that the Provincial highway through the counties had been forced on the people, who did not want it, and should not be made to pay for it.

Seymour township will have about seven miles of county road—that on the east side running past the Fair Grounds, and out the 8th concession, thrown back on its hands. Percy is not affected by the new order as that township has no provincial highway.

Reeve Elliott of Bowmanville, thought the townships would still be entitled to a 30 per cent. grant; and would be practically as well off as under the present system, as they could build a narrower and cheaper road than that called for by the county roads specifications.

On motion of Reeves Wood and Anderson, a telegram was sent to the Department asking that Engineer Muir or some other official, be snt to meet the council on Thursday and Friday to explain the new regulations.

Demonstrated Grader.

A. G. Turnbull of Belleville gave a demonstration with a grader during the afternoon.

As this is the day for Warden McCamus's excursion to Rochester the council adjourned until 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Marriage is now forbidden in China under 18; previously the legal age was 14.

ANTI-UNIONIST COMMISSIONERS

were meeting in Knox Church, and they were in session at the birth of the day which ushered in officially the consummation of Church Union. This they did in the expectation that it will assist in the preservation of their legal rights—that their General Assembly was in session on June 10.

The atmosphere of the Assembly hall was tense during the afternoon and the church was crowded through out the session. It was known that the non-concurrents intended presenting a protest of some sort, but their exact plans had not been revealed.

The first step was taken by the Unionists, when a resolution was introduced declaring that when the Assembly adjourned it would stand adjourned to June 24, "unless in the meantime its rights, privileges, authority and power shall have ceased under the terms of Section 22A of the United Church of Canada Act which gives effect to the union formed by the free and independent action of the negotiating churches." This was intended to prevent the non-concurrents from declaring that out of the present Assembly they were continuing the Presbyterian Church. The anti-Unionists did not challenge the resolution, and there was no debate on it.

The Church Union Committee then presented a reply to objections made by the anti-Unionists Friday last that the Assembly had no authority to go into Union, and that the present Assembly was not representative of the denomination. Rev. George Kilpatrick of Ottawa read the reply, interrrupted freely by applause. It was declared that the refusal of some 700 congregations to "accept the decision of the church courts and to have respect to the constituted authority of the Church as represented by the General Assembly" in no wise affected the principle that when the Church reached a decision it was the Church itself which acted on that decision. "No minority," it was declared, "can overrule the purpose of the Church or usurp the name and authority of the Presbyterian Church in Canada by the claim that the decision for Union is not unanimous."

"We do not deny to non-concurrents the liberty to withdraw from the Church," continued the statement; "we simply deny their pretension to be the Presbyterian Church in Canada, as we deny their each other. Our country needs men of personality, men of conviction, power to continue the Church, which by its own free decision has resolved to enter the Union." Of 3,751 worshipping units, it was stated only 700 had voted against Union. Of 1,128 self-sustaining charges, 952 had voted and 325 had voted non-concurrence. Of the total membership less than 29 per cent. had voted against Union; 80 per cent. of the ministry was Unionist, and 95 per cent. of the foreign missionaries would serve under the United Church.

"The mind of the Church has been abundantly revealed," it was stated, "and the Assembly in consummating Union is giving final effect to the declared will of the Church."

Rev. W. G. Brown, of Red Deer, told the Assembly that 12,048 Unionists in the Maritime had 71 commissioners present and 11,257 anti-Unionists had one commissioner. He was told it would be out of order to debate the reply of the committee, which was received without discussion.

At the hour of adjournment the Moderator, Rev. Dr. Pidgeon, said that Rev. Dr. T. Warlaw Taylor, of Toronto, had asked permission to make a statement. It was, said the Moderator, "an hour fraught with heart-breaks for many people," but they were still brothers and recognized the absolute sincerity of one another.

Dr. Taylor said that in behalf of 79 commissioners to the Assembly he wished to protest against any action being taken which would in any way limit the commissions they held under appointment from presbyteries, or interfere with the full discharge of their obligations.

Rev. Dr. MacKinnon, of Halifax, last year's Moderator, interrupted to say that Dr. Taylor was out of order. The Moderator agreed with him, saying the statement appeared to contravene resolutions the Assembly had adopted. The Assembly had full right to decide on its own adjournment.

"Do you wish to hear the protest?" he asked the Assembly.

"No," came the loud response, with an occasional "Yes."

Dr. Taylor said he had wished to say one word which might have smoothed some of their difficulties. It made absolutely no difference to him, he declared, what was done about the statement, whereupon he left the platform.

Dr. MacKinnon remarked that the Assembly always had conducted its business in a constitutional manner. Dr. Taylor's document was neither a dissent nor a protest, and should have gone to the business committee. "It is better," he said, "to be truly Presbyterian." Dr. Taylor had left the statement on the Moderator's desk, and a commissioner arose in the hall to suggest that it be handed back. It was sent down to the floor, but Dr. Taylor did not accept it, and a few minutes later it was back on the platform near Dr. Pidgeon's feet.

The Moderator then called upon Dr. MacKinnon to conduct a brief devotional period, after which the Assembly adjourned. Immediately the non-concurrents gathered, by prior arrangement, in one corner of the church, and someone moved that Rev. Dr. McQueen take the chair as acting Moderator. Dr. McQueen led in prayer, and it was moved that the Assembly adjourn to meet in Knox Church at 11.45 p.m. standard time. This was agreed to, and the non-concurrents joined their Unionist brethren in the aisles. They declared there would be only some routine business at last night's meeting, but that they would continue in session until midnight had brought into effect the Federal Act consummating the Union. This, they declared, would prevent any break in the continuous history of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

The non-concurrents' protest, which was not read, declared that the ministers and elders of the Assembly were under a solemn engagement to "maintain and defend the government of the Church." The basis of Union with the Methodists and Congregationalists contained "very many features inconsistent with the standards of the Church," and they protested that they could not go into Union or acquiesce in the decision of the 'prevailing party' to enter this Union. The basis of Union was said to be beyond the power of any General Assembly.

It was therefore lawful, continued the protest, for the non-concurrent commissioners to continue in session the present Assembly, and they protested that they were not responsible for the schism in the Church or for any consequences which might flow from "this enforced separation."

The report of the Foreign Mission Board was adopted, following an address by Rev. Dr. R. P. MacKay, the secretary. Rev. N. H. MacGillivray, of Orillia, who said he was the only non-concurrent on the Board, suggested that a committee representing both branches of the Church see what it could do about a division of the foreign mission field, but no action along that line was taken. A resolution of thanks to Dr. MacKay for his services was adopted with enthusiasm.

Attention of Parliament was called to its delay in "making illegal the business of betting." Gambling, it was stated in a resolution, was spreading like a plague through society and every member of Parliament was urged to support such legislation as would eliminate the evil. Another resolution expressed regret that amendments to the criminal code now before the Commons would permit the use of wheels of fortune and other gambling devices at agricultural fairs.

A resolution sponsored by James Taylor, of Gatineau River, and referred to a committee, asserted that "sections of the social order other than the primary producers must submit themselves to reduced earnings."

It was announced that the Presbyterian Record, a denominational magazine, would be continued, although they had failed to get possession of the paper, which has been edited for many years by Rev. Dr. E. S. Scott, of Montreal, an anti-Unionist.

Rev. Dr. W. G. Wallace and Rev. Dr. R. B. Cochrane, both of Toronto, were re-appointed joint clerks of the Assembly.

Joseph Longo and Michael Cacavella Seek Niches In Empire's Greatest Commonwealth

Two natives of Italy, Joseph Longo and Michael Cacavella, both living in Peterborough sought naturalization papers at the June Session of the Peace yesterday before His Honor Judge Huycke. The judge in announcing his decision to let the applications stand until others pending are heard emphasized the greatness of the privilege they sought in desiring to become British subjects and Canadian citizens. Other countries, he said, especially in the Old World, were still passing through trying times, even their own country, Italy, was not yet within sight of the end of her difficulties. But as Canadians they would become citizens of a country free from domestic warfare, a country where liberty of thought and of religion prevailed from one end to the other. He could think of no privilege at the present time comparable to that of being a British subject. But he added these privileges entailed certain responsibilities. As British subjects they must be law-abiding, square dealing and always willing to work hard. To Canada their allegiance would belong in the future, not to any other country, not even to their own native country. To Canada they must always be willing to devote themselves in war and in peace. The judge congratulated both applicants on the favorable testimonies given on their behalf, and stated that he believed the privilege they sought would eventually be granted.

CAMPBELLFORD HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS COST $95 EACH

COST $42,000.

Money Now Spent on Street is Thrown Away, Says Reeve.

(By a Staff Reporter).

COBOURG, June 10.—It costs $15 per capita to educate the students in the Campbellford High School, according to the figures of Reeve Wood of Millbrook, secretary of the Counties' Council committee on schools of which Deeputy-Reeve Nelson of Peercy is chairman. These figures are based on the annual report of Seecretary Wesley Stephens of the Campbellford Board of Education.

Comparatively speaking this cost is not high. In the Newcastle High School the per capita expenditure is the highest of any high school in the two counties, being $110. Statistics prepared by the Department of Education show that the average per capita cost for all the high schools and collegiate institutes in Ontario is $150 a year.

The total cost of maintaing the Campbellford High School last year was $19,276.01.

To this must be added 80 per cent. for debentures and interest, to pay for the building of the new building. This brings the total outlay for the year to $23,835.08.

The Legislative grant was $1,712.50, bringing the amount to be appropriated for the year to $22,122.58.

This amount is charged up to the High School district and the county in proportion to the number of students attending from town and county during the past three years, the ratio being about three to five.

The total number of pupils attending from the county for the past three years was 33.471 and the total attendance from town and county for the same period was 86,507.

The county's share of the $22,122.58 to be apportioned is $8.551.85 and this sum will be paid Campbellford as recommended by the committee.

The total debenture payment on the new building this year is $5,698.83.

School at Warkworth

Warkworth Continuation School cost $6,404.96 for maintenance and the amount, less the $788.27 legislative grant, to be apportioned is $5,616.09 of which the county grant for outside students will be $3,478.65.

The United Counties will pay the Norwood School Board $939.36 for the tuition of students from Northumberland nearly all of whom come rom the vicinity of Hastings.

The amount is divided as follows between the various provinces: Maritime Provinces $540,000, Ontario and Quebec $562,500, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta $90,000, and British Columbia $375,000.

MISSIONARY GAVE ADDRESS IN OMEMEE

Miss Harris, Daughter of Former Rector, Has Returned From Egypt.

OMEMEE, June 10.—An interesting visitor to Omemee last week was Miss Harris, returned missionary from Cairo, Egypt. Miss Harris spent a portion of her girlhood days in Omemee, being the daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Harris, a former rector of Christ Church. During her short stay in Omemee, Miss Harris was the guest of the Misses Cornwall, at whose home she received many old acquaintances.

On Friday evening a rare treat was afforded those who were fortunate enough to be present in the basement of Christ Church, when Miss Harris gave a most interesting address on her work among the Egyptians, the talk being illustrated with many beautifully colored lantern slides.

Miss Harris will not return to Egypt owing to failing eyesight.

Klan in Omemee.

Considerable consternation was felt among citizens in general when it was learned that on Sunday last an effort had been made by two American organizers to organize a branch of the Ku Klux Klan in Omemee. Admission was gained by ticket, and quite a large number of people were present.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS HEARD

month was required. The church voted Union, and many who would like to have left it cannot because they are tied by bonds to the lifting of the mortgage.

A. C. Reeves told about the Church in Southern Saskatchewan, stating there were many substantial majorities, including Regina, which had a continuing group of 400 members worshipping in the City Hall. "We will need help for the next 12 months," he said. There were 20 churches which voted out and there were 20 minority groups.

Rev. R. P. Patterson of Brandon said that the doors of the churches in Winnipeg at first had been practically closed against anti-Union speakers. The first three congregations to vote in Manitoba had voted against Union by huge majorities, he said. Manitoba is just starting to vote. Churches which had been Union for years in Manitoba, he said, were now asking to get out of Union. Rev. R. J. Stewart, Neepawa, declared that the policy of Union was insane. It might be a financial success, but it could at the same time be a moral failure. He declared that anti-Unionists had been bull-dozed, browbeaten and bullied and those who did at the same time invoked the blessing of the most high.

Rev. F. D. Roxburgh of Edmonton said that in his Presbytery, out of 13 churches, six were staying with the Presbyterians, and the greatest prize was First Church, Edmonton, the mother church of Presbyterianism in Alberta

"The ministers have failed the Presbyterian Church in Canada," said Rev. J. B. Thompson, of Banff. "Those pledged to build up the Presbyterian Church in Canada have destroyed it. There never has been more dirty work done in politics than there has been in the Union movement.

Rev. John Kennedy (McLeod) said that Lethbridge was the only city in Alberta in which the Presbyterians did not have a church, but they were worshipping in a hall given them by the Anglicans.

Alex. Matheson, a veteran Presbyterian of Manitoba, who, introducing himself, said he was 18 years older than Winnipeg, spoke of the historic church of Kildonan in Manitoba, and of how he had helped build it and other churches. "They can't take my church from me now," he declared dramatically. He was given a tremendous reception by the congress.

Mrs. E. B. Busteed, of Montreal, spoke of the activities of the Women's Missionary Society in the Continuing Presbyterian churches of the east, and Rev. Dr. Jos. Wilkie, missionary in India, said it was untrue that the missionaries were unanimous for Union.

At the close of the session Chairman Thos. McMillan announced that the latest report showed that 743 congregations had voted against Union and that 125 minority groups were organized. "The prospects are good for more than 1,000 Presbyterian congregations in Canada," he said. On the Dominion ballot there were 104,105 voting for Union and 110,105 against. In Ontario 65,634 voted for Union and 79,695 against.

certainly be claimed by us for the United States."

He intimated that his party would seek land in the region lying partly north of the Dominion but the greater part would be north of Alaska.

"If we find anything we shall claim it for the United States," he said, "and I think that the nations of the world will regard it as just."

THE EXAMINER'S POSITION.

It has been asserted that criticism such has been directed against the Council's stand in regard to Sunday bathing and band concerts makes it difficult to get good men to offer themselves for aldermanic positions.

That contention is open to argument, but if it were true it would not justify remaining silent in the face of an action that, smacking of class legislation, interferes with the rights of a large proportion of the population.

The Examiner would be derelict in its duty to the community it serves if it failed to protest against something that we believe is harmful to the interests of the people.

There is nothing personal in this controversy.

We have no quarrel with any of the members of the City Council; they are estimable citizens, actuated no doubt by the best possible motives in making their decision.

But we do disagree with their judgment in this matter, although quite willing, in fairness, to admit that doubtless some of those at least who voted against Sunday bathing and failed to do anything to secure Sunday band concerts did not grasp the full import of their action.

The Examiner is confident that its own views on these questions are the views of nine-tenths of the people of Peterboro, and on their behalf therefore urges a reconsideration of the two issues.

PLAYING THE GAME.

Prizes offered for the biggest game fish caught during the season adds a certain tang to the activities of the anglers, but the Examiner would like to suggest a competition in sportsmanship as more likely to assist in the conservation of the fishery resources of the district.

Just how the most sportsmanlike fisherman could be selected offers some perplexing angles, it is true, but the fact remains that there is need of something of this kind as an objective lesson to the fish "hogs" whose idea of sport is to see how many game fish they can kill in a day.

We have too many of these gentry, both of the imported and of the home-grown variety.

Every district knows them—the anglers who catch a boat-load of fish for the mere pleasure of catching them.

They generally bag more fish than they have any possible use for, and their inroads take a heavy toll each year.

What we really need in local waters and throughout Ontario is a bigger proportion of fishermen who will be good fellows enough to obey the regulations, who will be satisfied with a legal day's catch and will be scrupulous about the size of the fish they keep—in other words, will play the game fairly and squarely.

Everybody will benefit in the long run if the fish "hogs" can be converted into fishermen of the type just described.

"KEEP THE MONEY IN THE COUNTRY."

While there is no evidence that "Red" Newman, popular comedian of the Dumbells company, has been subsidized by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, there is no doubt that the song he is singing in the Dumbells' latest revue, "Keep the Money in the Country," will receive the hearty approval of that body.

The words of the song contain the same message to Canadians that the billboards throughout the country have been carrying in effect to buy goods made in Canada and thus help to provide employment for the Canadian workers.

Whether from the lips of a stage comedian or in the big letters of a billboard poster, it is good advice that we would do well to remember.

We do spend a lot of money on goods made in foreign countries that if expended on similar articles made at home would keep Canadian factories humming and settle the unemployment problem, and it is well that we should frequently be reminded of that fact.

If the average citizen would learn to look for the made-in-Canada label on the articles he purchases and take a pride in buying only products so marked, the result so far as the unemployment situation is concerned would be an almost instantaneous improvement.

Jovial "Red" Newman, singing his message from one end of the country to the other, may prove a better propagandist than the poster writers who have attempted the same task.

TODAY'S CEREMONY.

So much prominence has been attached to the schism created in the Presbyterian Church that it is perhaps difficult for most people to grasp the epochal importance of the ceremony by which the Union of three Canadian churches is being consummated to-day.

Its significance will perhaps not be clearly revealed until illuminated by the light of history, for it is apparent that Canadians generally are not taking as wide a view of the event as its importance merits.

Today the Methodist and Congregationalist Churches, taking their entire membership with them, are entering into a partnership that unites them in a common faith and under a common name with a large proportion of the Presbyterians of Canada.

The sacrifices that have been made in scrapping the traditions of these churches, in giving up much that was dear to their members, have not been light, and it is an encouraging portent that it has been possible to bring about such a movement in the face of the recognized tendency of religious bodies not to come together but to pull apart.

In the disruption that has been caused in the Presbyterian Church much of the significance of the historic step taken today has been lost sight of, but Canadians should not fail to realize that a most important event in ecclesiastical circles is being consummated, an event that will perhaps blaze the trail to a still larger Union in the days to come.

BEING DOG-CATCHER IN PETERBORO.

Being the official dog-catch in Peterboro is not such a simple matter as might appear on the surface. Offhand, and without looking up the Municipal Act, one might guess that the business of the dog-catcher would be to catch dogs. That's as simple as it is apparent and as apparent as it is simple, but, according to the Peterboro Examiner it does not work out that way at all. The official must have a streak of diplomacy in him: he must get just those dogs whose presence in the dog cart will not raise a cry, "There goes my prize poodle!"

Judging from the remarks in the Peterboro paper, dogs just naturally divide into several classes. There's the mongrel that makes his home in many places; he's a specialist in garbage cans, and can go with the unerring precision of a homing pigeon to the homes where the framework of a rooster gets thrown out without being bleached for soup. He knows the tulip beds where it is easiest to cache a bone. Instinct and education have taught him many things that a dog with a pedigree and doused with flea powder knows nothing about. The trouble seems to be in Peterboro that when the dog-catcher starts after this animal he's not where the official saw him last. He got early training by being kicked under the back shed when the assessor came around, and the great truth was established in his young mind that there were enemies in the land.

On the other hand, some of the Peterboro dogs are just naturally easy marks. They fall for the dog-catcher as easily as some humans succumb to oil stocks and some new-fangled sort of silver polish. Just a few weeks ago a hound belonging to the Deputy-Speaker of the Commons at Ottawa was scooped in by the dog-catcher in Peterboro while his master was busy trying to keep the steaming statesmen from saving the nation too abruptly. So there's indignation in the city. The official catcher can't catch the dogs that should be caught because they're too smart, and he evens up the score by caging the easy marks, the trusting, perfumed, pedigreed dogs that shouldn't be caught.

Being Mayor of Peterboro would be a more desirable occupation than acting as official dog-catcher. His Worship gets his blame and praise and honor mixed in fairly even quantities, but the dog-catcher gathers to himself no praise, no honor, but just large sections of blame.—London Advertiser.

AW, COME AND SEE US JUST THIS ONCE!

The utterly fantastic notions harbored by Old Ontario about New Ontario seem ineradicable. We in Algoma know that Old Ontario remembers us nightly in its prayers; its prosperity is bound up in our development. But when we ask our own folks to believe that our climate is practically the same as theirs, that the fertility of our soil is unexcelled, that there are opportunities every few rods in this northland to get ahead, we are met by a sympathetic shake of the head.

What is it we have to overcome to get Canada interested in this matchless mining and timber and agricultural land?

Just common human inability to change the settled belief of years.

What good does it do to tell a Toronto man that the mean summer temperature of Moose Factory on James Bay is only 5 degrees cooler than Toronto—figures printed by the Dominion Government—what good does it do?

What good does it do to tell the Old Ontario farmer that they grow oats eight feet high on the Transcontinental at Hearst, 350 miles north of the Soo. Oh, but doesn't everybody know the Soo is a frozen waste, so how could the biggest potatoes in Ontario come from hundreds of miles north of it.

Tell a canny Ontario man Michipicoten is full of gold, and he knows you're just spoofing him. For this eason Algoma should tell the world that a closed London syndicate has decided to sink $750,000 in developing Jim Cline's property east of Goudreau—if Algoma never got a dollar out of this marvellous find, it would feel grateful to the English corporation, which has just made its second big payment on the property. For it has justified us. And we pray that the Detroit men who have so much faith in us that they have spent $10,000 on an iron ore find near the Soo—and have decided to spend $50,000 more on the strength of the first drilling operations—will all be millionaires. For they, too, have justified us. If we didn't have so much doubting in Old Ontario, Canadians would be richer.

We are not ungrateful for the countless generous things said and done by Old Ontario for us. But we see that some other power must wake up our people if they are to not let the stranger reap the opportunities here.

If Old Ontario would realize that the chance visits of people has had an enormous part in the development of New Ontario—

Two hundred thousands dollars is being spent at Kagawong in the building of a pulp mill by an American visitor who was drawn there by the fishing.

Mr. Clergue's outpouring of millions of dollars in Algoma was the result of a chance meeting on a train.

"You never can tell what will come out of a chance visit of a man to New Ontario," said a visitor at a recent meeting in town when telling of some of the chance things that have happened.

If our own people would only come once and look us over—just once!—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Premier Ferguson threatens that those who charge too much for 4.4 beer may lose their licenses. Offenders should not miss the point.

The trouble is, that while the Chicago water diversion case is being bandied about in the courts, the Windy City continues to steal the water.

June seems to be overdoing this business of making up for May's turning the cold shoulder upon us.

Something wrong here. A Chicago policeman was shot by a robber and the Chicago News put an eight-column streamer head on the story. It was always supposed that killings are so common in Chicago that only in the event of two victims being nailed with one shot would there be much newspaper display.

At least the hot wave has given the talkative politicians at Ottawa something fresh to talk about.

The Rotary Carnival next month will furnish a new rallying point for community effort. The work of caring for crippled hildren deserves general support.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Business was practically at a standstill at the cattle market this morning. There was about four thousand cattle standing in the yards, and not quite that number of cattle buyers standing around looking at them, but doing no bidding.

Hot weather and nothing doing in the wholesale beef trade is primarily the reason for the temporary suspension of business, though there are other reasons. It was given out last week that there would this week be plenty of space available for the export trade. It is true that there is no lack of space, but it happens that the boats do not sail until Saturday, and consequently no reason why export buyers shoud buy earlier in the week than they are forced to any pay heavy feed bills into the bargain. So export trade is quiet, temporarily, and meanwhile prices getting easier.

Butcher trade quiet, but with a return to cooler weather will revive.

Calves very dull and one to two dollars lower.

Sheep and lambs quiet.

Hogs steady at $11.75.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, June 10 (Canadian Press).—Receipts are falling off sharply and quality is poorer, making prices firmer for specials and extras, and easier for the lower grades. Winnipeg is offering extras 30 1-4, firsts 29 1-4, seconds 25 1-2 f.o.b. shipping point.

Toronto and Montreal—Firm and unchanged.

Winnipeg — Jobbing, extras 31, first 29, seconds 26.

Saskatchewan — Jobbing, extras 28, firsts 25-27, seconds 22-24.

Alberta—Unchanged.

Chicago—Spot 30 1-4, June 31, December 34 1-2.

New York—Extra firsts 33 1-2; firsts 32 1-2, extra firsts storage packed 34 1-2; firsts, storage packed, 33 1-2; December, refrigerators, 36.

Cable Prices, shillings per ten dozen):

Glasgow—Irish 11s.-13c. f.o.b., good supply demand; Danish, 16's, 13s; 18's, 15s; nominal. Retail unchanged.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, June 10 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.85 5-8.

Sterling cables, $4.86 1-8.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 10 (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was steady, but the volume of business accomplished was small owing to the fact that quite a few of the orders received were at prices that could not be accepted. The continent was after Manitoba No. 5 and 6 wheat, but prices bid were three to four cents per bushel below working basis. The Uunited Kingdom bought odd loads of oats and barley for June shipment. No 2 Canadian Western oats were sold at about 15 3-4 cents to 16 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal, and some sales of No. 4 barley were made to Bristol at 35s 9d per quarter.

The demand for cash grain in the local market was better, including sales of No. 3 barley at 11 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, No. 4 grade at 7 1-2 cents per bushel over, and feed barley at 2 1-2 cents per bushel over c.i.f Montreal, while No. 1 feed oats sold at 2 cents per bushel over the same option, c.i.f. Montreal. It was reported that New York exporters bought some round lots of tough No. 2 and No. 3 oats direct from Winnipeg at c.i.f. prices Montreal. The domestic trade in car lots of oats was quiet, but the undertone to the market was stronger in sympathy with Winnipeg and prices at the close were advanced 1 cent per busnel.

The export trade in spring wheat flour continues to be of a very limited character owing to the fact that buyers have not been disposed to pay the prices asked, but the demand from the Continent has shown some improvement of late and the movement in this direction is larger than it has been of late. There has also been some business transacted with the British West Indies and South Africa, but the volume on the whole was not large and the market remains quiet. The domestic and country trade shows no improvement, the demand being only for odd lots, but the undertone to the market was steady.

A moderate amount of business continue to be done in baled hay and as supplies were more than ample to meet all requirements owing to the somewhat liberal receipts of late, a steady feeling prevailed in the market, but prices were unchanged with car lots of good No. 2 timothy hay selling at $14 to $15 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

The market for Winter wheat flour was also quiet but steady.

There was no actual change in the condition of the millfeed situation, prices for all lines being firmly maintained under a continued good demand of supplies for domestic and country account, and a fair volume of business was done in broken lots. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm, but the volume of business was somewhat limited.

There were no further developments in the local egg situation, but the undertone to the market was very firm at the late advance in prices noted. Owing to the excessive heat prevailing the trade in a wholesale jobbing way was rather quiet owing to the fact that buyers are only purchasing small lots to meet their daily requirements and the movement was somewhat light. Sales of specials were made at 38c to 39c, fresh extras at 36c, firsts at 34c, and seconds at 29c per dozen. The receipts yesterday were 2,741 cases, as against 3,739 for the same day last week, and 2,577 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of butter in Montreal today were 1,946 packages, as against 303 for the same day last week, and 1,636 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no further change in the condition of the market, but the undertone was firm at the late advance in prices noted. Asteady business continues to be done, but the volume was not large owing to the fact that there was practically no demand from outside sources for supplies and the trade for export account has not set in yet, it being well into July last year before there was any movement of importance in that direction.

The receipts of hceese were 15,517 boxs, as compared with 11,759 for the same day last week, and 16,964 for the corresponding day a year ago. A feature of the trade was the slight improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for supplies and as cables were stronger at an advance of 1s per cwt. in some cases, a moderate amount of business was done, but the strength in the situation of late has been due almost entirely to shorts covering. The trade on spot between houses was reported quiet.

On the local curb market there were 1,000 packages creamery butter, and 2,500 boxes cheese offered. The No. 1 pasteurized creamery butter sold at 34 1-4 cents per lb., No. 1 creamery at 33 1-2 cents per lb, and No. 2 creamery at 32 1-2 cents per lb. which prices were 1 3-8 cent per lb. higher than a week ago ,and the cheese was disposed of at 18 cents per lb., delivered here.

Beans were steady at $2.65 per bushel.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK

CHICAGO, June 10 (Canadian Press).—Cattle receipts 8,000; all grades yearlings and strictly choice medium and heavy steers, steady, in between grades 10 to 15 cents lower; spots off more; few loads heavies taken off market; extreme top matured steers 11.25; average weight 1,413 pounds. Several loads 11.00 to 11.15, some 1,527 pound averages 10.75; rough but fat heavies late at 10.30 to 10.50; light heifers upward to 11.00 in load lots.

Hog receipts 21,000; irregular; medium and heavyweight butchers and packing sows opened 10 cents higher; closed slow; early advance lost; lighter weights dull; desirable grades steady; others weak; light lights and killing pigs largely 25c lower; bulk good and choice 210 to 350 lb. butchers 12.10 to 12.40; early top 12.25; estimated holdover 13,000.

Sheep receipts 8,000; fat lambs and yearlings mostly 25c higher; sheep scarce, steady; feeding lambs weak to 15 cent lower; bulk fat ews, 5.50 to 6.50; choice feeding lambs 13.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 10 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices tended upward most of the time yesterday influenced by correct general assumption that the government crop report this afternoon would show a big curtailment of the estimated yield, bith as compared with a month ago and with last year as well. The wheat market closed unsettled 5-8 to 1 1-4 cents net higher, July 166 5-8 to 166 3-4, and Sept. 163 to 163 1-4.

Corn finished at half to 2 cents gain; oats 2 1-4 to 2 7-8 cents up, and provisions showing 17 to 37 cents advance.

It turned out that the government report indicated a gool deal smaller crop of winter wheat than most traders had looked for, but that the government estimate as to the size of the spring wheat crop was larger than had been generally expected. The government aggregate for both winter and spring wheat was below the average of the unofficial estimates here. Aside from the influence of the government report considerable buying of wheat early was based on advices from a leading expert that the Kansas crop in particular had been greatly reduced by the heat wave and that many fields which promised 15 bushels had shrunk to 10.

Increased reports of damage to the oats crop gave strength both to corn and oats. December oats established a new high price record for the season. Diminishing receipts were an additional factor as to corn.

Better demand for lard helped to hoist the provision market.

AMERICAN CROPS

WASHINGTON, June 10 (Canadian Press).—The total wheat crop of the United States, forecast today by the Department of Agriculture, 661,000,000 bushels, is the smallest since 1917, and 212,000,000 less than produced last year.

Commenting on the forecast, the crop reporting board stated that 'the requirements of wheat for domestic consumption do not greatly differ from this amount," indicating that there would be little or no wheat for export from this year's crop.

While the barley crop is larger than last year's production, those of oats, rye, hay, peaches and pears are smaller.

WOMAN ARRESTED

NO COMMISSION.

OTTAWA, June 10 (Canadian Press).—A bill providing for relief by the Government to depositors of the Home Bank, to the extent of $5,450,000 received second reading in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, and was put through committee stage without amendment. The bill now stands for third reading at the next sitting of the House.

In reply to E. B. Ryckman (Conservative, Toronto East), Hon. J. A. Robb, acting minister of finance, stated that no commission would be paid in this matter to the liquidator in respect to the distribution of this amount to the depositors, and in support of his statement Mr. Robb read a letter from W. T. J. Lee, chaiman of the Home Bank Depositors Relief Association.

Hon. J. B. M. Baxter (Conservative, St. John Albert) suggested certain changes in Clause 6 with a view to preventing speculators benefitting in any way, but Mr. Robb intimated that he did not see any necessity for a change.

GREAT CEREMONIAL BEING HELD THIS MORNING TO INAUGURATE FORMALLY THE UNITED CHURCH

Morning Service of Dedication Expected to Draw Crowd of 8,000.

SIGN NEW ROLL.

Delegates Will Sign at Afternoon Service—Meeting at Night.

TORONTO, June 10 (Canadian Press).—Eight thousand people will pack the huge Toronto Arena this morning to witness the devout ceremonial which introduces to the world the United Church of Canada, into which will be merged the Methodists, the Congregationalists, and the Unionist Presbyterians. Governing bodies of these three denominations have concluded their separate and final gatherings, their houses have been put in order for the consummation of Union, and all that remains is the formal step.

Three services are to be held at the Arena. The 350 official delegates to the first General Council of the United Church will sit in front of the platform. There will be 150 of them nominated by the Methodist Church, 150 from the Presbyterian Church, 40 Congregationalists, and 10 representatives of Independent Union churches, mostly from Western Canada.

Heads of the three denominations will participate in a solmen service of dedication and inauguration, and communion will be served to all the great assembly.

In the afternoon, the delegates will sign the roll of the new church, and addresses will be given by a prominent representative of each uniting denomination. Delegates from the overseas church will address the crowd in the evening. The following day the delegates move to Metropolitan Church for the organization business of the first council.

OCEAN RATES IN COMMITTEE YET

Special Body Met Yesterday to Consider Report to House.

"NOTHING FOR PRESS."

OTTAWA, June 10 (Canadian Press).—Although the special parliamentary committee on ocean rates sat for more than two hours yesterday afternoon, Chairman A. R. McMaster had "nothing for the press" when the sitting terminated. The committee met in camera to consider the report it will make to the House of Commons. It is understood that a draft report presented met with some opposition. Adjournment until Thursday morning was finally agreed upon.

The latter part of yesterday's sitting was occupied in listening to a statement by Thomas Sales, Progressive member for Saltcoats, on the export dressed meat business. Witnesses who have already given evidence did not favor this business. Mr. Sales, while supporting efforts to get lower rates for shipments of live cattle, expressed the view that Canada's market in Great Britain could be widened very materially if the export of dressed meat was pushed. A market could be secured in Great Britain for beef from Canadian heifers and for Canadian shop hogs, both of which were popular in Great Britain.

If rates could be reduced, the dressed meat export business could be carried on at the same time as the export cattle business, if reduction in rates could not be obtained, then the export of dressed beef might be considered as an alternative proposal to the shipping of live cattle, Mr. Sales suggested.

Same Old Story On Gold Stampede Into Cassiar

SEATTLE, Wn., June 10 (Canadian Press).—F. J. Cotter, in a despatch from Telegraph Creek, B.C., to the Post-Intelligencer, published here yesterday, says the stampede into the newly discovered gold field of the Cassiar district of Northern British Columbia is the old story of the North—prospectors going in, unaffected by the stories of those coming out, food shortage and no pay except to the original discoverers.

Cotter reported freight and passengers moving rapidly on the Dease Lake trail, tractory being used with success.

Men hurrying in to Dease Lake and beyond from Telegraph Creek are buying the outfits of those who have given up the search and turned homeward.

RETRENCHMENT IN EXPENDITURE VERY NECESSARY

Public Debt Must Be Reduced to Save Canada From Disaster.

RESTRICT REPORT.

Keep Raw Materials Here and Use Canadian Coal Says Senator.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 10.—Retrenchment in expenditure and reduction of the public debt must be accomplished if Canada is to be saved from national disaster, Senator McMeans stated in the Senate yesterday. He asserted that, with her railway commitments, Canada's National liability had reached the neighbourhood of $3,333,000,000 and he asserted that this debt was steadily increasing.

He favoured a reduction in the export of raw materials such as pulpwood and asbestos and advocated a national coal policy which would make possible the transportation of coal from Alberta and Nova Scotia to Central Canada. He urged the necessity for a tariff policy which would afford higher protection to industry. He condemned the proposed expenditure of $5,000,000 on the harbor of Quebec.

Senator McCormick said that Nova Scotia was being depopulated through freight rate discrimination and lack of protective tariff. He thought the government should give some preferential rates on the products of the Maritime provinces as well as on grain and flour from the west.

Senator Dandurand, government leader, thought it was agreed by everybody that favorable freight rates should be given to the wheat and flour from the west, and that all Canada should make some sacrifice to aid these great industries. The railway commission had been instructed to give special consideration, in its review of freight rates, to conditions in the Maritime Provinces. He believed that conditions in Canada had improved and would continue to improve. As regards the export of raw materials it should be remembered that in the light of Canada's imports of coal, wool and cotton, the balance was not much against Canada.

The Government did not propose to change its fiscal policy, he said. Present conditions justified the present policy. The budget had been balanced and the majority of the manufacturers of the Dominion were satisfied with the government's policy. Canada should pursue the middle road in fiscal matters.

SET BACK DATE OWING TO DELAY

Alberta House Cannot Meet Until Federal Government Acts.

MEET JULY 2.

EDMONTON, Alta, June 10 (Canadian Press). — The Alberta Legislature's summer session has been moved two weeks ahead, still on a provisional basis only. An order-in-council has just been passed further adjourning the House until July 2.

The terms of the original adjournment set the date as June 15, but this was qualified by the addition of 'such other date prior as subsequently may be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor."

It has been found impossible, owing to the delay in geting a settlement at Ottawa of the railways and resources questions to call the House together on the date first proposed and a readjustment has, therefore, been taken to the Thursday following Dominion Day.

NECESSARY FOR PAINLEVE TO GO TO SEAT OF WAR

French Premier's Departure Brings Home Reality of War in Morocco.

TAKE OFFENSIVE.

Thought That Preparation of Planes Means Change in French Tactics.

PARIS, June 10. Canadian Press—The departure by airplane for Morocco yesterday afternoon of Paul Painleve, Premier and Minister of War, brought home to a majority of the French people the realization that war is in progress in Northern Africa.

The colorless communiques issued by the War Office, reducing the operation of the French against the Moors to skirmishes, had lulled Paris into a humorous temper; but the people on the boulevards changed their minds this evening when they found that M. Painleve, considered an apostle of peace, and known as France's most "civilian minister of war," had found it necessary to leave Paris and proceed to the scene of operations. At first it was intended that General Debeny, who is known as France's most aggressive general since the death of General Pangin, should accompany the Premier, but almost at the last minute before the departure of the planes it was found that General Debeny would not be available. Therefore General Jacquemot, Chief of the Premier's military staff, was substituted. The premier also is accompanied by M. Laurent Eynas, Under Secretary of State for Aviation.

The fact that the Under-Secretary for Aviation is a member of the party was interpreted in military circles as meaning that the government had resolved to discontinue its policy of "watchful waiting" while the Moors are consecrating and would throw into battle all the resources of France's peerless aviation contingents.

The activity last night around Bourget, Boc, Orly and Issy, the four leading airplane centres in the vicinity of Paris, is regarded as meaning that the request of Marsha Lyautey, the French Resident General in Morocco, for an additional 150 plan will be granted.

The first announcement of the impending departure of M. Painleve was interpreted as a political move to keep parliament in line; but the rapidity with which the entir chamber, with the exception of the Communist deputies threw out the demand of the Communist member Dorriet for an immediate discussion of the Moroccan situa showed that the Chamber stood practically solid behind M. Painleve and that his departure for Fez likely meant a radical change in the French war methods against the Moors.

Open criticism of the passive attitude of the French troops before Moorish onslaughts recently became so violent that the government was obliged to take heed of public sentiment. The negotiations with Spain have reached a point where General Primo De Rivera, head of the Military Directorate in Spain, is reported to have agreed in principle an a French blockade of Mediterranean ports under the Spanish protectorate in cooperation with Spain. The Painleve cabinet is committed exclusively to defensive warfare in Morocco. It obtained a vote of confidence in the Chamber on May 29th, after having made this declaration. The feeling was expressed in military circles this evening, however, that France had decided to strike a great blow against the rebel tribesmen and force Abd-El-Krim, their leader, into submission. It is considered that the next few days probably will see a radical change in France's military policy in the Riff region.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS HEARD BY CONTINUING PRESBYTERIANS ABOUT CONDITIONS IN THE WEST

Delegates From West Tell of Churches Which Voted to Stay Out.

POLICY INSANE.

Union May Be Financial Success, But Moral Failure, Says One.

TORONTO, June 10. (Canadian Press).—Western Canada Presbyterians reported on their strength and prospects to the congress of the Continuing Presbyterians in Cooke's Church yesterday afternoon. All the delegates made demands for men to carry on the Presbyterian cause on the prairies and maintained that there were many minorities which were the nucleus of a great Presbyterian church. They also had severe criticism for the methods adopted by the Unionists in the Western parts.

Delegates from British Columbia reported that the Chinese Presbyterian churches in Victoria and Vancouver had voted to remain with the Church. In Victoria four out of the six churches, it was stated, voted to remain Presbyterian. In Vancouver the Presbyterians held seven churches, and all five churches in New Westminster had voted against Union. There were also strong bodies of Presbyterians in other parts of the province. "If any one thinks that the West is unanimous for Union they should go out there and get their eyes open," said one delegate. Although the staff of the Presbyterian College in Vancouver was all Union, 50 per cent. of the students opposed it. Altogether, the Presbyterians had 49 congregations in British Columbia. Naimino voted against Union, but there has been a fight about the matter, and Rev. Mr. Lister, who is a Continuing Presbyterian, said that before he left for the Assembly he had boarded up the windows and put a new Yale lock on the door to hold the church for the Presbyterians. He appealed to the congress for support in his action.

A. R. Bie explained the situation in Moose Jaw, where the Presbyterians building away beyond their necessities expecting a bigger growth for their city had for some years labored under such a heavy mortgage that $1,000 interest a

MACMILLAN TO CLAIM ANY LAND HE DISCOVERS

U.S.A. Recognizes Claims to Land Only When Posts Are Established.

CANADA'S CLAIMS.

All Islands North of Canada Are Claimed by the Dominion.

WASHINGTON, June 10. (Canadian Press).—Legal officers of the State Department had under consideration yesterday a request from Donald B. MacMillan, Arctic explorer, for information as to the attitude the Washington Government might take in the event that controversy might arise over any discoveries of land by the expedition he will lead this summer into the Polar regions.

The exact nature of the questions asked by Dr. MacMillan has not been disclosed, nor would State Department officials comment in any way upon his communication. It is understood, however, that the letter raises questions involving the policies of the Government in supporting claims to newly discovered lands, the primary object of the MacMillan expedition being to determine whether the vast unexplored area in the vicinity of the Pole actually does contain an unknown continent.

In advance of a complete study of the subject precipitated by the communication it is held by some Departmental officials that the Washington Government is committed to a policy of supporting claims to such lands only when physical discovery is followed by settlement or establishment of bases of supplies or some other act to prove that the discovery is more than simply the raising of the flag over the territory involved.

This interpretation of United States policy suggests interesting possibilities in view of the Canadian claim to a vast stretch of unoccupied land north of Canada's accepted geographical boundaries, across some parts of which the MacMillan expedition will go by airplane from its ship base at Etah. The fact that the land is unoccupied and that no attempt has been made to settle it, apparently would place the Canadian claim in doubt so far as acceptance of it is by this country concerned.

In any event the Washington Government has not as yet sought permission for the MacMillan expedition to fly across lands embraced within the general Canadian claim of sovereignty, although it invariably makes such requests for its aviators or nationals where the flight is to pass over territory which it recognizes as under a foreign flag. There is no indication that it has planned to seek such permission at Ottawa for the MacMillan flight across Ellesmere Island, but should the Canadian Government despatch agents, geologists and police to the island in advance of the arrival of the MacMillan party, it might become necessary to consider whether such action constituted a claim to the land that could be recognized under United States policy.

The controversy which MacMillan wishes to avert centres on the claim of Canada as stated in the House of Commons on June 1 by Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, wherein Mr. Stewart declared that Canada claimed as her own territory all the islands which lie north of the Dominion between Alaska and Greenland up to the North Pole. A bill introduced into the House of Commons provided for the issue of licenses or permits to scientists or explorers desiring to enter the North-West Territories, and received its third reading on the night Mr. Stewart asserted Canada's claim.

"We want to assert our sovereignty over that territory," said the Canadian Minister.

At the same time, a commission which reports to the Dominion Government from time to time is now engaged in delinating Canada's boundaries and establishing Canada's title to all the territory claimed.

Following Mr. Stewart's statement Dr. MacMillan informed the Associated Press that "any land which we discover on the expedition will

BOOTLEGGERS, TOO.

WINNIPEG, June 10. — Canadian Press. — Details of how he had obtained allegedly false Canadian National Railway meal checks, were related here Tuesday by Walter Deans (a former dining car employee) in testifying, in the Court of King's Bench, against four men charged with defrauding the railw

The accused are Olitaire Sauve, Cecil H. Collet, Herbert Davis, and Maurice Dumousseau.

Deans denied that he was a spotter, although he admitted helping in the securing of evidence against the men. He told of interviews with Hon Edward Brown, director of the Canadian National Railways, and Milton G. Walker, organizer for the Liberals in Manitoba, when he had pointed out the frauds going on. He said he had been asked to obtain some of the forged meal checks, and told of obtaining a bundle from Sauve's home after the accused had told him he could obtain 50 at 35c each.

Deans was a dining car employee on a Winnipeg-Duluth train, and under cross-examination by the defense counsel, said that he had "done a bit of bootlegging." "I sold about 18 bottles a week," he said. "Everyone of the crew were bootlegging, and we sold our stuff to a crowd in Duluth."

Deans said he had informed three members of the Dominion cabinet, who were in Winnipeg November 4, 1924, of the frauds, and had urged that a royal commission be appointed to investigate. He also said that at the present time there were "two men at Ottawa trying to persuade the government to act."

OBITUARY.

BRUCE RIDPATH.

LAKEFIELD, June 10.—A very large crowd gathered on Sunday afternoon to pay their last tribute of respect to a young man who had gone further than any other Lakefield boy in the great world of sport — David Bruce Ridpath. Among those gathered there were old comrades, men who as boys had played on the same team and many others to whom his name was familiar as a "clean sport and one who played the game." The funeral was held at 2.30 at the residence of his brother, James W. Ridpath, on Concession street, and was in charge of Rev. P. L. Jull The service was impressive in the extreme, the more so because of its simplicity. Mr. Juel gave a brief but very appropriate address on "Playing the Game."

"This large gathering is paying its last token of respect to one who brought honor to himself and his town on the athletic field," said the Rev. Jull. "We are all playing the great game of life, each doing his or her part as good sports or as poor sports. St. Paul speaks a great deal of games in his writings and uses many features of sport to point his teachings.

"Life is a strenuous game whether in educating ourselves or making a living, or in business or social life, and as we often see the game won by the player who in full training has a reserve of energy, so in our moral and spiritual lives the man or woman who has trained themselves has a reserve of spiritual force which wins in a conflict with evil.

"Life is a hazardous game, and as the man on the bleechers or the bench always knows best how the game should be played, so no one ever lived his life without some one outside telling him how it should be lived.

"Besides being a strenuous and hazardous game, life is an enjoyable game, and the one who puts most into the game gets the most out of it. The best man is the one who playing his hardest to win can when defeated be the first to cross the field and congratulate his adversary."

The speaker quoted the beautiful little poem, "My Philosophy," by the late Norah M. Holland.

"The game of life requires team work," the reverend gentleman continued, "not only brilliant individual play, but as no man liveth or dieth to himself so no one can play the game successfully without adjusting oneself to one's teammates. He lives best who learns to fit his life best into those of his teammates.

"In the game of life a good captain is necessary, one who knows the game and its rules and can inspire the loyalty of his comrades.

"There is more to compare with Christ, our great captain. He knows the game, He played it Himself, and leads us on—our great leader. The man who teaches us to play the game, asking no quarter and losing with a smile, is worthy of our admiration.

"Bruce Ridpath in his life and his clean way of playing the game has preached us a sermon, and has thus rendered service to God in a manner which stands out. He has left a message and has made a contribution to his town and his country which must leave a deep and lasting impression. His memory will bring comfort to those who today are morning his loss."

The pall-bearers were: Chas. Winrow of Toronto, Malcolm Isbister and Anderson Isbister of Milnet, Clayton Ridpath of Lakefield, John Ridpath of Peterboro and Harold Newberry of Toronto.

The floral tributes, which were very numerous, bore testimony of the esteem and respect in which the deceased was held. Many tributes came from athletic organizations to which the deceased was well known.

The long cortege of motor cars proceeded to the Lakefield Cemetery, where interment took place after the brief commital service was read by Rev. P. L. Jull

INQUEST EVIDENCE AROUSES INTEREST

Woman Denies Dead Girl Caused Friction When Living in House.

WELLAND, June 10.—(Canadian Press).—The inquest into the death of Martha Winkleman, 20-year-old German girl, who died under peculiar circumstances last Thursday evening at the home of her employers, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snyder, Humberstone township, brought out some unexpected evidence. It was shown that the girl was in cheery spirits at 6.10 and was dead from poisoning at 6.30. It also transpired that the presence of the girl in the home caused friction between husband and wife.

Asked if she remarked to Dr. Workmn, when he was attending the girl as she was writhing in the agonies of convulsions before passing away, "that it would bo an act of God to take her away," Mrs. Snyder declared:

"Oh, no, I don't remember saying that."

Evidence was given by pastor Towe of the Lutheran Church that on several occasions he had been called in by Mrs. Snyder to try and make peace in the home. Mrs. Snyder had also expressed her desire that the girl should leave for the sake of peace. Mrs. Snyder denied that the girl's presence resulted in family quarrelling and claimed that the girl desired to leave, "not because I wanted her to go."

As the intestines had been forwarded for analysis, the exact cause of death will not be known until the next hearing which has been set for June 18.

for the best answer to this Question

$1,000. for the First Prize

When do you enjoy Coca-Cola most?

And 202 other cash prizes—$300 for the Second best answer—$200 for the Third best answer—200 prizes of $5.00 each for the 200 next best answers

Open to everybody in the Dominion

This contest is open to everybody in the Dominion of Canada—from schoolboys and girls old enough to write, to grandparents.

But no answers from other countries will be considered.

Everybody will be talking about this contest.

One reason is that this advertisement is published today in cities and towns all over Canada—from Nova Scotia to Vancouver Island.

There will be many contestants—and these will make it the more interesting.

But there are many cash prizes—203 in all—and the question is a simple one and is easy to answer.

The Reasons for this Contest are very interesting

We cannot improve Coca-Cola. Its taste and thirst-quenching qualities have long been perfected. Also with care and skill, we have perfected the methods of preparing it—safeguarding at every step its purity and goodness.

But we might be able to improve the service by which it is made available to you—and that's why we ask the question, "When do you enjoy Coca-Cola most?"

This contest is Dominion-wide because the popularity of Coca-Cola extends from coast to coast. With this great popularity of Coca-Cola, The Coca-Cola Company of Canada, Ltd., is anxious to get as much information as possible on the most popular methods of distribution.

Hence—$2,500.00 in cash prizes is offered for the best answers.

You'll understand our interest in the answers when you grasp the dimensions of the Coca-Cola organization.

In order to adequately supply the demand, four Coca-Cola syrup factories have been built—in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Modern bottling plants have been established in these four cities and in fifteen others—Quebec, Ottawa, Kingston, Belleville, Peterboro, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Port Arthur, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge.

And there are 50 independent bottlers in other cities who bottle Coca-Cola under a license from this Company.

Coca-Cola is served everywhere—by more than 20,000 retailers—at soda fountains, refreshment stands, in clubs, hotels, restaurants, grocery stores and dozens of other places.

Of course we're anxious to know what service is most appealing to our customers—the millions of Canada.

What is Coca-Cola?

It is a blend of pure products from nature—with nothing artificial in it—best described as "delicious and refreshing". Prepared in clean, modern plants, by the most scientific methods, it is absolutely pure and wholesome.

And here's the biggest fact of all: Its wide distribution and huge volume make possible the giving of a beverage of the highest possible quality for only a few cents.

You can write your answer in three words or 300—the shorter the better. Mail your answer to:

"The Store of Smiling Service"

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burto

THE STORY SO FAR:

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling young lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes. . . but no work or children!

She refused to cook or keep house, and hires Ranghild Swanson to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she wsamps Dick with debts for her clothes and a new automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with an out-of-work actor, Stanley Wayburn. She sees him constantly. Finally Wayburn is offered a job in New York as leading man for a Russian actress, Sonya Chotek. He needs money. Gloria lends him $200 of Dick's money, which she gets from his secretary, Miss Briggs. She tells Miss Briggs she needs the money for the house.

Dick is ill with pneumonia and almost dies. When he recovers, Dr. John Seymour sends him away for a long rest. Gloria refuses to go along, because Dick's mother, whom she hates, is going.

As soon as they leave town, Gloria sets out for New York. She goes straight to Wayburn. But he spurns her, telling her that he has just married Sonya Chotek. Then Gloria goes to Kit Cameron, a friend of hers who is a chorus girl, to ask her to help her out. But Kit's manager refused to give Gloria a place in the chorus.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

From the doorway, Gloria stared at him. Then she flung him three words:

"Still talking money!" she said, contemptuously.

On one side of the hall was the double room that she and Dick had shared until his illness. On the other was the "spare" bedroom. Her toilet things and cushions were still in it.

Gloria hesitated for a long moment. Then she went quickly into the room that had been Dick's and hers. She bathed her eyes, smoothed her hair, and went downstairs to have her coffee.

Two hours later when she came upstairs again, the bag was gone. Gloria looked all around the room for it.

Then she crossed the hall into the guest-room. There the bag stood! On the floor beside the single bed! Dick must have put it there. . . .

"All right," Gloria shrugged her shoulders. "If that's the way he feels about me, I should worry!"

But she did worry! Hurt and humiliated, she bolted the door of the room.

An hour later, she heard Dick come upstairs. The door on the other side of the hall closed softly.

In the lonely quiet of the room that had been Gloria's and his, Dick Gregory faced his problem that night.

Above all other living things, he loved the woman who lay asleep in the room across the hall. He wanted to take her back, and he was afraid to do it.

He was afraid to trust his happiness to Gloria again!

He had been beside himself for the last week, since the day when he had come home to find her gone . . .

He had felt sure that she had left him for Stanley Wayburn. Gloria's story bore out his fears, in part. He wondered though—and his nails bit deep into his palms at the thought—if she told him the whole truth.

Could he believe her? Dick didn't know whether he could or not. Gloria had lied to him so many times before—

And suppose she "got tired of sticking around the house" again, and ran away? What then? . . . .

Dick shook his head. He was in a torment of doubt.

The door behind him swung slowly open.

Before he turned to look, Dick knew that Gloria stood there. His senses knew her.

She stood there in her white nightgown. Her naked feet, spread to the floor, showed white and slim. She was like some lovely lily rising superbly on a slender stem.

"Dick," she gave a little smothered cry, "Don't hate me! Don't treat me like this . . . I can't stand it!"

She rushed to him and laid her head down on his knees, crying noisily like a child.

"This isn't the way to hold me," she said, drawing a long sobbing breath, "by keeping yourself away from me . . . and treating me like an outcast!"

"I'm not trying to hold you, Glory,' Dick said quietly. "You can go tomorrow, if you like."

Gloria looked up at him. Surprise filled her eyes.

"Don't you love me any more? Don't you want me to live with you any more?" she asked.

Dick slowly shood his head.

"Not unless you're ready to settle down," he said firmly. "If you stay here, you'll have to stay on my terms this time! You'll have to cut out running around with May Seymour on these drinking parties. And you'll have to knuckle down and do your own housework. I can't afford help for you. Just look here a minute . . . ."

He got up and took a thick sheaf of envelopes from the spinet desk that stood between thefront windows.

"All these are bills," Dick said. "We're months behind with them. All my savings are gone. The house is mortgaged right up to the hilt . . . And I wouldn't mind this, Glory, if you'd been happy spending the money. But you haven't been!"

He flung the bills back on the desk.

"The more money you've spent the more discontented you've been," Dick went on. "Now you're going to try my way of living, for a change! I want you to live like other poor men's wives . . . help me to get along. Are you ready to try it?"

Gloria looked up at him with eyes that shone under the ruddy fluff of her hair.

"Oh, I am! I will try to be a real wife to you, Dick!" she cried. And at that moment she meant what she said. Besides, she knew, that soone or later, shecould coax Dick into getti Ranghild back again to work for her . .

She put her arms on Dick's shoulder. This time he did not turn away. Al around him was the heavy scent of he perfumed hair. Her arms were warn and soft, and they clung as if they never would let him go.

Gloria closed her eyes, and his hold tightened. It was as if the wall that Dick had raised against her and her beauty, crumbled and fell. He bent down to her lips.

They ja ted, suddenly, to speak . . .

those scarlet lips.

"I forgot to tell you," Gloria murmured dreamily, "that Stanley Wayburn is married . . . . He married a Russian actress."

Dick's hold of her loosened. He waited with every nerve tense, for her to go on.

"He married her just the day before I got to New York," she said. "So you see I couldn't have left you just on account of him . . . as you thought I had. See?"

Dick saw. He saw too well . . . . too clearly.

"So that's why you came home!" he said. "So that's why! Because Wayburn married someone else. If he hadn't you'd be in New York this minute! . . . .Of course, I see! I see perfectly!"

He flung himself away from Gloria. She stood looking at him helplessly.

"I would have come home anyhow," she defended herself. "I hate Stanley Wayburn. I hate him . . . now."

"Surg, and that's why you've come home to me!" Dick answered. "Don't stand there and try to kid me any more. I've got your number . . . Go back to bed!"

The next morning Gloria was awakened by a loud knocking on the door of her room.

"Ye—es," she called in a thick sleepy voice. She had been dreaming that she was still in the lonely hotel room in New York.

Then she heard Dick's voice.

"Better get up, Glory," he was saying. "There's no Ranghild to bring you breakfast this morning, you know."

Gloria didn't answer it once. The door was not locked . . . . Why didn't Dick come in to say "hello" to her?

Oh, all right, she made up her mind suddenly, if he wanted to keep her at arm's length, she'd help him out!

"Thanks, I'll get up when I feel like it!" she said. But the old snap and spirit had gone out of her voice.

There was silence for a few seconds, then the soft pad-pad of Dick's feet going down the stairs.

Before he had reached the bottom, Gloria was out of bed on her bare feet.

Dick looked up in surprise as she ran down into the hall.

"I think you might have been a sport and made some coffee for me," she said to him.

"Do you?" Dick asked politely. There was no color in his voice. He picked up his brief-case from the table in the living room.

"Yes, I do," Gloria cried. "I think it's mean of you to treat me like a red-headed stepchild when I've come back and told you I'm sorry. Do you know you haven't spoken a kind word to me since the night I showed you Stan Wayburn's letter? . . . . I suppose you never had a letter from a woman in your life! I suppose you never did anything you're ashamed of! You're so darned pure!"

Woman-like she seized upon the half-forgotten letter incident as a peg to hang all her discontent upon, now.

Dick didn't answer. He crossed the room to his old writing desk . . . the only bit of furniture that he had brought with him from his old home.

He took from it a bundle of letters and photographs, and tossed them down on the table without a word. There was a queer cold smile on his face . . . as he went out.

The front door banged. In the stillness that settled down over the house, Gloria could almost hear her heart beating.

Did Dick mean that she was to look at the letters? Was there an answer to her question in them? Was that what the smile on Dick's face had meant?

She picked them up, and loosed the rubber bands that held them together.

The letter that lay on the top of the pile was the one she read first. It was written in blue ink on dull blue paper, and it smelled faintly of violets.

"Dick dearest," it said, "I am sick of tearing up the letters that I write to you. I am tired of pretending—and so I am going to tell the truth to you. I love you. Dick, I love you. It is hard for me to write this letter. . . . Lucie."

"Lucie" had not found it so hard to write the half dozen letters that followed, it seemed. Some of them were ten pages long. And all of them were signed with "Love and kisses from Lucie." That seemed to be her stock phrase.

Under "Lucie's" love notes was another package of letters. These were all from a woman who signed herself "Roxie." Roxie's letters were passionate, to say the least.

"She must have been reading Elinor Glyn," said Gloria to herself, with amusement. To think of good old Dick having a love affair with a woman like Roxie! . . . Gloria giggled inwardly.

But her laughter died when she came to the photographs that had been tied up with the letters.

One was a picture of a lovely blond with bobbed hair.

Bobbed hair! Then Dick must have known her within the last few years, since bobbed heads had become the fashion!

The other picture was an enlarged snapshot of Dick and a tall, sweet-faced brunet. Both of them were in white sports clothes and carried tennis rackets. Dick had his arm across the shoulders of the girl. At the bottom was written, "Gilchrist's house party, June, 1923."

Only two years ago!

"Well!" Gloria said to herself, a little out of breath, "what do you know about that!"

She wondered if the girl in the snapshot were "Roxie" or "Lucie."

She read the letters again—as if, perhaps, they might yield up their secret the second time. But she was just as puzzled as before.

Picton district—Wellington.

Brighton district—Trenton (King Street).

Cobourg district—Cambourne.

Bowmanville district—Tyrone.

Cannington district—Hartley.

Each debate in the series must be held during the week between July 8 and 15, inclusive. The committee in charge of the Inter-League series will supply judges for the districts in the respective debates. To aid in raising funds for the Conference League treasury, an offering will be taken when the contest is held.

The Whattam Cup is the prize being competed for, and certificates of merit will be presented to the participating district winners.

Union Inaugural.

Sunday, June 14, will be a special occasion, marking the inaugural services of the United Church of Canada in Millbrook, and all Unionists in and convenient to the village are expected to co-operate, particularly at the morning worship at 11 a.m.

Members who are in good standing in the two uniting local churches automatically become members of the United Church, and are entitled to full privileges therein.

A committee is in charge and everything possible will be done to make the inaugural Sunday a memorable occasion, deep spirituality marking the services throughout.

In the evening the pastor will probably give some account of the service held in Toronto on June 10, but special attention will be given to the young people. On Tuesday, June 16, a meeting will be held in the United Church when the Session and Committee of Stewards will be elected by vote of the members. Adherents are also cordially invited to attend, and all will share in the social hour held at the close.

The following Sunday, June 21, the ordination and induction of elders will take place, and there will be a reception service for new members. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed.

Concert.

The Pajo... Conc..t Company of Toronto gave an enjoyable entertainment in the Town Hall on Saturday evening, the extreme heat lessening the attendance and making it difficult for the visiting artists to be in their best form.

Miss Ethel ...hardson w... the accompanist for the evening ... selections included so... os by Miss Viola Johnston, contralto solos by Miss Betty Walker, tenor solos by Chas. Keen and bass solos by Mr. Frank Paget. Miss Clara Paget gave one or two readings which were much enjoyed, and the sketch from "The School for Scandal," which opened the second half of the programme, Mr. Pagent taking the part of Sir Peter and his daughter that of Lady Teazle, was one of the best numbers of the evening.

Messrs. Budd and Hunter, under whose auspices the concert was given, put on a comic film during the intermission. The comedian of the company, Chas. McReath, was obliged to respond to the demand for an encore after each of his numbers, the other members of the party, however, asking to be excused on account of the heat.

Miss Johnston sang a solo, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills," in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning to the great pleasure of the congregation.

Trent River War Memorial.

Mr. A. H. McKeel, whose deep interest in war memorial movements in Campbellford, Trent River and elsewhere, is so well known, has again shown his generosity and kindliness in this regard by donating a load of flowers to be used in beautifying the ground of the war memorial at Trent River. Mr. McKeel conceived the idea of a memorial at Trent River, and worked untiringly until it was erected, and still his kindly interest continues in its beautification.

Mr. C. W. Palliser, one of Campbellford's native and most promising business young men, who has built up a flourishing florist establishment here, has also most kindly donated a flower bed for Trent River memorial grounds. The kindliest thanks of the community are due these two public spirited men for their very practical interest in this worthy cause.

A committee, chosen by the older people of Trent River to take charge of the grounds, is as follows: Mr. Boyd (chairman), Messrs. Wight, Kilbank, John Watters, all of Trent River, and Mr. Wright, of Toronto.

On Thursday night a meeting was held in the town hall, Alderville, on the Indian Reserve, for the purpose of deciding on a suitable style of war memorial in memory of the young men from the Reserve who paid the supreme sacrifice. Much business was done and the people of the Reserve voted $1,000 out of their reserve. Funds for this worthy purpose. The Reserve is only about twelve square miles in extent and has a population of not more than 200 people. The ratio of enlistment according to population from this Reserve was equal to the ratio from the British Isles, although Indians are exempt from military service.

TREE GROWS FROM CANE.

Today it is one of the largest cottonwood trees in Hutchinson.

THREE GREAT CHURCH BODIES

23. There followed a series of prayers by Rev. Dr. Warriner.

The next and one of the most impressive features of the service was the hallowing of the United Church, all the people reverently standing. This part of the service was taken by Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, as the senior of the three representative clerical heads of the uniting churches.

Signed Parchment.

Declaration of authority for the union of the Churches as enacted by the various church courts, was the next item. The reading of these and the signing of the sheepskin parchment on which is printed the basis of union was a most impressive and historic movement in the service. Followed the declaration that the three denominations and the General Council of local union churches were now one.

The constitution of the General Council of the United Church was the next step. This was done by a prayer of the officiating minister with a short pause in the midst of it for silent prayer and praise by all the members of the Council.

Standing the Assembly repeated, "Glory be to the Father and to the Son," etc.

Another Church Received.

The reception of the American Presbyterian Church of Montreal into the fold of the United Church was the next feature. This Church, one of the outstanding congregations in the Quebec City, has never been included in the Presbyterian Church of Canada, but desires to be a part of the great United Church.

The Communion service, conducted with the most impressive solemnity and religious devotion, was the concluding part of this first service of the United Church.

After the elements had been partaken of by all the Assembly the minister worded his final admonition and prayer.

The concluding hymn was James Montgomery's "O Spirit of the Living God," and then the benediction by Rev. Dr. Pidgeon ended a historic and impressive service.

STORING STEAM.

STOCKHOLM, June 10—A medal has been awarded by the Swedish Academy of Engineering Science to the inventor of a simple device which stores steam during slack hours for use when larger quantities are needed.

PRESBYTERIANISM STILL LIVES

greatest struggle for spiritual freedom that any church has passed through since the days of the Reformation," said Rev. W. G. Brown, of Red Deer, who took the place on the programme of Mrs. Charles Thorburn, of Ottawa. "The day of anti-Unionism and non-concurrence is past and the day of Presbyterianism, pure and undefeated, has come." (Loud applause).

Purged By The Fire Through Which Passed

(By H. W. McManus in The Globe.)

Presbyterianism in Canada, purged by the fires through which it has passed, still lives. Amid the chaos and disruption of the struggle the ancient flame still burns bright and undimmed—a flame kept alive across the broad expanses of Canada, from the roaring breakers of the Maritimes to the sun-tanned Prairies of the West, by little bands of men and women who refuse to surrender their faith—men and women who place above all else their right to worship God at the altar of their fathers.

And yesterday, through the morning session at St. Andrew's church, and in the afternoon at Cooke's Church, these men and women summoned from the entire nation, found that they had not stood alone, that their struggles against a seemingly engulfing wave had brought a rich reward. For at these meetings of the Pre-Assembly Congress of th Continuing Presbyterian Church men and women from congregations separated by thousands of miles rubbed shoulders and took comfort in the fact that out of their faith and perseverance had come the assurance that their beloved church was to continue, that they were still a part of that great Brotherhood of Presbyterianism whose history is inseparably linked with the history of Canada.

Cheer From Coast to Coast.

Not only from the strength of their spirit did that comfort come, for during the whole day the delegates listened to the reports from the Presbyteries of the East and the West—from the Maritimes, whence came the encouragement that, even where "stripped of everything but the faith," Presbyterianism was still alive; and from the Prairie Provinces, where the 'thin red line" of Presbyterianism regarded the present situation as but a call to a greater service and a new era of mission work.

To Old Ontario, which had won for itself the title of the stronghold of Presbyterianism in Canada, both East and West were looking today, according to more than one speaker, for the sinews to carry on the work. Men were needed to minister to those wide areas which had been bereft of the services of the Auld Kirk; money was needed if full opportunity was to be taken of the rebirth of the spirit to build upon the old foundations a structure of Canadian Presbyterianism which would flourish and keep ever alive the traditions and manners of the past.

Rousing Evening Gathering.

For the evening gathering in St. Andrew's Church enthusiasm was no whit abated. Nealy fifteen hundred people, with an overflow extending to the very steps of the church, had assembled to hear from their leaders that message of encouragement which has been born out of the Congress itself. The meetings was a fitting sequel to the historic assembly of the evening before, and a crowning climax to the sessions of the first day, which had witnessed such a wealth of accomplishment.

Fellow-Presbyterians Applaud.

No better indication of the spirit of the meeting or of the whole Congress could have been found than in the reception accorded to the opening remarks of Mr. Ferguson. "I am very glad," he said, "to be able to-night to address you, not as non-concurrents or Continuing Presbyterians, but simply as fellow-Presbyterians." And for a full minute, from crowded pews and packed galleries, came a burst of applause such as St. Andrew's has not known for many days.

Taking Stock of Heritage.

"As business men, we should take stock of the things which we possess; of the lessons which we have learned from the past," Mr. Ferguson said. "In the first place, our membership is now greater than it was at the time when the Presbyterian Church began. We have more than 700 churches, and I believe that when we are all through we will have 1,000. In addition, we have some 150 groups, and more than 100,000 members. At the time of the beginning there were but 88,000 members and 745 congregations.

"To-day much is said about being big, but I believe that the best things of life are the smaller things. I am not sure a large Church is a good thing; in fact, it may turn out to be just the opposite. There is a tendency in a large religious organization to look out politically, to attempt to exert influence in questions which are best left to the judgment of the ordinary citizen. What I covet is a Presbyterian Church with its schools, churches and pulpits imbued with the spirit of truth; then we will have that which is true and right. Men will then use their influence as right-minded citizens, rather than as members of any particular sect; they will not become a handle for any political reasons.

"Again, we have a united people. For some time we have not been so, for this controversial question has obtruded itself, even against our wishes. Now in the Presbyterian Church we are one in mind, thought and purpose, and we can look for the blessing of God. We are Canadians, and, while we live beside a nation ten times as great, we do not wish to become a part of it, because of our pride in being Canadians.

Rich in Tradition and Equity.

"We have our heritage upon which we can look with pride; a proud tradition which remains ever in our thoughts, and which cannot be taken from us. We have the property given to us under the Act, if I may be permitted to descend to a more material thought.

"We have as many rights as the United Church, which is something which our people should not forget. In the colleges of the Church, which will be allotted by the Dominion Commission, on which we are represented by three members, we have equities which are of much value to us.

"Further, we must not forget our brethren in Presbyterianism throughout the world. We are in fellowship with fifty million other Presbyterians and of that fellowship there is no need for explanation."

DOOR IS WIDE OPEN TO ALIENS ON MICHIGAN-ONTARIO BORDER

By ROY J. GIBBONS.

DETROIT, June 10.—Alien immigrants literally can swarm into the United States here merely by taking a five-minute ferry ride.

There are only three requirements a foreigner must meet to get into the land of opportunity from the Canadian side:

A "Made in America" label in his clothes. A knowledge of English. And a glib tongue.

I have proven it by stepping into the United States five times on the same day from two Canadian points. In every case my status was exactly the same as that of an alien who found himself on the Canadian side and wanted to get into the United States.

In each case I shaded my voice to similate a foreign accent. In every case I was passed without further questioning that "where are you from?" and "how long have you lived in America?"

Here is the situation that allows this almost unrestricted entrance of aliens, some of whom might have been denied entrance at Ellis Island or some other entrance point:

100 a Minute.

Ferries from Canada dock at intervals of about 10 minutes all day long. The average ferry load is 1,000 passengers. From five to seven immigration inspectors must pass on these 1,000 in 10 minutes. Obviously, not more than a few seconds can be given to each one.

I first crossed from Windsor, telling myself that I was an alien who had been denied admittance at Ellis Island, but had managed to get into Canada.

I was about half-way in the line of passengers as we reached Detroit. I assumed my best accent. I reached the inspector.

He gave me a quick up-and-down glance.

"Where are you from?" he asked.

"Chicago," I heard my accent saying.

"How long have you lived in America?"

"All my life."

"All right, next."

Repeats Four Times.

The same thing happened on the next four trips. Only once did my accent arouse interest, and then not enough to make the inspector question me further. He merely gave me another up-and-down glance.

I talked with other passengers on the ferry, one who crosses frequently. He told me that in cases of doubt of American residence, the inspectors' chief test to determine if the passenger is telling the truth is to examine his clothing.

"If he's suit has an American label it proves he's an American citizen and he passes," said this passenger.

If an alien in Windsor wants to enter he could do just as I did. If his friends had provided him with American clothes, if he looked all right and answered their questions quickly the inspectors would pass him as they did me—five times.

Remedies.

What are the remedies for this situation?

Dr. P. L. Prentis, district immigration service director, lists them:

If this cannot be worked out, regular vises for all ferry passengers, with photographs affixed, should be established.

This would entail no great hardship on the regular user of the ferries, Dr. Prentis said, and would prevent guess work and give the inspectors a chance for orderly examination.

There should be more inspectors and better paid ones.

health, protecting young manhood and womanhood from temptation, seeing that no aged person went down into the Valley of Death in want and despair, in short, "taking down the Golden Rule from the placard on the wall and putting it into our own lives, the lives of the community in which we live and of the nation at large."

"Social service never was, is not, and never will be, a substitute for evangelism. There is nothing that can take the place of the old story of Jesus Christ and His work. It is not the branch nor the trunk, but simply one of the fruits of the Gospel."

Every unit in the church that was working for the good of humanity at large was a branch of social service, declared the speaker, who said that while fundamental differences of doctrine might separate different churches from each other, they should all unite together in the working out of a social welfare programme for the good of their fellow beings.

Speaking of the uselessness in some instances of relying solely on individual effort, Mr. Farmer referred to such problems as those of the drink question, and said that assertions had been made that the introduction of 4.4 beer in Ontario was not just the thin edge of the wedge, but of the axe. He also spoke of the narcotic drug evil, of gambling abuses, of such things as immigration and child welfare problems, and of the beneficial legislation which had been fostered by the Social Service Councils of Canada, in which many churches worked co-operatively, towards such things as Mothers' Allowances and relief for illegitimate children.

Christian Education.

Professor J. B. McLaurin, a returned missionary from India, gave an address, marked by clarity of thought on Christian Education, basing his remarks mainly in the good done the church they serve by such institutions of learning as McMaster, and its allied Canadian Baptist Colleges, and giving an outline of the religio-educational work carried on by similar centres of learning in India, where the speaker spent over seven years.

"The correct type of Christian education is simply making evangelism permanent," declared Professor McLaurin. "What is our reason, for instance, for not going into Union? It must be because we feel that we have a distinctive message that is of value to the world of to-day. Therefore we must have some way of saying this to the world. Our schools can lift our boys and girls to the culture that is necessary in building up that true evangelistic fervour."

Comparing the Christian schools to ordinary government schools, the speaker said that the latter did not stress the religious side of education sufficiently and remarked that he had been shocked at times by the non-realization in Baptist boys and girls educated in public schools, of the inner meaning of Scriptural sections.

Professor McLaurin suggested several means for making McMaster University and its fellows more efficient in this work, and ended with a reference to the endowment of McMaster as having placed it in many Baptist minds, above the need of sacrifice in the way of further financial assistance. He recommended the will to sacrifice as a means to interest in this as in other endeavors of the church.

The morning session closed with an address by Rev. S. G. Pinnock of Toronto, on Upper Canada Bible Society and its relation to Foreign Missions."

FIRST COMMUNION FOR EIGHT CHILDREN

Little Ones of St. Paul's Paul's Church, Receive Sacrament—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, June 10.—On Sunday morning five little girls and three little boys received their first Holy Communion in St. Paul's Church. Just before Mass the little ones marched in, the girls in crisp white frocks and white veils, the boys in their trim suits. The service was beautiful, marking as it did the beginning of an active church life for a little flock of God's little ones. At the evening service these children renewed their baptismal vows.

Last Sunday marked an epoch in the history of the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches, as it was the last Sunday on which they carry on under the names which they have borne so many years. For 63 and 69 years respectibely they have carried on, each in its separate edifice and under its own church courts. Old-timers remember when the Presbyterians secured the organ, and the precentor, with his tuning fork, sat in his place to lead the congregation in the grand old Psalms of David. They remember also the Methodists with their protracted meetings and revivals, at which many were converted. The old order has passed away with the old buildings in which these two (once widely diverse) bodies worshipped God, and now each has its modern church, well furnished and well kept, and with the old buildings, old forms have gone, and gradually the two have grown closer together, inter-marriage contributing not a little to the cause, and on Sunday next two churches of the United Church of Canada will open their doors in Lakefield, with Rev. P. L. Iull and Rev. C. S. Reddick as pastors. The little band of non-concurring Presbyterians will also worship God according to the dictates of their hearts and conscience, and will arrange for regular services in the near future. The non-concurring church of Warsaw will, it is anticipated, share its pastor with the brethren of the Continuing Presbyterian Church in Lakefield.

The District Local Council of the A.Y.P.A. of Peterboro district will meet in Lakefield on Thursday evening. The meeting will be held in the Town Hall, and delegates from Peterboro, Millbrook, Omemee, Perrytown and Cavan are expected.

TO-NIGHT IS THE NIGHT

If you do not feel well there is some reason for it. In nine cases out of ten it is due to your liver. So start tonight and take two Tanol Calomel Tablets or take one before meals and a glass of hot water in the morning to wash all poisons from the system. Calomel, as you know, is the only drug known that acts upon the liver and that is why there has been such wonderful results from the use of it in the new form called Tanol Calomel. Just get a few of these sample tablets from F. C. Webber's Drug Store, Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are. m.-w.s.

Gives complete relief from perspiration annoyance

IT is no longer necessary to endure the annoyance of excessive perspiration. Every woman can have complete freedom from the embarrassment and discomfort which it causes.

Extreme perspiration of one part of the body, such as the underarms, is due to local irregularities of the sweat glands. The underarm perspiration glands are very sensitive and easily stimulated to unusual activity by excitement, heat or nervousness. Clothing and the hollow of the underarm make normal evaporation impossible, so that in order to maintain scrupulous personal daintiness, corrective measures are necessary. Soap and water alone are not sufficient.

Odorono, an antiseptic toilet water, was formulated by a physician for the special purpose of correcting this condition harmlessly, without affecting the natural healthful perspiration of the rest of the body. It is a clear, rosy-coloured liquid, and comes to you in a smart little uniquely shaped bottle. It is delightfully easy to use, and quite harmless. You simply pat it on to the underarm, with a piece of soft cloth, or absorbent cotton, or with the tips of the fingers. One application does away with all perspiration odor and moisture for at least three days. Two or three applications a week will keep your underarms always dry and immaculate. For sale at all toilet counters—three sizes, 35c., 60c. and $1.00.

HERE COME THE JUNE BRIDES

TO "THE LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER"— BUT ONE IN EVERY FOUR IS TURNED AWAY

By Gene Cohn

NEW YORK, June 10.—Here come the brides!

Business girl, flapper, gay girl and sad girl, modern girl and old-fashioned girl—they are trooping into the marriage circle in record-breaking numbers. Already the "Little Church Around the Corner," capital of America's marriage industry, has 200 more weddings than last year.

And so the Rev. J. H. Randolph Ray, rector of the famous Church of the Transfiguration, does not "view with alarm" the much discussed modern girl. She goes out and "gets her man," even as the Northwest Mounted Police, and she brings him to the altar, even as her mother and grandmother. She walks into the wedded state with a better comprehension of what marriage involves than her grandmother had, he says.

"Once at the altar," smiles the rector, she has all the humility and is disturbed by the same fears as her mother and grandmother. The present mode of life may have changed her viewpoints, but arrived at the bride's altar, she is the unchanged and beautiful picture of womanhood achieving fearfully and devoutly the greatest of her girlhood dreams."

Rev. Ray hastens to add that the "Little Church" is no Gretna jGreen and issues warning to those youthful sweethearts who, in the June season, plan runaway marriages.

About 25 per cent of the persons who come to the "Little Church" to be wedded are given a cordial greeting, a bit of advic but no ceremony.

While 75,000 couple have been wed since the day, some 78 years ago, when the Rev. G orge H. Houghton founded the chu ch with a borrowed room and a few hand-made benches, more than 20,000 have not met the church requirements.

And tha is where Miss Mary Hanlon, the rector's secretary, comes in. She interviews all the applicants. The "Little Church" will not marry divorcees, elopers; those who have not been baptized and those who have not the consent of their parents. Youthful runaways are shown the seriousness of the wedding obligation.

"On several occasions," recalls Rev. Ray, "they have telegraphed from the church and received the consent of parents by return wire and on others we have sent scores of them back to their homes, sobered and contrite.

"Yet I favor young marriage—but not too young. Young couples build their lives together through the years. They come to have a great unity of interest that binds them close in the years to come. Commercial elements begin to enter as marriage is delayed and the people mature. The omantic psychology enters into June weddings and probably plays a large part in the lasting quality of marriage contracted in that month. Our statistics show that marriages in June and weddings in the Little Church do hold, for some reason or other.

"The romantic tradition clings long after the ceremony. Thousand of couples return to the church for their anniversaries. Flowers come years afterward, commemorating a ceremony. Mothers and fathers, married in the church, bring babies to be baptized. They come across the continent with daughters or ons who contemplate weddings. And we are swamped with letters asking advice on every conceivable love problem.

"And sometimes I enter the church and see a widow sitting in her garb of black. There are many of those. They come back quietly and alone to recall in the hours of grief the happy memories of the wedding day."

Through the doors of the rectory pass thousands of varying chapters of a great city's comedies and tragedies.

It is the tradition, established by the Rev. Houghton and his nephew who followed him, that the doors should never be closed. When the "Little Church" was established it was but a few blocks from the morgue and the tenderloin of the old days.

To this day, says the new rector, friendless men and women, looking toward death, bring in a request for the church to bury them. Some leave a little sum for their burial sermon, although the prospect of death be years off. Out of the night often comes a girl with a story of shame. A disheartened young woman, tempted to end her life in the river, stops for a benediction and leaves with a picture of a brighter future.

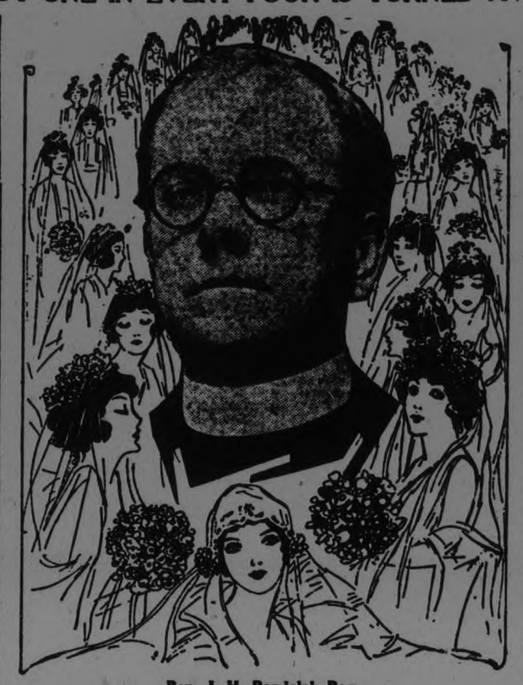
A man, about to be married fumbles in his pocket; drops of perspiration appear on his forehead; his face grows flaming red. He has put the wedding ring in his vest and hasn't worn the vest.

A man in army uniform enters. He bears the picture of a woman. Does the secretary remember having seen this woman? The secretary nods. Yes, she was married a few months ago. "Great God—that is my wife! I was overseas! Three lives are wrecked." The secretary recalls that the woman began to weep when the ceremony had ended and had wondered why.

Thus pass through the doorsay of the "Little Church" both sunshine and tears.

But now it is June and sunshine. The green vines dance with gold in the afternoon sun. And the rector, who smiles with an all-encompassing sympathy upon the varying parade, watches the young couples come timidly through the gate.

"No," he says, "brides do not change from one generation to the other. For women do not change at heart."



Rev. J. H. Randolph Ray

Interesting data on brides and weddings gathered from the Little Church Around the Corner.—

The modern girl still prefers the gold band ring to its platinum competitor.

The 1925 bride does not fancy elaborate church weddings, preferring a quiet ceremony. She does not like to be surrounded by fussing relatives and arranges for the wedding in an efficient business-like manner.

June brides are younger than those of other months and January grooms are older.

The groom is always the more nervous.

Marriages contracted when both parties are young are more successful.

When marriages are delayed the commercial element is more likely to enter. Finances become more important after the age of 25.

Jockey Bathing Suit

NEW YORK, June 10.—(United Press).—

When Milady rides the wave
She's bound to look real cute
If she is Fashions' ardent slave
And wears a jockey suit!

The "jockey" bathing suit is the latest thing in Europe. Women who want something different from the one-piece garment or the taffeta bathing suit that is made like a child's frock will appreciate this new addition to Fashion.

Shiny satin is the material used for the jockey suit. The upper portion, which is made exactly like a riding vest, is of contrasting color to the trouser portion. One model for instance, has a white satin waistcoat which extends to the hips, trimmed with mannish reveres and pockets. The vest buttons up the front just as the ordinary mannish vest does. The trousers of black satin are made loose and resemble trousers of a track suit. Since the vest is separate from the trousers, the trousers are attached to a snug bodice which is hidden by the vest. A rubberized jockey cap of brilliant color and a buttonniere made of rubberized flowers complete the costume.

Another model made on similar line combines a vest of orchid satin with turquoise satin trousers. Still another model uses a fushia-toned vest with white satin trousers. Fushia shades, by the way, will be among the newer bathing suit colors this season. There are many little taffetta suits with ruffled skirts which are made in fushia shades. Beach capes of purple are also smart this season.

NEED SYMPATHY.

Better Understanding Between East and West Necessary, Says Woman.

WINNIPEG, June 10.— (Canadian Press.)— The need of more sympathetic understanding between the east and the west was emphasized yesterday by Mrs. T. A. Cohoe, of Pilot Mound, in her presidential address at the opening session of the 15th annual convention of the Manitoba Federation of Women's Institutes. In acquiring a true sense of "world consciousness," she said, women could play their part in bringing about the reconciliation of nations and ultimate world peace.

The convention is being attended by 150 delegates.

LIVING HAPPILY DOESN'T HAPPEN

YOU JUNE BRIDE!

"When we are married!"

How wonderful it sounds to you now, Bride of June!

What glamor the words hold!

But what will M-A-R-R-I-A-G-E spell to you five or ten years from now?

Just what you want it to!

You hold it in your own smooth white hands to make of your love-life the thing you want it to be.

For you're starting now with everything in your favor. The man you love is in love with you. . . and that is the great factor.

Keep his in love with you. Look upon marriage as a business. Sink into it your fund of brains and beauty and high spirits just as a manufacturer put all of his capital into his business.

Don't think that you can sit back idly waiting to cut coupons of happiness and luxury. You can't. Life doesn't work out that way. . . You get from it just what you put into it. Nothing more.

There's a great truth hidden in the words of a silly little song-hit of the moment:

'I want to be happy
For I won't be happy
Till I make you happy too!"

You will discover presently, Little Bride, that the greatest happiness to be found anywhere in this world, lies in making the person you love happy. . . even if doing it means such homely work as washing dinner dishes and making French toast.

Love is a job and it must be worked at like any other job . . . dress-making, clerking or piano-moving!

"And so they were married and lived happily ever after" happens only in fairy tales. Living happily" doesn't just happen in real life. It has to be made to happen.

And love itself is made up of such small unimportant things . . a smile at the right time, the soft answer that turneth away wrath, the knack of sewing on shirt buttons so they will weather the weekly washing!

These tiny details are as much a part of successful wifehood as beauty and the ability to cope with the 'other' women that your attractive husband is sure to meet in the years that are ahead of you.

An unusual opportunity lies in store for citizens of Peterborough, when tonight and Thursday, at the George St. church, the famous Syrian artist, the Princess Rahme of Damascus makes her first appearance. The Princess ranks as the finest interpreter of Palestinian life on the lecture platform today and will visit Peterborough before returning to Western Canada for a chautauqua engagement. The press and pastors of our dominion speak in glowing terms of the work the princess is doing, giving first hand information of life in the Holy Land.

Wednesday evening at 8.15 in the George St. Church, Princess Rahme will present one of her recitals, giving an intimate glimpse of the manners, customs, ideals and aspirations of the Holy Land in an unique theme—"Syria, the Light of the rient."

Thursday evening at 8.15 she will give her Biblical drama of "Ruth and Naomi," herself playing the parts of Naomi and Orpah and her companion Miss Lucille Burgess the role of Ruth.

Arrayed in picturesque costumes of the East, the Princess brings the atmosphere of Palestine, her own land, very near her audience. She speaks English fluently, with a slight but attractive Eastern accent. Born in the old town of Baalbek, at the foot of Mt. Lebanon, the Princess Rahme was educated in the American Colleges at Sidon and Beirut, and later coming to America completed her education there. She is the first womn of high rank in her country to adopt a career and strike out into the great world for the purpose of giving a right interpretation of her nation, and revealing the inner life of the people in the Holy Land.

Postcard From Bailieboro Is Sixteen Years On Way To Addressee In Toronto

TORONTO, June 10.—(Canadian Press.)— Sixteen years after it was mailed in Bailieboro, Ontario, a postcard was delivered a few days ago at the home of Frank Weller, 213 Seaton street.

Fourteen years ago Mr. Weller purchased the house there from Albert Brown. The latter failing in health, went to California in the same year and died shortly after.

"Hullo Dad—Arrived home all O.K. and found everybody alive. It is very cold here today, lots of ice. Be good till I come back. (Signed) Your old pal. Lena B."

Is This Your BIRTHDAY

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10— One of your greatest faults, if today is your birthday, is that you are too suspicious of everybody. If a wife you suspect that your husband is in love with almost every stenographer in the office. If a man, you see to think that all of your business associates are trying to get your job. It is a fault that you usually are able to correct after you grow older. Usually bitter experiences cause you to see things in a different light. The chances are that you will marry between the ages of 20 and 23.

Billy Webb, of Buffalo, Used Abusive Language to Umpire Majerkurth.

UMPS USED FISTS.

Argument Over Decision in Game at Baltimore, Caused Trouble.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 10 (Canadian Press)—Manager Billy Webb of Buffalo, and Umpire Majerkurth were arrested after a display of fisticuffs beneath the grand stand following Baltimore's 6 to 1 victory yesterday. The altercation resulted from an argument during the game. Webb is said to have used abusive language to Majerkurth who struck the player and knocked him down before they were separated. Both were charged with disorderly conduct. Thomas was in fine form, the only Buffalo tally being made on a home run by Spencer first up in the opening inning. Score:

PROVIDENCE, R.I., June 10 (Canadian Press)—Going into the eighth inning yesterday an apparently beaten team, Rochester tore off four runs on all the varieties of baseball on the calendar. Manager Shaughnessy shifted pitchers twice during the melee and every change was for the worse. Whitman's muff started the trouble and Tomlin went into the air. In the seventh the locals had overcome a one run lead and gone to the front on some terrific batting and a mix-up similar to the happenings in the eighth. Score:

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER THORON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The back swing with the midiron differs from the back swing with the wood in that the iron back swing must be just slightly more upright. That is, you never send so take it back of you so noticeably as you do with the woods. A good rule with the midiron is to the iron in back that it never goes back of a line even with the outside point of the right shoulder. If it goes in behind you, you will be swinging it in the down swing, whereas the forward swing with the iron is more of a direct hit. However, you keep it low to the ground in starting the back swing, exactly as you do the wood. Brace the right leg, reach the left arm outward, then break the clubhead upward with the wrist—but always be careful not to introduce this wrist-breaking too early.

315 NOT OUT IN COUNTY CRICKET

Holmes, of Yorkshire, Made Wonderful Score —Highest Since 1905.

MATCH RESULTS.

LONDON, June 10 (Canadian Press Cable)—In the county cricket matches concluded yesterday, Holmes, playing for Yorkshire against Middlesex scored 315 runs, not out. This is the highest score by an Englishman since 1905 and broke the record for Lords' grounds established by William Ward back in 1920 which had stood ever since. It is also the highest score Holmes has ever made. Yorkshire won the match by an innings and 149 runs, Middlesex making 118 and 271 and Yorkshire declared after piling up 538 runs for six wickets. Other results of the championship games in county cricket follow:

C. G. E. TEAM WON BY 4 GOALS TO 1

They Outplayed the Juniors in Every Department.

The C.G.E. team defeated the select Junior team by four goals to one in a benefit game played last evening on King Edward Park, before a fair attendance.

First Half.

The seniors opened up with a bombardment that Frick held in check. Then Jim Mitchell replied for the juniors with nice crosses which was frustrated by C.G.E. defense. A break-away by their forwards gave the juniors a fright. Wade, at centre-half, kept his forwards well fed with the ball. Laidlaw from the wing, sent across to goal-mouth where Montgomery headed through his own goal. The continued pressure by the seniors tested Frick with all kinds of shots which he repelled, also being ably assisted by his full backs until half time arrived. C.G.E. 1, Juniors 0.

Half Time.

The second half witnessed a revival by the Juniors, but their opponents responded with a well-taken goal by Richmond when his head connected with a cross from Laidlaw. Hodgson replied at the other end with a header past Curtis. Play was very even thereafter. Both half-back lines were tactful but young Walker, a right half, gave a good account of himself. Laidlaw went down into the corner, frustrated the defense, then made an accurate centre, let Richmond in possession to beat Frick all the way. A few minutes later, Harry Curtis added another goal from the touchline. A last minute raid by Richmond culminated in the big fellow doing the needful, No. 4. Seniors 4, Juniors 1.

C.G.E.—Curtis, goal; F. Wade and Chambers, backs; Walker, J. Wade, Mann, half-backs; H. Curtis, Dawson, Richmond, Williams and Laidlaw, forwards.

Referee—Wm. Rickard.

SHOP LEAGUE GAME WELL CONTESTED

Production Beat Armature 12-4 in C.G.E. League on Monday.

On Monday afternoon after the 5 o'clock whistle blew, the Production and Armature Departments of the Canadian General Electric Company met in a good game in the C.G.E. Shop League. Both teams played for a win, but at the end of the game, the Production Department walked off with the game by the score of 12-4. The line-ups were:

HONUS STILL PLAYING BALL.

Once Great Wagner Cannot Forsake Love For Pastime That Made Him Famous.

Meet the Wagner boys, William and Honus. Perhaps you haven't heard a great deal about the former but the latter is the same fellow that used to cavort at shortstop for the Pittsburg Pirates and is still rated along with baseball's greatest players.

Honus, despite his advanced years, is even now capable of putting up a nifty game with the Carnegie Elks. Time has not greatly dimmed the old batting optics that enabled him to lead the National League's hitters on several occasions.

Brother William, who hails from Mt. Vernon, O., is an enthusiastic baseball fan and follows Honus around on the latter's playing trips.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

Fans who watched the Examiner-Lock Works Mercantile League battle on Monday night and saw Bill Duggan, the Examiner twirler, hold the opposition in check while his teammates hammered out a victory, little realized the exhibition of gameness they were being afforded. In the first inning Duggan, while stealing second, was hit by a ball thrown by Frank Jobbitt, the Lock Works' catcher, and sustained a fracture of the jaw-bone and the loss of three teeth. In spite of the shattered jaw and the pain of the injury to his molars, the injured player finished the game in the box and carried his team through to victory. Later in the evening, however, he collapsed. It was probably the first time on record that a pitcher with a broken jaw carried on throughout a ball game.

* * * * * * * * *

The Belleville team will be here on Saturday, and despite their lowly position in the league race, the fans are looking forward to a much better exhibition than was given during the visit of the Kingston Ponies last week. The Trunks are in the fight to stay, and claim that with nineteen games left to play they will give the front runners all the opposition they want coming down the stretch. Manager Gerow is building up his team, new material is being developed, and with the old punch still prominent in the Belleville attack the Quinte club cannot be treated lightly by any of the other league teams. Saturday's game will be in charge of Umpires Geo. Sullivan of Kingston and Si Dell of Oshawa, and will start at the usual hour, 3 o'clock.

It is to be hoped that the rumour that Jeff Hardill is to desert the junior ranks for the intermediate series is not authentic. Hardill is still young enough for junior ball, and if the junior Ontario championship, won by Peterboro during the last two years, is to be effectively defended his services are imperatively needed. With all due respect to the intermediate clubs in the city, the chances of winning a junior championship appears much brighter than the prospects for an intermediate Provincial pennant, and there does not seem to be any sound reason why Hardill's skill should be thrown away in a hopeless cause when the junior championship could perhaps be won with his assistance.

The final score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Mackmen. Until the eighth session Slim Harriss held the Cobbmen to five scattered hits but weakened. WON IN NINTH.

A very close game was played in the Exhibition Grounds last evening, when the Cognawagas won from Keene in the East Peterboro League by the score of 8-7. From the beginning, each team put up a very good fight and tried to win. Billingsley pitched for the "Cogs," while Robertson did the work for the visitors. Billingsley was slightly better than his opponent, striking out 11 to Robertson's 5. The home pitcher walked 5 and the visitor walked only 3. A fair crowd of spectators was present, also a few rooters who helped the "Cogs" to come through successfully.

Y.M.C.A. CAMP TO TO BE HELD JULY

Boys Proceed to Camp Rotary, Clear Lake, June 29.

RETURN JULY 11.

The preliminary announcements regarding this year's Y.M.C.A. Boys' Camp are now being sent out to parents of boys who are interested in camping. The sweltering heat of the past few days has caused more than one boy to glance longingly at the yet remaining days which must be passed in school ere the summer vacation time is at hand. Many parents are wondering just what can be done in the way of providing Johnny or Willie with an adequate outing at least expense. In view of the fact that the Rotary Club have gone to the expense and trouble of setting up their wonderful camp on Clear Lake the Y. M. C. A. is enabled to provide a real outing for the boys of the city at a very low rate. Rotary Camp is loaned on the condition that no person shall make a profit through its operation except the boys who learn much through communion with nature during the summer. Parents who send their boys to "Y Camp" may rest assured that they will be under competent supervision at all times. The leaders of camp are now undergoing a course of training covering eight weeks which will ensure a smooth running program of camping activities.

BASEBALL SIMPLIFIED

If a pitched ball strikes about a foot in front of the plate and then bounds directly over the heart of the plate, considerably above the knee, is it a strike or a ball?

If the ball after striking the ground in front of the plate was so deflected that it struck the batsman, would he be entitled to first base or would it merely be called a ball?

When a pitched ball strikes the ground in front of the home plate it loses any chance of being called a strike, unless the batsman should elect to swing at it and either miss or foul it off.

The fact that such a pitched ball bounded directly over the plate, a considerable distance above the batsman's knees, can be given no consideration. It instantly lost all chance of being ruled a called strike when it struck the ground.

However, if such a pitched ball struck the ground in front of the plate, and was then so deflected that it came into contact with the person of the batsman, that player was entitled to first base.

While technically it is a ball when it strikes the ground, the completion of the pitch doesn't actually occur until the ball has passed the batsman.

Therefore, if the batsman is hit by such a badly pitched ball, he is entitled to first base, as on any other pitched ball which comes into contact with the person of the batter.

BAPTISTS LOST IN TWO FRAMES

Last-Minute Changes Weakened Strong Opposition For Raybestos.

SCORE WAS 13-2.

Murray street Baracas faltered in two frames of their East Peterboro League games with Raybestos at the Exhibition Park last evening, and were defeated by the score of 13 to 2. Delahaye on the Mound for the Baptists put three on in the first passing Batten and Nicholls and dead heading Ranger. A long [illegible] ore which Fleming misjudged scored three runs, and before the side was retired Raybestos had five counters. In the succeeding four innings high class fielding was very much in evidence. In the sixth, with two out, Batten's drive was lost in the hay and it went for a homer. A batting bee followed, Raybestos scoring seven times. The Murray street team was handicapped by having to make last-minute changes in the line up. At full strength the Baptists will be a hard team to beat. Moore's good work with the stick and in fielding was a feature of the winner's play. He had a brace of two-baggers and a single, drove in five runs, and accepted four chances.

Score by innings:

BILLY EVANS SAYS

BALL STANDARDS

Is there any marked difference in the grade of ball that is played in the two major leagues?

That is the question I am often asked.

Since both major leagues have the same fields from which to gather their material, it is apparent that with an equal amount of effort and expenditure of money there should be no appreciable difference in the standards.

On the whole, that is true. At times there possibly is a slight difference in the standard of play, but it is fluctuating.

While the winning of the world series, in which the American League has been unusually successful, is supposed to determine the superiority of the grade of ball, it is not necessaily an always accurate barometer.

I know that the Boston Braves were not as good a club as the Philadelphia Athletics, yet they won in four straight games. In 1906 the Chicago White Sox beat the Cubs, easily the class of the majors that year.

COLORFUL STARS

In picking up likely major material the element of luck plays a certain part.

Colorful stars are perhaps an even greater attraction than standard of play.

In this respect the American League has been far more fortunate than the National during the last 20 years.

The American League has had its Cobb, Speaker, Walsh, Collins, Ruth, Johnson, Schalk and many other outstanding stars. In this respect the edge has been decidedly with the American League.

Some idea of what an outstanding star means to a ball club, also the fans, can be gleamed from the case of Babe Ruth.

YANKS MISS RUTH

Without him in the lineup, the Yankees, during the first month of play, have been floundering about, getting nowhere.

It is possible that the team might have been as disappointing with Ruth in the game, but I doubt it. The big fellow is a punch and a threat—a real menace.

With him out of the lineup the Yanks have not drawn nearly so well as in previous years. The fans have missed him and stayed away from the parks.

Ruth's illness has caused not only the Yankees but all opposing clubs to lose plenty of big money this spring. Incidentally, the fans have been deprived of the joy they get out of seeing the big fellow in action.

The case of Ruth is an excellent example of what the colorful star means to a ball club, artistically and financially.

FIVE BIG STARS

Another great feature that has added a touch of color to the play of the Ameri- that star players have met with as managers.

First, Tris Speaker gets the center of the stage by winning a pennant and world series in his second year as manager at Cleveland.

Ty Cobb then decides to take a whirl and has been a pennant contender each year. Next came George Sisler and Stanley Harris.

Harris, the youngest manager in the history of the major leagues, did the decidedly unusual by winning a pennant and a world series in his first year.

The latest outstanding star to make a bid for managerial honors is Eddie Collins of the White Sox, greatest second baseman of all time. He has made a decidedly auspicious start.

For five star players, outstanding celebrities, to all make good as managers, is decidedly out of the ordinary and a great break for the American League.

SOCCER NOTES

U. S. Hunters Out.

Charlie Shaw, the veteran, who has severed the long and friendly tie that bound him to Celtic, has not only signed for the New Bedford Club in the U.S. as manager coach, but he is inviting players of talent to join him in the trip across. In an advertisement above his name in Old Country sporting newspapers first class players for all positions in the New Bedford Club are invited to make applications to Shaw. New Bedford is not the only American club on the hunt for talent. At least one other has an emissary, moving around among Scottish players, but time alone will reveal what success has attended his mission.

ASKS QUESTIONS ABOUT SAVINGS

Progressive Inquiries About Restrictions on Deposits With Post Office.

SAVE MONEY.

OTTAWA, June 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Has the minister considered giving a higher rate of interest to depositors in post office savings accounts, and making more use of the system of borrowing for the government, thus saving a considerable sum of money," asked H. E. Spencer (Progressive, Battle River), when a bill for the raising of a loan of $164,000,000 for public service, was under consideration in committee, of the House of Commons.

Mr. Spencer further enquired if the Acting Minister of Finance, Hon. J. A. Robb had considered making further use of savings in the post office department by removing some of the present restrictions. He understood there was a limit of $1,500 that could be placed by one person in the post office department in one year, and a limit of $5,000 in all on which interest could be paid.

"That is a matter worthy of consideration," replied Mr. Robb. "I have not taken it into consideration."

The armor used by Joan of Arc was especially made for her in Tours.

STILL PRESS FOR SCOTCH FREEDOM

Scottish National League is Small, But Very Persevering.

LONDON, June 10 (Canadian Press).—A body of Scottish opinion, small in numbers but possessing an abundance of the national characteristic, perseverance, continues pressing for Scottish independence. In this connection the Scottish National League believes that the Clydeside members of the House of Commons are lukewarm in their attitude towards such aspirations, and the league proposes to submit opponents to these M.P.'s in the next election.

If representatives of the league are elected it is intended that they shall refuse to take their seats in the imperial parliament as a protest against Scotland not being allowed her independence.

THREATENS MURDER CABINET MINISTER

Charles Maurras Publishes Warning Over His Signature in Paper.

PARIS, June 10. (Canadian Press).—Charles Maurras, leader of the French Royalist organization, L'Action Francaise, yesterday deliberately threatened to have Minister of the Interior Abraham Schrameck murdered by one of the young Royalists if the Minister put into execution the alleged plans for repeating a recent search of members of L'Action Francaise for prohibited arms.

The threat was published in a letter to the newspaper L'Action Francaise, and was published over the signature of M. Maurras, who intimated a copy had been posted to M. Schrameck.

MONTREAL, June 10. — Canadian Press. — Crown witnesses at the trial of Brother Usmar, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Hector Galarneau, 8 years of age, in January, from scalds received in a bath tub at Huberdue orphanage here, yesterday said that Usmar had told the other boys to attack Galarneau, had thrashed the lad, and fed him bread and water.

WITHDRAW APPEAL ON RAILWAY RATES

Passage of Bill Now Before Federal Government Will Cause Action.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 10 (Canadian Press).—Withdrawal of the Provincial Government's appeal to the Privy Council respecting the validity of the Manitoba rate agreement with the Canadian Northern Railway necessarily will follow passage of the freight rates equalization bill, now before the Federal Government, Hon. R. W. Craig, attorney-general declared yesterday.

Should the Government bill unqualifiedly throw into the discard all special agreements, such as the Canadian Northern pact, Manitoba would have no standing in its appeal, Mr. Craig asserted.

In the event of the agreement being wiped out, the attorney-general hinted that compensation would be sought by the province. Meanwhile Mr. Craig is pressing his efforts to align Alberta and Saskatchewan with Manitoba in the fight for the best possible terms at Ottawa.

The situation created by the new freight rates bill is being thoroughly canvassed with a view to formulating effective counter-action.

After the accident eight more dynatmite caps were found in the boy's desk.

THEATRES

HUMOR AND THRILLS PREDOMINATE "ON TIME!" WITH RICHARD TALMADGE.

"On Time!" at once a supremely thrilling and boisterously funny photoplay, with Richard Talmadge, the dare-devil performer of death defying stunts, in the leading role, comes to the Royal Theatre on Thursday for an engagement.

"On Time!" is an exceptionally vivid melodrama of startling motives and decidedly weird action, which verges at times into uproarious farce. It deals with the uncertain and much crossed road to success of Harry Willis, a young man of pluck and ambition, as played by Richard Talmadge. Naturally there is a girl, the same one, at the beginning and at the end of the young man's adventures. An unscrupulous dealer in art objects, with an eye to the beautiful young lady, does his utmost to put skids under the hero's ambitions — and almost succeeds. Because the young man has thrown away as a jinx, a strange Chinese idol which the young lady had given him as a good luck token when he started out to find success, the art dealer sets the boss of Chinatown against him by accusing him of wilfully losing the idol which they look upon as sacred. In the unfolding of thrilling events there is the capture of the girl by the Chinamen and a sensational rescue in their den where the hero fights single handed against the entire tong.

And there are other adventures for the hero before he reaches the coveted goal of success; such as an uncanny experience with an insane doctor, who but for a sensational escape, would have used the young men as a subject for the transfer of a gorilla's brain to a human being.

Richard Talmadge performs the full quota of startling stunts as a jump from the top of a telegraph pole, seven stories in the air, to the roof of an adjoining house.

Supporting the stunt king in "On Time!" are such well and favorably known players as Billie Dove, playing the leading female role, George Siegman, Stuart Holmes, Tom Wilson, Charles Clary and Douglas Gerard.

CLOSES RUN TO-DAY.

The Paramount picture, "Worldly Goods," starring Agnes Ayres, which was shown for the first time in Peterborough last Monday at the Royal Theatre, will close its run this evening.

The picture is an adaptation of the novel by Sophie Kerr. Pat O'Malley, Victor Varconi and Edythe Chapman head the cast playing in support of the star.

It's a matrimonial comedy-drama of the better kind.

AMATEUR NIGHT THURSDAY AT ROYAL.

Amateur night with new local talent, will be an added attraction at the Royal to-morrow night.

AT THE CAPITOL

NORMA TALMADGE IN MOTHER-LOVE DRAMA.

Beautiful Screen Star Has Tense Dramatic Role in "The Lady."

He rose to fame by his direction of Vera Gordon as the ghetto mother in "Humoresque," and he accomplished an even more poignant picture of mother love in "Secrets," with Norma Talmadge as the young frontier wife, as the middle-aged and then aged mother in an English baronial castle.

Now, in "The Lady," which Norma is playing in at the Capitol Theatre, the "Borzage touch" is again evident. The mother theme is strongly to the fore in 'The Lady' and Norma has an opportunity to display an exceptionally wide range of characterization.

In "The Lady" Norma plays the part of a wife who is robbed of her husband by an adventuress, and who is later left alone in the world with her baby after her husband's death. Declared to be "an unfit mother," Norma then has her baby taken from her. Years pass, the World War comes, and Norma again meets her boy in circumstances of a most dramatic and tragic nature.

"The Lady" is a First National attraction produced by Joseph M. Schenck. It was directed by Borzage from Frances Marion's adaptation of the stage play of the same title.

The special supporting cast inclues Wallace MacDonald, Norma's leading man; Alf Goulding, Brandon Hurst, Emily Fitzroy, George Hackathorne, Walter Long, Marc MacDermott, Dorris Lloyd, John Fox, Jr., Paulette Duxal, Edwin Hubbell, Loro Bara, John Herdman, Margaret Seddon.

AT THE GRAND.

HUGE CIRCUS ELEPHANTS ARE PETS COMPARED TO AFRICAN VARIETY

H. A. Snow's "Hunting Big Game in Africa" which will be presented at the Grand theatre on Friday and Saturday is going to startle folks whose only visualization of wild creatures is of the zoo or menagerie.

The big game presented is from onethird to two-thirds larger than the captive cousins in the menageries. Means have been found of picturing many of the larger wild animals in close-ups. Actual combats are shown, and each hunt is a thrilling continuity from the first tracking to the stopping of the charging animal by Mr. Snow's rifle.

The story begins on the west coast of Africa, then South Africa is visited, native "jazz" fashions and ceremonies are recorded, the Kimberly diamond fields are explored, and soon the grand safari starts via Mombasa towards the Equator.

Old elephant trails constituted the only roads into the jungle. One of these led into the vast crater or bowl of an extinct volcano, where the party nearly lost their lives by an elephant stampede. Attacks on their camp by lions, leopards, hyenas and othed prowlers were an almost nightly occurrence. When an ant army invaded, refuge was found only by placing the sleeping cots in the river!

There were many other hardships, privations and breath-taking escapes, but out of it all the Snow party emerged in 1924, with the most compete collection of museum specimens ever made and a series of pictures that for the first time portray the Kingdom of Beasts in matchless splendor and reality. This picture comes here after an engagement of three solid months in New York City, where it played to capacity audiences, averaging 20,000 a week.

RAMESES TEMPLE UNDER G. L. HAY AT LOS ANGELES

Twenty-one Special Trains in Same Afternoon Carry Nobles.

BIG PARADE

Great Amphitheatre Seats 90,000 Persons—Brilliant Colors in Assemblage.

During the pilgrimage of Rameses representatives, in charge of the Illustrious Potentate, G. L. Hay, to the Imperial Council A.A.O.N.M.S., which is being held at the Oasis of Los Angeles, the gateway of the golden citadel of Southern California, the first visit was made at Medinal Temple, Chicago, where the Patrol, Band and Chanters, to the number of sixteen hundred, were making preparations to join in the Caravan. The next stop was made at Salt Lake City, where representatives from many of the Eastern States rested or viewed the different points of interest. Twenty-one special trains left Salt Lake City on the same afternoon, all travelling two miles apart. On arrival at Los Angeles, one was immediately impressed with the preparations that had been made to receive the two hundred thousand or more Nobles.

There were thousands of cars of Al. Malaikah Nobles ready to convey the visiting Nobility to their respective hotels immediately. After coming over the burning desert sands it was a pleasure and a relief to see the streets, which were veritable canyons of gay color and literally packed with people. It is quite easy to believe that never before have such pains been taken as the Nobles of Al Malaikah Temple have done for their visitors on this occasion. Everything seems to have been done for their pleasure and enjoyment, with the possible exception of providing time or opportunity for rest.

The official opening of the session was preceded by a great pageant at the Coliseum, where ninety thousand people can be seated. Gay was the scene as the great chain of color, red predominating, wended its way around the bowl. The flash of the sun on the emblems and decorations of the gorgeous accoutrements of the Nobles lent life and action to the scene. There welled from the instruments of over sixty bands a chorus that thrilled the heart of the spectator to exaltation. In perfect harmony with the Arabic scene being unfolded lined by the cheering crowds stood the tall palms of the desert. At the close of the march the massed bands played 'America,' under the direction of the leader of the Dallas, Texas, band.

A CORRECTION.

Dr. Neal Referred to Mr. Dicken in Wrong Capacity.

It has been drawn to the attention of The Examiner that in the report of the presentation of prizes to the winners in connection with the Made-in-Peterboro Fair, in the remarks of Dr. Neal in last night's issue, Mr. W. H. Dickin was referred to as being connected with the Scottish Woollen Mills. This is not correct, as Mr. Dickin is the local representative of the House of Hobberlin, Ltd.

Oh why was she taken so young and so fair
When earth had so many it better could spare,
Hard, hard was the blow that compelled us to part
From the loved one so near and so dear to our hearts.

Gone from among us, oh! how we miss her.
Never 'til life ends will we ever forget her.
Dear to our hearts is the place where she sleeps
Loving her dearly her memory will keep.

Active Buying Of Wheat Slumps Under Big Sales

CHICAGO, June 10 (Canadian Press)—Active general buying gave a big lift to wheat prices at the opening today but sales to realize profits resulted soon in a decided set back from the initial top figures. Pessimistic new crop advices from Kansas today tended to strengthen values. The opening, which ranged from 1¾ to 4c higher, July 169 to 169¾ and September 165 to 167 was followed by a reaction to 167¼ for July and 164¾ for September.

Corn and oats adavnced and reacted in line with wheat. After opening at 1 to 1⅝ cents higher, September 118¾ to 119¾, the corn market lost nearly all of the gain.

Oats started at ⅛ to 1¼c advance, September 56¾ to 57⅛. Later the market sagged slightly below yesterday's finish but then rallied somewhat.

Provisions were weak, owing to lower quotations on hogs.

Prices Gather Strength In Wall Street Trading

NEW YORK, June 10.—(Canadian Press.) — Prices gathered strength as trading progressed in Wall street, the lowering of the call money rate and the optimistic tenor of the weekly steel trade reviews having a cheerful effect on speculative sentiment. Trading continued to be largely of a professional character with the public slow to re-enter the market except in the oil shares ahnd a few selected motors, rails and specialties, which showed indications of outside accumulation. American Can, Mack Trucks, Crucible Steel, Independent and Gas, Chandler, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were in good demand around mid-day, while U. S. Steel crossed 114 just before the monthly tonnage report was issued. Maxwell Motors B certificates recovered their early loss of 3 points, but May Department Stores and Havana Electric continued to yield to profit taking. Call money renewed at 4 per cent. and then dropped to 3 3-4.

Skull 50,000 Years Old Shows No Trace Of Ape

The most accurate scientific measurements known show the skull to be that of a fully developed man.

It has no trace of the ape or monkey. If man has descended from some ape-like ancestor, the descent was just about complete when this man lived.

The reconstruction was made at the University of Nebraska. Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the medical college there, is authority for the statement that this primeval man was just about as far advanced as man is today.

Fragments of the skull were found in glacial drift on a side hill near Omaha. They are believed to be from 50,000 to 250,000 years old.

Very careful facial and cranial measurements are used to reconstruct an entire head when only a few pieces of the skull are had. They are as accurate as science can make them.

In the case of such remains as the Heidelberg man and the Java man, the reconstructed skull seemed to be of a primitive, undeveloped type, resembling that of ape nearly as much as that of a man.

But in this case the reverse was true.

Scores of centuries ago, when human kind was supposed to be only slightly higher than the ape, this man apparently was fully developed—as much a man as the Indians Columbus found.

VOL. LVI., No 136 PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1925 PRICE THREE CENTS

The United Church of Canada

By R. E. KNOWLES

With one accord . . . acclaimed the United Church of Canada as the most truly forward-looking of all the Christian churches of the globe . . . Canada has led the world.

TORONTO June 11. — Other pens than mine will tell, have probably already told, the story of yesterday,, a mimentous day in the history of the Christian world. All I can hope to do is to interpret if I can its high significance and briefly outline its salient features.

For momentous the day will surely be. Union, that mystic thing upon which all life depends, is well within everybody's ken, pervading as it does every kingdom where life is found. Nor has it been wanting in the history of the Christian church. Re-unions there have been aplenty among the dismembered church families who have, never having renounced the family name, returned to the unforgotten domestic fireside and taken up the past as though it were yesterday.

But never before have any great churches of differing historical source, of alien traditions, of varying names, of apparently diverging and ever conflicting doctrines—never before have they sunk their distinctive differences, adjusted their opposing creeds, laid aside the vesture of dear and familiar names, surrendered their separate journals, scrapped their bureaucratic officialdoms, in order that they might, in the blended community of a larger life and a united effort, further the welfare of mankind and the interests of the kingdom of God.

These things yesterday were done by the Presbyterian church in Canada, the Methodists and the Congregationalists together. This epoch-marking union, towards which the eyes of all Christendom are turned, was effected amid great pomp and circumstances yesterday morning, in the presence and audition of 8,000 people within the vast area of the arena here in Toronto.

Pomp and circumstance—but not of the traditional or meretricious sort—far other was the case. The story that shone around was not that of gorgeous ritual or glorious music or imposing millinery of ecclestiastical symbol, but rather in the deep and pervading joy, the reverent hope, the wistful outlook to great days beyond, the suppressed sorrow over all that has been renounced, swallowed up in the rich reward of a nobler visibility of the Church of God before the world, of a burning purpose to prove before men and angels that the sovereign things of the faith as it is in Jesus have bidden the theological trifles retreat with coward footsteps into the twilight when they came.

There was a sublime rotation of ministers in the great exercises of yesterday. Denominational lives were impossible to discover and the greetings that gladdened the exultant thousands came from every quarter of the globe. Distant California, outmost Africa, transglobular China, far-off India, antipodean New Zealand all contributed their voice of joy and blessing. With one accord, and usually in so many words, they acclaimed the United Church of Canada as the most truly forward-looking of all the Christian churches of the globe. The eminent delegate from the United Free Church of Scotland boldly affirmed that Canada has led the world. His affirmation that in Union churches do not die; that they rather thereby enter upon a fuller and larger life, was received with rapturous acclaim. His assurance that the Presbyterian Church in Canada is the continuing Presbyterian Church provoked the wildest demonstration I have ever witnessed in a public gathering in my life. The occasion was one of unmeasured inspiration and power, harbinger of a bright and blessed day in the moral and religious life of Canada.

SIXTY YEARS IN PRIESTHOOD FOR CARDINAL BEGIN

Aged Prelate Received Congratulations on Anniversary of Ordination.

CELEBRATED MASS.

Three Hundred Clergy of Diocese Were Present at Religious Ceremony.

QUEBEC, June 11. (Canadian Press). — His Eminence Cardinal Begin celebrated yesterday the sixtieth anniversary of his ordination. And the entire diocese celebrated it with him. His Holiness Pope Pius XI. cabled his congratulations to the Canadian Primate Tuesday, and his cablegram was read at the luncheon held in the Archbishop's Palace yesterday.

The celebration began with His Eminence repairing to the seminary chapel in company with the members of his staff and celebrating mass. The ceremony was attended by more than three hundred members of the city clergy.

Following the mass a large number of the clergy attended luncheon as guests of His Eminence and were given an opportunity to congratulate him in person. This is the first time that a prince of the church in Canada has attained sixty years in service.

Last evening the St. Deny's Academy held its last meeting of the year and the celebrations were attended by His Eminence, the members of his staff and the directors and teachers of the two seminaries and Laval University.

Upon the conclusion of the religious ceremony, His Grace Mgr. Langlois addressed to His Eminence the congratulations of the local and diocesan clergy. His Grace recalled the brilliant ecclesiastical career followed by His Eminence, and spoke of him as a worthy successor to Cardinal Taschereau. His sane exposition of Church doctrine had made him an outstanding figure in the clerical life of the continent, a fact which had been recognized at home when he was created a prince of the Church and Primate of all Canada.

His Eminence, with characteristic modesty, thanked the members of his clergy for their good wishes and attributed to the Divine Grace any success he may have had in his ecclesiastical career. He recalled his ordination in the Basilica of St. John of Latran in Rome and his experience as a teacher in the Quebec Seminary, the University and the Normal School at Chicoutini. He had dedicated his life to the teaching of youth, the inculcation of Divine principles on their minds. In this he might have achieved some success, and if he had, his thanks were due in large measure to the assistance he had received from the members of his staff.

With this assistance, he had been able to achieve something since his elevation to the episcopate. In closing, His Eminence again addressed his thanks to the members of the clergy, and assured them of his affection and goodwill.

The text of the message received from His Holiness the Pope, which was read at the luncheon held after the ceremony, is as follows:

"On the happy occasion of your sacerdotal diamond jubilee, the Holy Father, with his heartiest congratulations and best wishes, sends you his apostolic benediction and also blesses your clergy and faithful. Please accept my personal congratulations and good wishes.—(Signed) Cardinal Gasparri."

ENTHUSIASTIC CROWDS HEARD ADDRESSES BY LEADERS OF THE THREE UNITING DENOMINATIONS

Should Follow Principles That Brought About Union, Said Dr. Endicott.

TRANSCENDED CREED.

Westminster Confession Greater in Basis of Union Than Ever Before.

TORONTO, June 11 (Canadian Press) — Seven hundred thousand strong, Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists yesterday marched into the United Church of Canada and demonstrated their unity in three sessions of devotion and addresess, each of them attended by between 7,000 and 8,000 persons.

"This has been the greatest day in the history of Toronto and of Canada, and in some respects, of the Christian world," said Rev. Dr. James Endicott, secretary for foreign missions of the Methodist church, in addressing the gathering yesterday afternoon. The speakers were Dr. Endicott, Rev. Dr. D. L. Ritchie, principal of the Congregational college at Montreal, and Rev. Dr. Clarence MacKinnon,, ex-moderator of the Presbyterian church in Canada.

The session at the A rena in the morning saw the new church dedicated and constituted, a ceremony which was completed in the afternoon when the 350 delegates to the first General Council filed onto the platform and affixed their signatures to the basis of union which the heads of the the denominations already had signed. The chairman during the afternoon was Rev. Dr. G. C. Pidgeon, Presbyterian moderator, and it was agreed that until permanent officials are elected the moderator, the Methodist general superintendent and the C ongregational general chairman should preside over the sessions as they agree. Secretaries and clerks of the denominations also are to carry on in the same way. Last night a third huge crowd gathered to hear representatives of the Overseas churches with which the uniting denominations have had affiliations.

At the afternoon session Rev. Dr. R. P. MacKay, Presbyterian foreign mission secretary, presented to the chairman a gavel made of pieces of wood from the foreign mission fields, with a handle of Canadian maple. The basis of union was signed on a table presented to the Church by the publications boards, and the delegates signed with a pen presented by Mrs. Carman, widow of Rev. Dr. Albert Carman, for that purpose.

Dr. Endicott aroused great enthusiasm in his address when he referred to the leaders of the Presbyterian unionists, mentioning by name Rev. Dr. Pidgeon and Rev. Dr. Gandier, principal of Knox College. "In the bitterest combat the church in Canada ever has known," he said, "the leaders stood together and pressed forward. That applause," he added a moment later, "should go across Canada."

Dr. Endicott said he believed the United Church could do no better than follow the principles which had brought about the union. There was the principle of Christian aspiration, of strong purpose, of vision and unity. If unity were the great principle to bring them together,, it also was the principle which would enable them to live in harmony. There were tremendous difficulties in denominationalism, and whatever might have been necessary in the past, man now needed a peculiar type of mind if he prayed for divisions. The call for unity transcended not merely demnominationalism but nationalism. If it were right for Knox to organize his church for the sake of Scotland it could not be wrong for them today to organize the United Church for the sake of Canada, but at the same time he wished to point out the danger of over emphasis in nationalism.

"Today we have transcended the creeds," continued Dr. Endicott. However good the old Westminster Confessions might have been, for instance ,it was better today in the basis of union than ever before. They had not taken out a single thing which ought to be in. If they had to choose between the past and the future they always would choose the future. Their fathers were not a bit more important than their children.

"We have made a great beginning but no more," concluded the speaker. "Let us see that the principles which brought us together shall keep us together and make this movement triumphant to the ends of the earth."

Figures which will be presented to the General Council give an approximate membership for the United Church of 692,688, made up of 12,220 Congregationalists, 414,047 Methodists and 266,111 Presbyterians. These are comprised in 174 Congregational churches, 4,797 Methodist churches and 3,835 Presbyterian churches. Ministers entering the new church are given as 3,819, being 85 Congregationists, 2,065 Methodists and 1,669 Presbyterians. Adding 848 missionaries there is a total ministerial force of 4,467. The total Presbyterian membership was given as 374,951, of whom 108,840 had voted against union.

The General Council, which meets tomorrow for business sessions in Metropolitan church, will be asked to appoint a special committee to recommend a method by which the various departments shall be carried on. These departments include home and foreign missions, women's missionary societies, social service, Sunday school work and young people's societies, education and colleges, finance and publications. A recommendation also will be made that a commission be appointed to consider the permanent organiation of the United Church and its General Council, their boards and committees, to report at an adjourned meeting of the First General Council or at the second Council two years hence.

Local congregations of the uniting denominations may retain their local names—such as Metropolitan Methodist church, Bloor street Presbyterian and Bond street Congregational—in the opinion of the legal committee of which N. W. Rowell K.C., is chairman, and which will go to the Council. "Your committee," says the report, "is of the opinion that local churches have the right to retain their existing names if they desire to do so. Your committee expresses no opinion on the question of policy involved in the continued use of such local names."

HEAR WITNESSES IN FRAUD CASE AT JUNE SESSION

Farmers Received Checks For Which No Money Was Forthcoming.

SOME TOOK NOTES.

When Checks Were Not Cashed—Knew Nothing to Discredit of Dealers.

Examination of witnesses was commenced yesterday afternoon in the case against Merson and Sherman on charges of fraud and false pretences. The jury was enpanelled as follows:

Addressing the jury, Attorney Hatton recapitulated the events that led to the charges being brought against the accused. Merson has lived in Peterboro for some years where he has engaged in business as a cattle dealer, at first on his own account and afterwards in partnership with Sherman, whose home is in Montreal. Together they carried on their business, as is shown by the records for two or three years, during which their business increased materially.

In connection with the charges, he asked the jury to note specially that before agreeing to purchase the cattle from the complainants, a purchase involving the sum of $3,400, the accused visited the farmers and talked over the deal some weeks before the agreement was reached and the cattle placed in the pens at Peterboro, Cavan, Omemee and other stations. When the cattle were delivered, in many cases at dusk in the evening, checks were tendered dated Nov. 1 and marked payable on Nov. 3. The checks were signed by each of the accused. On presenting the checks at the Dominion Bank the farmers were told for the first time, the checks were not payable until November 6.

On November 4, two days before the drafts were due, Merson and Shermans' son went to the Dominion Bank and deposited checks for $3,700. On the day after, as evidence would show, they withdrew all this except $400 that had been overdrawn. None of the farmers who presented the checks at the bank received cash. In some cases, the accused prevailed on creditors to take notes in lieu of the checks they had failed to get cashed.

Dennis Duffy, questioned by Attorney Hatton, stated that last July he sold to Merson and Sherman six head of cattle and "a bunch of lambs." No time was specified as to delivery. He was to keep them until an arrangement had been made regarding shipping. He next saw them on the last day of October. The cattle and lambs were delivered on November 1. Sherman told him that payment would be made by a check. Duffy demured, saying he had trouble with a previous check, Sherman told him if he went to the Dominion Bank in Peterboro, he would get the check cashed all right. Shown a check for $625 he identified it as the check in question. Cross-examined by Mr. Wearing, he said he had never heard of the defendants entering into a conspiracy to defraud him or any one else. The only complaint he had to make was that payment had never been made for the goods delivered. Asked by Mr. Wearing witness stated that neither Sherman nor Merson raised any question as to the lambs being below the weight he had represented to them.

Michael Duffy was the person who actually delivered the animals mentioned by his brother, the previous witness. Sherman and Merson saw the lambs, but he was not sure them before handing over the check. He had agreed to bring 25

2,000 STRIKING MINERS WIN BATTLE WITH 40 POLICEMEN; ONE KILLED; SCORES WOUNDED

Strikers Attacked Plant at Noon To-day, Recapturing Power House.

COMPLETE CONTROL.

Barb Wire Entanglements Failed to Support Coup By Police.

GLACE BAY, N.S., June 11 (Canadian Press).—After a pitched battle, lasting upwards of fifteen minutes, striking miners, shortly after noon today recaptured the new Waterford power station from which they were driven this morning by Corporation police. This afternoon they are in complete control of the plant. One man, William Davis, was killed and another, Gilbert Watson, was shot in the stomach and severely injured in the battle. A number of British Empire Steel Corporation's police were injured. The situation at the Waterford plant is reported to be serious.

Early this morning pickets were driven from the plant by police and steps were immediately taken to get up steam, while the police kept guard and mounted officers patrolled the colliery district. Following the first clash a large body of strikers met in the ball park and discussed the situation and some time later were seen moving towards the power plant. The police prepared for battle, but were in a short time overcome by superior numbers.

Power Necessary.

After capturing the plant this morning in a raid, Corporation police prepared to operate the station, which generates power for the maintenance of a group of mines in the southern area. They proceeded to protect the plant from attacks by stringing barbed wire entanglements. In a massed attack by the strikers, however, the barbed wires were cut as well as all telegraph and telephonephone wires leading to the plant. The Company's police were severely handled by the strikers.

The operation of the power plant was regarded by the Corporation officials as necessary in order to save some of the mines from destruction. Since the power was cut off a week ago by pickets, some of the pumps have been submerged.

William Davis was a striker, as is Watson, whose condition is serious. After they were overcome, the forty police were all severely mauled by the strikers, many of them are in hospital and the police station is full of wounded. One policeman, Michael O'Handley, has his back broken. About two thousand strikers advanced on the plant.

BROTHER USMAR FOUND GUILTY ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER ARISING FROM CHILD'S DEATH

Admission By Brother Usmar Destroyed Defence Offered, Said Prosecutor.

"FORGET SOUTANE."

Counsel on Both Sides Told Jury to Forget Clerical Rank.

MONTREAL, June 11. (Canadian Press).—J. T. Vleeschouwer, in religious life known as Brother Usmar, connected with the Orphanage at Huberdeau, Que., was found guilty of manslaughter by a French jury in the Court of the King's Bench. Sentence will be pronounced at the end of the present term of that tribunal. Brother Usmar had been standing trial for the fatal scalding at the Orphanage on January 21 last of the eight-year-old Hector Galarneau, an inmate, who succumbed to burns received in a tub of boiling water in which he was placed by the accused, following the soiling of his clothes through intestinal trouble. The explanation given by Brother Usmar was that the scalding occurred while he was getting the boy some clean clothes.

In summing up the evidence, Mr. Justice Wilson said he was of the opinion that the child had held on to the sides of the tub as long and as hard as he could in an attempt to keep out of the scalding water. That would explain why his hands had not been burned and why there was a line of demarcation about his middle.

MONTREAL, June 11. (Canadian Press).—The taking of evidence in the case of Brother Usmar, charged with manslaughter in connection with the fatal scalding of Hector Galarneau, 8 years of age, on January 21 at Huberdeau Orphanage, was concluded in the Court of the King's Bench yesterday afternoon. Defence and Crown attorneys summed up their cases yesterday, and Mr. Justice Wilson delivered his address this morning. A verdict is expected some time in the afternoon.

Two admissions by Brother Usmar himself destroyed the defence he had offered against the charge that he was guilty of manslaughter, declared Ernest Bertrand, K.C., Crown prosecutor, in his address.

The Brother, Mr. Bertrand said, confessed that he put the child into the laundry tub in a kneeling position and that while he was upstairs looking for clean clothing, he heard a loud cry. That, the Crown prosecutor argued, demolished the plea of Gustav Monette, counsel for the defence, that the boy's corpse showed he had lain stretched out in the water and had become scalded before he knew it, and that the lad had so acted possibly because of mental weakness which expressed itself in insensibility to pain.

"Forget the soutane" was the admonition to the jury by both Crown and defence. Mr. Monette deprecated wide publication of testimony against an accused before he come to trial, and flayed certain sections of public opinion that appeared to want a conviction in the case because Brother Usmar was a cleric, and was from Europe.

Mr. Bertrand told the jurors that if they acquitted the accused merely because he did wear a gown, they would be false to their oath, and aided those who like to say that in the Province of Quebec there were some classes who could commit any crime with impunity.

T. V. Canal Costs Millions But Pays Only Thousands

OTTAWA, June 11. Canadian Press. — The Trent Valley Canal which was commenced in 1833, has cost Canada $24,307,179.32, up to the end of March, 1925, according to answers made in the House of Commons yesterday by Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways. The estimated cost of the completion of the work is $3,164,432. Since 1920, $4,091,000 has been spent on upkeep and operation, while during the same period the revenue was $389,791.

And Yet the Grand Jury Neglected To Recommend Cure For Bad Acoustics!

Some of the winesses in the Sherman-Merson case yesterday showed a decided disposition to speak in whispers To one witness, whose replies were almost inaudible, His Honor Judge Huycke remarked: "Do you see that juror over there beside the constable? Well I think he is likely to go to sleep. I am sure he cannot hear you." Appropos of a conversation between witness and one of the counsel, His Honor genially said: "I wish you gentlemen would not be quite so confidential."

Another witness whose replies were uttered in a very low voice, was urged by Crown Attorney Hatton to "Speak up just as if you were calling on the sheep." "Or calling the cattle home," added His Honor.

WEATHER

A truly remarkable change has occurred in weather conditions. A few days ago we were sweltering in oppressive heat; this morning there was frost in the air. Highest temperature yesterday 59 degrees; lowest last night 41 degrees. It will thus be seen that from Sunday to this morning there has been a drop of 50 degrees, or from 91 41 degrees That such sudden and extreme variations of temperature are good for the physical make-up of man I can hardly believe. I have been told that snow flurries were seen yesterday in a number of places near by.—W.P

The meeting closes this evening, with an inspirational address by Rev. J. A. Johnston, B.A., pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Toronto. There was a splendid attendance at last evening's session.

A review of the annual sermon, delivered last evening by Rev. N. S. McKechnie, of Belleville, follows:

The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. N. G. McKechnie of Belleville before the Baptist Association last night on the subject of "The Church's Privilege and Task," from the text Ephesians, 3:8, "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ."

These words, which were written near the end of Paul's ministry, reveal the wonder and the gratitude which to the very end possessed him that to him God should have given so great a commission.

They should remind the church today of the wonder of the commission which is given to her.

Just as Paul could never forget his amazement that God could use such a one as himself to accomplish so great things, so the members of the church today should never cease to wonder and be grateful that God in His goodness should make them co-laborers with Himself in the great work of the redemption of mankind.

The words should also remind the church of the wonder of the message she has to proclaim.

She should pray to be delivered from indifference and seek always the simple and wondering heart of a child. She has a message of unsearchable riches, because it reveals God's unsearchable love, it is a message of hope for men, it proclaims that ruins may be rebuilt and it provides for man's deepest needs both here and hereafter.

This then is the church's privilege and task to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ.

She must avoid substituting lesser things for this great work. Neither great organizations nor prosperous financial conditions nor beautiful musical services must be thought of as ends in themselves. She must not allow either indifference or professionalism to deaden her life, but with a holy passion she must prosecute her great task.

TEST VACCINATION.

Young Men to Expose Themselves to Smallpox Infection.

LONDON, June 11 (United Press)—In response to the challenge of 24 vaccinated young medical men that they would expose themselves to smallpox if 24 unvaccinated men would do likewise, the National Anti-Vaccination League has announced that it will meet this morning to accept the challenge and to call 24 unvaccinated volunteers. All hands will then await results. The object of the vaccination proponents is to prove by actual experience which side is right.

GRAND JURY PRESENTS REPORT TO HIS HONOR JUDGE HUYCKE

All Institution Inmates Happy Except in Jail and Hospital.

MINOR CHANGES.

Recommends Painting in Court House—Improvements at Lakefield.

At the sitting of the midsummer sessions of the peace, the Grand Jury submitted the following report and recommendations:

To His Honor Judge Huycke,
Peterboro, Ont.

Sir,—We the members of the Grand Jury beg to report having inspected the various institutions in Peterborough city and near Lakefield towards the maintenance of which public funds are allotted and hereunder give in detail our findings:

Gaol—We find the premises maintained in as cleanly a manner as possible under existing circumstances. We recommend that materials be provided to permit of repainting the walls and floors of cell rooms and passages. In addition the kitchen floor, walls and ceiling need re-painting. The prisoners can be used to supply the labor.

Court Room—We recommend the re-tinting of the walls and ceiling.

Court House—We recommend that the plaster in front lower hall and jury room be repaired where broken.

House of Refuge (near Lakefield) —We recommend that a new barn be built on a site to be selected, that at least two fire extinguishers be provided of proper capacity, that new bed-linen, mattresses and blankets be provided, that additional means of exit in event of fire be installed as at present there are only two fire escapes, one on the north and one on the south side of the building, reaching only to the second storey, nothwithstanding that inmates are accommodated in the third storey. We also recommend that an apparently insane inmate, age about 29, be removed to a proper institution.

Children's Shelter.

Due to their being engaged in house-cleaning at the time of our visit we were unable to properly inspect this institution.

We wish to heartily congratulate all those in charge of the institutions visited on the apparent careful and considerate attention given to inmates. The buildings and premises are all well maintained and the inmates all expressed themselves as happy and contented. This applies to institutions other than the jail and hospitals.

We have made minor suggestions in a spirit of constructive criticism, and in an effort to improve the lot of a few unfortunates.

In conclusion, we wish to express to your Honor our hearty appreciation of the clear, concise manner in which you outlined our dutics and responsibilities. Also we desire to express our gratitude to Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K. C., on the able assistance he ren-

At the Royal To-Night, Friday and Saturday

One old fogy of a bird scientist told me, in the beginning of my nature rambles, that I must keep a note book. 'You will never be any use to learning, unless you keep a notebook," says he, so I began with a book.

I had a hard time finding stuff to put in that book, for a long time. Then I began to see so much that I had a hard time deciding what to keep out of it, and finally I nearly got writer's cramp, keeping the old thing, so I decided to only keep nature stories that are so interesting that I can't forget them.

Space is so valuable, that at times, I have to throw in three or four incidents [illegible]

when I told him that the chippie is also called the hair bird. He thought I was pulling his leg, but it is true.

Another time, a jockey, out at Blue [illegible] race course, told me that he had a pet Song Sparrow that he found hanging about the place and very wild at first, but looking for horse hair. So he cut some up into lengths of about a foot, and put them up on the rail.

Our wild song sparrow took the hair and came for more and finally quit beaing about the bush and came inside, got on the horse's back and pulled out loose hair from the mane.

"Yes, and would you believe it," joked the jockey, with a sly look, "Those birds know when I win a race."

"How you you figure that out?" said I.

"I give them a big feed of high grade canary seed every time I am lucky," said he. "And I know where the nest is too, and so does the horse —I led him to it and he smelled it —but I won't tell you, for it's a secret."

SALE OF PULPWOOD.

Question of Manitoba Resources Is Still Under Consideration.

OTTAWA, June 11 (Canadian Press)—The question of the sale of Manitoba pulpwood resources was still under consideration by the government, said the Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of Interior, in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. Mr. Stewart agreed to bring down all the documents respecting the case when it was concluded.

During recent tests it was found that the average time elapsing between the sending and receiving of a telegram is 40 minutes in the British Isles.

MY EUROPEAN EXCURSIONS

By Edwin Robert Petre

ON A SWEDISH RAILWAY TRAIN.

A trip to Sweden does not involve such a long journey as one might imagine. Since 1915, Swedish liners have been carrying passengers direct from the New World. And Sweden isn't so far away from other countries. Railway ferries ply between Sweden and Germany and Denmark. And it is only a short paddle, so to speak, between Gothenburg and England. The night train takes one from Gothenburg to Stockholm, from the North Sea to the Baltic, in the same length of time one would spend travelling from Boston to Washington. There's a difference, though, for pretty girls in national costumes come trooping through the sleeping cars bearing baskets of sandwiches and ice-cold bottles of Beer. The only one in a party of American tourists on our train who declined to partake of the beer was a Norwegian guide who preferred his own bottle of wine which he had brought along for a nightcap.

In Stockholm, everybody owns a motorcycle, a motor car or a boat. Stockholm was built originally on a tiny island, one of several hundred which extend out to the Baltic coast, a four-hours' sail from the capital city. As the town grew up it spread out from the one island until it now covers part of the mainland and all the various peninsulas, which fact makes it appear like an island city.

ABOUT OLD HAMBURG.

Germany's great sea port should be known for more than its shipping. The maritime part of the city has been a legend since the days when the discovery of America began to rob the old port of its Hanseatic importance. The Germans say "There is but one Hamburg and there is nothing like it anywhere else." There are really two Hamburgs, the city on the Elbe, all bustle and work, and the city on the Alster, famous for its unique natural beauty, whose centre is the charming little lake formed by the Alster. All the wealthier suburbs cluster around the Aussen-Alster, and it is hard to believe, while walking their beautiful promenades and shady avenues, that the great port is so near. Nearby is Bergehof and the fen-district of Vierlande and the great Sachsenwald Forest. The lover of solitude should not neglect to spend a summer's day in the Luneburger Heide, an enormous moorland where he can stroll for hours without meeting anyone unless it be a sleepy ancient shepherd or his boy.

PREMIER PUTS "OK" ON BEER

Four Point Four is Satisfactory to People, Says Ferguson.

NO STRONGER.

QUEBEC, Que., June 11.—(Special.)—That the 4.4 beer now selling in the Province of Ontario had met with their approval and was considered quite satisfactory by the people of that province, was the statement made by Premier Howard G. Ferguson, prior to his departure for England yesterday afternoon on the Canadian Pacific S. S. "Empress of Scotland." In his opinion the present percentage of alcohol in the Ontario beverage was sufficient and he would not view with favor any suggestion to increase its alcoholic strength.

Besides Premier and Mrs. Ferguson, many other British and Canadian notables sailed on the giant flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet, among them being Lord and Lady Airedale and their daughter, the Hon. Angela Kitson.

WILL BRING DOWN VOTE BILL SOON

Single Transferrable Vote To Be Discussed During This Session.

OTTAWA, June 11 (Canadian Press)—The Government's bill dealing with the single transferrable vote will be brought down as soon as possible after the two bills amending the elections act, now on the order paper, had been disposed of. Premier King so informed R. A. Hoey, Progressive member for Springfield, in the House yesterday afternoon. Asked if the single transferrable vote would be put on the statute books this session, Mr. King replied that would all depend on how fast the house got on with other business and got down to the newer legislation.

CANADA HAS NO SECURITY PACT

Dominion Government Has Not Entered Upon Negotiations With France.

KEEPING POSTED.

OTTAWA, June 11 (Canadian Press)—Canada has entered into no "security pact" with France, Premier King informed J. S. Woodsworth (Labour-Centre Winnipeg) in the House yesterday. The latter had asked if there were not some negotiations going on between the Canadian High Commissioner in Paris and the French Government. The Prime Minister said that he did not quite understand where such an idea had arisen. Canada was being kept posted on the progress of negotiations between France and Great Britain, but the Canadian Goverment had no intention of precipating itself into any such negotiations at this stage.

SAVE FORESTS.

Hon. Chas. Stewart Thinks More Might Be Spent By Government.

OTTAWA, June 11. — Canadian Press. — Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of the Interior, expressed the opinion in the House last night that more money might well be spent on forest conservation in Canada. It was an effort of the department to arouse public opinion in support of forest conservation. While the government had control of the timber limits modern methods of cutting so as to conserve forest wealth were insisted on.

HEAR WITNESSES IN FRAUD CASE

lambs but only brought 23. As the check had been made out beforehand, he paid Sherman $20 in cash, an accepted the check. Sherman did not tell him the money was not in the bank, but would be deposited later.

Patrick Duffy stated that he also sold some cattle in July. He received some cash and a check for $70 that he has been unable to cash. He stated that he had previously transacted business with Merson and Sherman, receiving a check for $43 which he cashed without difficulty.

Louis Kemp stated that Merson called on him asking if he had any calves to sell. He showed Merson some calves, for which he wanted $15. Merson asked if he would consider ten. He said, no. He agreed to take a dollar less per calf. He delivered the cattle in the evening of November 1. Payment was made by check. On presenting the check at the Dominion Bank on November 4, he was told that Sherman and Nelson expected three days grace. So far as he knew the deal was similar to all other cattle deals. Asked by Mr. Wearing if he had anything against the accused apart from the fact he had not received payment the witness retorted "Isn't that enough?"

William Hayes, Douro, sold cattle on October 29, to be delivered at Indian River on November 1. He did not take the cattle himself to the station. On that day he was engaged fighting fire all afternoon. He received a check for $50. Presenting it at Peterboro, he was told by the Dominion Bank that no funds would be available until November 6. He went home and cashed the check at the store near his home. The check was later returned to him by the store manager who had received it from the bank marked insufficient funds.

Answering Mr. Huycke, he did not suspect anything untoward in the deal at first. He had no suspicions until after November 6.

George Howard first saw Sherman and Merson in connection with the deal on October 20 when he sold them two cows to be delivered at Cavan station. At the station he received a check. He presented the check on November 4 and was told there were no funds. He asked the manager if the men were all right and was told they had been snowed under before, but had always paid up. Later he saw Sherman's son, who said they had struck a bad market. He accepted a note for five days but failed to get the money when the note fell due. Answering Mr. Huycke he had never heard anything detrimental to the reputation of Sherman and Merson in their dealings with other farmers in the district.

Harvey Webber Smith paid his coal bill with the check he received from the accused. Soon afterwards he was surprised to learn that the check had not been honored. He and his father have done business with accused since 1922. He thought he had made 6 or 8 deals before October 1924. He had found that their checks were not always paid on demand, but all were paid eventually except in the case of the deal before the court. The only point that struck him as being unusual when making the deal was in the case of a pig in which he thought they showed little judgment in paying the $25 he asked. Merson and Sherman's son later called on him and asked him what he had done with the check. He said he had tendered it in payment of a coal bill. Merson seemed uneasy and asked him to telephone the coal dealer tosee if there had been any trouble in getting the check cashed.

Mr. Wearing in cross examination asked witness what he considered was the approximate weight of the pig he mentioned. Witness thought it might be between 400 and 500 pounds. Counsel referring to the statement of sale, pointed out that Sherman and Merson sold the same pig at eight cent per pound and asked if witness considered they had good full value for their money. Witness replied that he did not think he would have paid $25 for it.

James Curtain Ennismore sold the accused a pig. They first saw the pig on October 26. He delivered it at Peterboro on November 1. He saw Merson at the time and received a check in payment. He did not attempt to cash the check himself, but He did not think they were suspicious characters in any way but he found them very hard in driving a bargain.

Charley Moore, Smith, sold two cows on November 1 and received payment in the form of a check for $142. On November 3 he presented the check at the bank and was told "no funds." He did not notice the words payable after November 3; Otherwise he would not have accepted the check. On November 4 he was interviewed by Merson and Sherman junior who informed him they had received word from Montreal that they had struck a bad market and they desired to protect themselves by issuing a note. He accepted a note for ten days but failed to collect when this fell due. He had six or eight cows for sale, but could only come to an agreement in regard to the two which he sold. If they had been willing to pay his price he would have sold six or eight. He did not know of any reason why they did not take the rest other than their unwillingness to meet his terms. Asked by Mr. Hatton he said he would have accepted a check for the rest of the cattle.

THE ROTARY CARNIVAL.

The announcement that the Rotary Carnival is to be held next month has no doubt been hailed with pleasure by the many citizens who enjoyed the event last year, and who realize the good work that is being done by the Rotary Club of Peterboro in looking after crippled children.

Like the Made-in-Peterboro Fair, this will be a community rallying point that should enlist the ready co-operation of the citizens generally.

It is too early perhaps to say much about the programme; the arrangements are in capable hands, however, and the people of Peterboro can look forward with confidence to a few hours of solid fun and entertainment offered on behalf of a cause that deserves general support.

It has often been complained, and with a good deal of truth, too, that this city is lacking in the matter of outdoor celebrations such as staged every summer in the majority of Ontario centres.

The Rotary Carnival, which promises to be an annual affair, will go a long way toward filling the gap, for it will not only provide a half-day's fun for Peterboro's citizens, but will also attract many visitors from outside.

THE TOURIST TRAFFIC.

Some most interesting information is contained in a circular, "The Highway, the Motor Vehicle and the Tourist in Canada," issued by the Highways Branch of the Department of Railways and Canals, that has just been received by the Examiner.

In the introduction Mr. A. W. Campbell, Chief Commissioner of Highways, points out striking facts in connection with motor tourist traffic.

The statistics quoted indicate that the increases in this traffic since 1920 have been quite remarkable.

In the case of tourists entering Canada for a period of one month to six months, it has grown by 34 per cent., while the number of visitors coming in for from two days to 30 days 290 per cent., and one-day visitors have increased by 272 per cent.

Last year it was estimated that on the basis that each of the motor visitors from the south spent $5.00 daily, the amount dispersed for maintenance and outlays in Canada totalled $143,405,906.

Assuming that $50,000,000 would represent the amount spent by Canadians in the United States for like purposes, last year the balance of $93,405,906 is in favour of Canada.

Mr. Campbell is optimistic about the future.

With suitable organization and the rapid development of road improvement to encourage motor touring in Canada, he says that the opinion is rapidly growing that last year's total might be vastly increased from year to year, with the possibility of being doubled or trebled within a short time.

IT PROVES NOTHING.

The Globe, stating that a hotelkeeper has been charged with selling beer stronger than the authorized 4.4 variety, declares that another of its predictions in regard to amending the Ontario Temperance Act has been verified.

But what does the fact that the law has been broken by a hotelkeeper prove?

Was it not the case that under the Ontario Temperance Act before it was amended there were many charges against standard hotels of selling strong beer?

There are always men willing to take a chance on violating a statute of this kind if there is any prospect of filling their pockets in the transaction.

It is not surprising, therefore, to find that those who did not hesitate to sell strong beer when 2 1-2 per cent. beer was authorized under the Ontario Temperance Act will be equally ready to sell strong beer now if they see better returns thereby than from the sale of the legal 4.4 brew.

In fact, no matter what form of prohibitory legislation happened to be in force in Ontario there would be always found individuals who would persist in defying the law by trafficking in liquor so long as it was profitable.

A charge of selling strong beer might be regarded as of more value in proving that the 4.4 lacks the desired "kick" than in demonstrating that all the evils the Globe prophesied would follow the sale of the new beverage and eventuating.

WHAT DOES OTTAWA WANT?

There seems to be a continued agitation on at Ottawa to have the Dominion Government pay more taxes to the city of Ottawa, says the London Advertiser. The Ottawa Journal says it has no desire to spur the Government on to paying more than the present contribution of $235,000 per year, and at the same time figures out that if the Government were paying taxes on the same basis as private owners it would be forking out $1,109,500.

These Ottawa financiers ought to take a trip now and then so they could get some perspective into their picture. They've got their noses so bumping close to the Parliament Buildings that they seem to inhale the impression that they own them.

All over this Province there are towns and cities with their men scooting around to see if they can't locate a factory to manufacture anything from a mouse-trap that will work without cheese to a sky-scraper that can be erected in 48 hours with the aid of a monkey-wrench and a pot of glue. We want industries, something or other that will make people busy, and we'd be tickled pink to sign on the dotted line for something in the way of taxes that would make $235,000 look like the reserve fund of the Bank of England.

Yet Ottawa has this big national industry, this great hot-air factory, with its ramifications running all over the place, licking up all the empty buildings, and making a spare bedroom with breakfast sufficiently valuable to wipe off the mortgage on the homestead.

What under the sun does it want to tax it at all for? That's beyond us. If Ottawa gets too smart we'll have to move the Parliament Buildings some place else.

A TEST OF HONESTY.

(Providence Journal.)

One day Liberty Magazine set out to prove that Americans are honest. One hundred prominent men were sent a $1 bill in such a way that they would know it did not belong to them.

The names were selected at random, and 22 States were represented by the list of men and women chosen. The list included scientists, journalists, physicians, educators, lawyers, clergymen, playwrights, artists and business men. Each person on the list was sent $1 with a letter which simply stated that the $1 has been sent "in adjustment of the error complained of in our account." A fictitious name was used in sending out the letters; but perhaps we had better let Liberty tell you the story:

"The business men included all sorts of industrial and commercial pursuits, from the heads of great banking houses to small grocers. The scientists comprised naturalists, chemists, geographers, botanists, and so on, not members of any teaching corps. The journalists were editors and writers. The educators included teachers, lecturers and college presidents. One of the three artists in the list is a renowned musician. Incidentally, he returned the dollar.

"By classification the results are:

	Dollars sent out.	Dollars returned.	Per cent.
Clergymen	9	6	.66
Journalists	7	3	.43
Artists	3	1	.33
Educators	12	4	.33
Business men	37	10	.29
Physicians	9	2	.22
Lawyers	11	1	.09
Scientists	11	0	.00
Playwrights	1	0	.00
	100	27

"We are somewhat disappointed in the scientists and educators. We want to think kindly of them. You know, one must make allowances for the absent-mindedness of professors and those engaged in research work into scientific mazes. It is entirely possible that the pre-occupied scientists, receiving the letter, merely scanned it abstractedly and tossed it away. But we have no way of knowing whether they tossed away the dollar, too.

"Of the 37 business men, four are garage owners and one of this quartet returned the dollar with a little lecture:

"'I am returning this dollar which does not belong to me,' he wrote. 'God knows, I need every dollar I can lay my hands on, but maybe the rightful owner of this one is up against it harder than I am.'

"To another letter written to a business man an answer came from the executors of his will. He was the only dead man on the list. The executors thanked the sender and assured him the dollar would be properly distributed along with the rest of the estate.

"Of course, the journalists and clergymen may regard each other with righteous pride, with the clergymen looking slightly more superior, as is their bounden right.

"Apparently the letter and the dollar arrived in one clergyman's hands as he was working hard on his sermon. He became irritable. He sent back the dollar, saying that not only had he never done business with his correspondent but that he never would, and please not bother him any more. As it was, he wrote, he was out a two-cent stamp and considerable patience.

"However, everything was straightened out. A new uncancelled stamp was sent to him with profuse apologies.

"Four of the twelve educators returned the money. Two are college presidents. Of the non-remitting eight, two are economists.

"The one lawyer returning the dollar wrote:

"'If you've made many mistakes of this sort, you'll soon need a large amount of legal advice which I am prepared to deliver on short notice.'

"The playwright said he'd hold the dollar until the sender explained more fully. A letter was sent him explaining that his name had been confused with another's. Anyway he kept the dollar.

"Now we are perfectly willing to concede that this does not prove that we are a dishonest nation. We're not! But it does seem that we should have made a better showing.

"The least said about the whole affair the better, don't you think?

"Therefore, we drop the subject with one final bit of information.

"Of the 11 lawyers, five are members of Congress, two Senators and three Representatives. The attorney sending the money back holds no public post."

TORONTO CATTLE

There were still in the neighborhood of 3,500 left over cattle in the market at the opening this morning. Stop orders sent out yesterday fortunately kept fresh arrivals down to 188, instead of the usual 1,000 to 1,200 midweek market. How badly the heat wave struck the market is shown by the very slow recovery, even now that temperatures are rapidly falling. The dressed beef trade was almost completely knocked out, and it is evident that some days of cool weather will be required to set things properly moving again. Prices on practically all grades of cattle are quoting fully 50c lower as compared with last week, and at that nobody seems to want the cattle.

Export buyers are taking a few loads of heavy steers at the reduced prices, to carry over for next week's shipping.

A few light butcher cattle are moving.

Calves slow and two dollars lower than a week ago.

Sheep and lambs weak.

Hogs steady.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, June 11 (Canadian Press).—The market continues very firm with a tendency for prices on specials and extras to advance. One car of seconds in used cases reported having been bought at 25 f.o.b. Winnipeg, freight charges 2 3-4 per dozen to Toronto.

Toronto — Jobbing, extras 36, firsts 33, seconds 30.

Montreal — Jobbing, extras 36, firsts 34, seconds 30.

Prairie Province markets — Unchanged.

Vancouver—Market higher. Dealers paying delivered, extras 34, firsts 32. Jobbing, extras 36, firsts 34, seconds 31.

Chicago—Spot 30, June 30 5-8; Decembers 34 5-8.

New Yorok—Extra firsts 33 1-4, firsts 32 1-4, extra firsts, storage packed 34 1-4, firsts 33 1-4, December refrigerators 35 7-8.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.85 1-2.

Sterling cabls $4.86.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 11 (Canadian Press).—While the export business in Canadian grain over the cable here yesterday was reported quiet, there was a good demand from New York exporters for Canadian Western oats and a fairly active business was transacted in this direction, including sales of over 100,000 bushels of No. 1 feed at 2 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, and tough No. 3 oats at 5 1-2 cents per bushel over, while No. 4 barley sold at 7 3-4 cents per bushel, c.i.f., Montreal. There was no improvement in the demand from local buyers for oats and the car lot trade was quiet, but the tone of the market was steady.

The condition of the market for baled hay was unchanged, prices being about steady with a small volume of business passing in car lots of good No. 2 timothy hay at $14 to $15 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton f.o.b. cars here.

A firm feeling prevailed in the market for eggs and prices were unchanged, but the demand for immediate consumption showed no marked improvement which is attributed to the very warm weather of late and in consequence business was quiet in a wholesale jobbing way. The receipts were 1,936 cases, as compared with nil for the same day last week, and 2,807 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of butter were 25 packages, as compared with nil for the same day last week, and 884 for the corresponding day a year ago. A feature of the trade was the enquiries received from New York houses for supplies which created a better feeling among holders and the impression of some in the trade that sales were made. There was some business done for local account, but the market on the whole was still rather quiet and prices showed no further change.

The receipts of cheese were 5,050 boxes, as against nil for the same day last week, and 5,063 for the corresponding day a year ago. A firm feeling prevailed in the market and prices were fully maintained, but the volume of business showed no marked improvement owing to the fact that foreign buyers show little disposition to follow the course of prices here for the time being.

Beans were steady at $2.65 per bushel.

RECIPROCITY

Reciprocity, reduced to the simplest terms, means this: "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours."

It isn't exactly good Christian doctrine, for the orthodox are expected to love their enemies and be good to those who treat them badly.

I confess to being much more addicted to reciprocity than I am to orthodoxy. So far as I know I haven't any enemies to love and cherish, but I do make it a point to favor those who favor me.

It may be a mark of Christian virtue to spend a dollar with a man who doesn't like you and wouldn't give you air if you were in a jug but to me it seems a darned shabby business. I had rather walk a mile and buy my Camels from a man who likes me.

All of us get our living from our friends. Our enemies won't trade with us. The only fair thing to do is to spend our dimes with those who provide us a living.

CONTROL CAUSES NO MONEY GAIN

NATURAL RESOURCES.

OTTAWA, June 11.—(Canadian Press.)—While expressing the belief that the western provinces should control their natural resources, Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, stated in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, that he doubted whether there would be any monetary gain to the Province of Alberta from having control. The minister referred specifically to Alberta because E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River), had asked him whether he did not think that the return of the natural resources to this province would be a wise step. An estimate of $352,000 for government of the Northwest Territories was under consideration when the question arose. Mr. Garland had been advocating reductions in staff of the Interior Department, and the minister had pointed out the extent of the work in connection wih mining leases, grazing lands, etc., in Alberta. He expressed the opinion that the Federal Department of the Interior had almost as much responsibility on its shoulders in connection with Alberta as had the Provincial Government of that province.

WINNIPEG CASE IS NOW CLOSED

Proceedings Against Father of Diphtheria Victim Have Been Dropped.

ELDER RELEASED.

WINNIPEG, June 11—(Canadian Press)—The now famous Christian Science case which followed the death here last November of 13-year-old Doreen Watson, was closed yesterday when it was announced by John Allen, K.C., Deputy Attorney-General, that a stay of proceedings had been entered against Robert Watson, the girl's father, on a charge of manslaughter.

This action follows the decision of the Manitoba Court of Appeal in setting aside the sentence of William Elder, a Christian Scientist practitioner, Monday last. Elder had been sentenced to serve four months in the provincial jail, but the appeal court decided that there was no evidence on which the case should have gone to the jury.

The youngster died of dipihtheria, and it was brought out at the preliminary hearing, that physicians had been refused permission to administer anti-toxin, while it was also stated that Christian Science practitioners had been called upon by the parents to give "absent treatment" which consisted of prayer.

COMMENT ON NOTE SHOULD BE HELD

Chamberlain Would Reserve Comment Until Publication of the Pact.

GENEVA, June 11 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)—Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, in connection with the Anglo-French agreement on the proposed pact suggests that comment upon the supposed contents of the note to Germany should be reserved pending the publication of the pact.

Mr. Chamberlain emphasizes the fact that in the exchange of views with the French government his Majesty's government has followed the course indicated by him in the House of Commons on March 24 last when in the debate on the protocol he said the government would keep in closest touch with the dominions in the matter.

Geography, maybe, hasn't much to do with genius, but geography has a great deal to do with ideals. "Made in Canada" means infinitely more than three little words. When we add to this fact:—"Forty years of unrivalled experience in the manufacture of the finest rubber products," we then conceive many reasons why "Gutta Percha" Balloon Tires possess that wear-resisting, comfort-giving quality that is the pride of every car owner who has discovered that Canada makes the finest of tires and because Canadian Tire Engineers have also put more research and practical tire-making advancement, behind and into this tire, than has hitherto been thought possible.

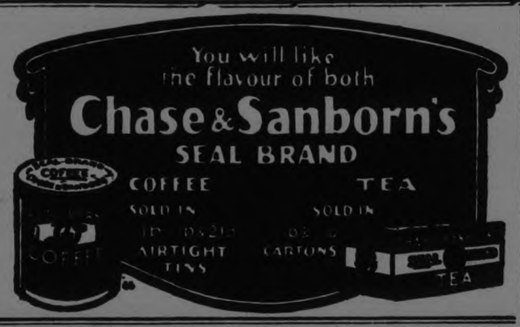
SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.



PREMIER KING'S REPLY STIRS COMMENT ON EMPIRE RELATIONS

Irrevocable Warning, Says Express—Pact Must Go On Without Canada.

MATTER OF CHOICE.

Britain Can Take Either French Pact or Empire Solidarity.

LONDON, June 11. (Canadian Press).—The London Daily Express, Lord Beaverbrook's paper, in an editorial on Premier Mackenzie King's reply in the negative to a query put by J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member for Centre Winnipeg, in the Canadian House of Commons, as to whether Canada was a party to the security pact with France in regard to Rhine boundaries, describes Premier King's reply as a final and fatal pronouncement, the gravity of which can hardly be exaggerated.

The Premier of Canada has given Great Britain serious and irrevocable warning that if it goes on with the pact it must do so without the Dominion, The Express says. "What Canada says to-day," The Express continues, "the other Dominions may say to-morrow. If any Dominion Government ventured to give such a pledge it would certainly fall, therefore Britain must choose between the French pact and the solidarity of Empire. The Dominions will simply look on silently, reserving complete freedom of military guarantee if it has ever to be put in force."

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, asked if the facts in the case could be placed before Parliament this week.

Mr. Graham said that if the sale was approved by the Governor in Council he would be glad to lay all the facts before Parliament.

TROOPS RUSHED TO HALT COUP

PLANS MADE.

By Anthony Papayannakis
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

ATHENS, June 11.—The possibility of a coup to overthrow the Government was seen here to-day.

The Government ordered troops transferred to Athens as a precautionary measure. Disappointed inferior officers were said to be in a threatening attitude and it was deemed best to guard against an outburst on their part.

Protection for the Ministry of Interior, Naval and War was increased.

It was reported that the militarists were planning a directorate of seven, should they succeed in their alleged plans for a coup.

CANADA'S CLAIM TO NORTHLAND AGAIN ASSERTED

Minister of the Interior Uses Map to Define Claim to House.

A GREAT TRIANGLE.

All Islands Lying Within Meridians 60 and 142 Are Canadian.

OTTAWA, June 11. (Canadian Press).—Canada's claim to the Northern Archipelago was again asserted in the House of Commons yesterday by Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior. Tabling a large map, Mr. Stewart said that the Canadian claim was to islands lying north of the Canadian mainland up to the North Pole. The limits of Canada's claim, as indicated on the map, formed a great triangle with the mainland as the base and the North Pole as the apex. The western boundary was a continuation of the boundary between Canada and Alaska; the eastern took a line up Davis Straits between Canada and Greenland, and then followed longitude 60 west to the Pole. Mr. Stewart roughly defined the territory claimed by Canada as that lying north of Canada, west of Greenland between 60 and 142.

W. G. McQuarrie (Conservative, New Westminster) drew Mr. Stewart's attention to claims of the United States as set forth in news despatches. "I see they claim the North Pole," remarked Mr. McQuarrie. "Are we going to let them have it?"

Mr. Stewart said he had no remark to make about claims of the United States. Canada claimed the islands north of the Canadian coast between 60 and 142. He presumed that the United States would claim any islands north of Alaska. "We don't claim the North Pole. We claim up to it," said Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Stewart went on to say that he was anxious to extend the work in the north because he did not want to let people from other countries go in and establish any claim. If expeditions from other countries wished to go to the northern islands, the least they could do was to take out permits before crossing territory which certainly belonged to Canada.

Prairie Provinces Will Take Common Action For Crow's Nest Rate.

RETAIN SCHEDULE.

WINNIPEG, June 11. (Canadian Press).—Preservation of the Crow's Nest rate agreement, or establishment in its place of a schedule equally good, are alternative objectives of the campaign to be waged at Ottawa against the passage of the new freight rates bill, as outlined yesterday at a conference between members of the Manitoba Government and representatives of the Winnipeg Board of Trade. It was announced that the co-operation of Saskatchewan and Alberta will be sought in making representation to Ottawa.

"We consider the Prairie Provinces should unite in making as strong representations as possible to the Dominion Government," Hon. R. W. Craig, Attorney-General, declared.

Premier Charles A. Dunning, of Saskatchewan, has been asked to attend, with representative business men from his province, a conference of Manitoba interests in Winnipeg. If he is unable to attend, a Manitoba delegation is prepared to go to Regina for a conference.

Scene From H.A.SNOW'S "HUNTING BIG GAME in AFRICA"

At the Grand, Friday and Saturday

KILLS LION THAT SLEW FRIEND

H. A. Snow Tracks Beast For Three Days Thru Dense Jungle

Trailing a wounded lion for three days until he met and killed the beast to avenge the death of a companion, was one of the hazardous experiences of H .A. Snow, whose exploits in the Dark Continent under the title of "Hunting Big Game in Africa" at the Grand for two days, starting tomorrow.

In years Mr. Snow numbers 58; in spirit he is but a youth. Measuring more than six feet in height and weighing considerably more than two hundred pounds, this mighty hunter thus tells the story of the lion he trailed to death.

"I met Harry Klopper in British East Africa, where he was prowling for lions. He was a Boer who had sufficient money to ride his hobby and that was the dangerous sport of hunting lions. The friendships one forms out in the depths of Africa are strong and lasting. That is a land where many a man has laid down his life for a friend and on such as base are friendships formed.

Their Friendship Grew.

"Together we had tracked and killed beasts of the jungle and the moment had all but arrived when we were to part, he to return to his home in South Africa, while I was going onward, further into the jungles:

"In camp one night the tumult of the wild beasts about us seemed unending. Lion roars were not infrequent almost any night I can recollect. This particular time the snarls of the killers grew maniacal, with the deep roar of the lion predominant.

"Taking a gun, Klopper left the camp. In a few moments came two shots. Then deathly stillness. Next the shriek of despair which came from my companion. Then that tomb-like quiet which is fraught with danger. Rousing natives I sped into the brush in the direction whence Klopper's cry had come. A huddled mass on the ground was my friend.

"Spreading a ring of natives about us to safeguard us from the attack of wild beasts, an investigation disclosed that Klopper evidently had wounded one of the lions and lighted a match to set fire to the grass in order that the beast could be seen. He hardly had scratched the match into flame, for the burnt end lay beside him, when the lion was on his shoulders and one bite of those ponderous jaws had ended his existence. In anger the lion had mauled the body horrible.

"The sight filled me with a thirst for revenge. Banding some of my natives and properly armed, I started after the wounded lion, whose bloody spoor we could discern in the brush. Relentlessly we followed during the night, but it was slow, torturous work, for frequently we lost the bloody trail and floundered aimlessly many times.

Frocks Are Spotted.

"When daylight came we again set after the blood marks. Then too we ascertained that one of Klopper's shots had broken the lion's foreleg, for the progress of the animal through the underbrush plainly showed that. Through the sweating hours of daylight, amid a temperature which ran to perhaps 140 to 145 degrees, I pressed on with my band of blacks. I had sent runners back for provisions for then the determination came that I would get that beast if I followed it until doomsday.

"That night the woundcd lion dipped into a jungle and I lost much time in searching for the trail. This now was marked by very little blood, only occasional splotches marking the way. We gave up the search to get some needed sleep, but resumed our hunt when daylight came. That day we found where the wounded creature had lain during the night. The torn earth showed plainly it was in agony.

"The day did not bring me to my quarry, but just as daylight was breaking on the third day, I came upon the maned fiend which had taken my partner's life.

SETTLERS MUST BE CAUCASIANS

Canada Wants No Race Problem, Sir H. W. Thornton Tells Americans.

TALKS RAILWAYS.

NEW YORK, June 11. (Canadian Press).—Canada welcomes to the Dominion settlers capable of fulfilling four simple specifications, and these are that they must arrive under such conditions as will preclude their becoming a public charge, that is to say, they must have "sufficient funds to pull their weight in the boat from the start"; they must be sound in body and mind; they must be of the Caucasian race for Canada wants no race problems in the Dominion, and lastly they must be individuals willing to live in tranquility under Canadian laws and under the Canadian scheme of society. The Dominion wants no such disturbers of society as Bolshevists and Communists. In these words, Sir Henry Worth Thornton, K.B.E., president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways, outlined to the members of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation at their monthly meeting yesterday the requirements demanded by Canada of those who desire to make their home within her borders.

Sir Henry's address was confined for the most part to a discussion of transportation within the Dominion, and he explained the problem which confronted his country with respect to its public ownership of the vast national railroads.

"The important point to remember," said Sir Henry, "is that that railway system became a state-owned railway not because the people of Canada were enamoured with the theory of state-ownership and had embraced it, but because financial circumstances forced the government of the day to set up a state-owned line in the interests of the people of Canada and the necessities of the communities which that system serves."

Sir Henry emphasized that no matter whether the Canadian National Railways were a success or a failure under government ownership, the experience of one country in this direction furnished no conclusive evidence, nor conclusive proof as to the policy to be followed in any other country. He dwelt on the necessity of co-operation among all branches and all individual employees of the system if success were to be had.

ASKS NECESSITY OF ARCTIC TRIPS

Member of Yukon Advises House to Leave Eskimos "Politely Alone."

ASK THE BISHOP.

OTTAWA, June 11. (Canadian Press).—Further consideration of a vote of $352,000 for the Government of the North-West Territories was given in the House of Commons last night. George Black (Conservative, Yukon) protested against expenditures in connection with bringing G. P. Maskenzie, former gold commissioner for the Yukon, to Ottawa in connection with the appointment which he now holds. Mr. Black said that Mr. Mackenzie had stated that he was to be placed in charge of the organization and operation of expeditions by both land and sea in northern areas in Canada. Canada had decided to establish her jurisdiction in order to prevent possible misunderstandings in future with other countries.

Mr. Black asked what the necessity was for these Arctic expeditions. If their object was to look into the condition of the Eskimos and wild life in the northern sections of the Dominion, he advised the Minister to leave the former "politely alone.' The Eskimos had been in Canada possibly longer than the white people, and have got on very well. If the Government required advice in regard to these people, they could obtain it for the asking from the Rev. Bishop Stringer, who had lived among them for 30 years, knew their language and was able to give any information which could possibly be required.

Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, said that one important purpose of the expedition was to study Eskimo life. It was also considered desirable to establish Canada's claim to certain territories. He believed that the claim was valid but, if a dispute arose, the claim must be established. Canada was merely trying to establish the claim.

WITNESSES TELL INABILITY TO COLLECT FOR CATTLE

Sherman and Merson Conducted Business in Usual Way, They Say.

CHEQUES UNPAID.

Long List of Farmers in Prosecution of Cattle Dealers.

More witnesses were examined this morning before His Honor Judge Huycke and jury in the case where Nathan Merson and Reuben Sherman are charged with obtaining goods by false pretences and intent to defraud creditors. R. E. Maloney told the jury that he had had two previous dealings with the defendants, the present case being the only one in which he had never received his money. He had known them to have lots of money at one time. In July, when the last deal was mooted, they seem to have quite a great deal of money.

Bert Sanderson.

Bert Sanderson, Monaghan, said Sherman and Merson came about the beginning of October and saw six head of cattle he wished to sell. On November 1 they called again and agreed to buy for $600. He delivered the cattle in the afternoon, but did not get his cheque until about 9.30 p.m. On Monday, November 3, he called at the Dominion Bank, expecting to get the cheque cashed. He was told that Sherman and Merson had asked that the cheque should not be cashed until the sixth. Merson's son and a young man, whom he learned was Sherman's son, visited him and asked him to take a note for ten days, as they had failed to dispose of all the cattle which they had bought. They told him the market was bad in Montreal.

John Fox.

John Fox, Douro, told the court that on agreeing to the sale he asked for a deposit on the transaction, but the buyers informed him that such was not their practice. They said he would be paid at the station on delivering the cattle. He only scrutinized the name, the amount and the date on the cheque he received. The teller at the Dominion Bank told him the cheque was not due until the sixth day, as three days' grace had to be allowed. Merson asked him not to go back to the bank because, as business men, he felt that their credit would be injured by having cheques presented to the bank which were overdue. Two years ago he had business with Sherman and Merson, and received payment promptly. He thought that having paid up all right the previous time, they would have done so again. He had heard of the defendants being engaged in a previous dispute with a Mr. McNaughton, which they lost. Apart from the McNaughton case, he had never heard of them being engaged in litigation.

Asked by Mr. Wearing if he was aware that Mr. Sherman had maintained that the cow which he had bought from Mr. McNaughton was not as it had been represented, witness replied that he had heard so.

At this stag, Crown Attorney Hatton interposed with the objection that the question was not relevant even to cross-examination. "To be perfectly frank," said His Honor, "about two-thirds of the evidence that has been brought out is not relevant to the indictment."

Mortimer Healy.

Mortimer Healy sold a cow and a calf at Indian River. For the calf delivered in September he received a cheque for $25. He did not get it cashed when he first presented the cheque at the bank, but eventually it was paid. He was kind of suspicious for Sherman "blowed a lot about the money he had in Montreal." When he delivered the cow in November, he wanted cash, but finally agreed to take a cheque. He could not get the cheque cashed. The drovers asked him to take a note. He had not yet got the money for the cow.

Robert G. Wood.

Robert G. Wood received "a good offer," $90, for a cow, which he delivered at Indian River on November 1. He was paid by cheque, which was given about 8 p.m. Nothing was said as to whether he would or would not get the money at the bank. He heard the reports that the cheques were not being cashed. On the seventh Merson and Sherman's son asked him to take a note which, after some persuasion, he accepted. They did not ask him to give up the cheque. He never presented the note as he heard rumors that there was no money in the bank. Shown a cheque from Merson which he had cashed in a previous transaction, he was unable to recollect the deal involved.

William White.

William White, North Monaghan, asked $100 for a cow, and the dealers offered $80, but a compromise was effected at $95, to be paid on the delivery of the cow at the C. P. R. stockyard at Monaghan. Mr. Merson came along in his car and paid witness along with others by cheque, which were already made out. Coming into Peterboro with a load of alsike, he met Mr. Merson, who told him they had got into difficulties at Montreal. Merson came to North Monaghan and gave witness a note. He did not present the note, but he went with the cheque to the bank.

Questioned by Mr. Huycke, witness said that the last deal differed in no way from previous deals. He stated that Sherman had told him that he had been very successful in business. Witness stated that he was in court to get his money. Here, His Honor reminded him that he was a Crown witness in a criminal case, and not in proceedings for the recovery of his money.

Edward Fyfe.

Edward Fyfe, Indian River, made a transaction involving one milk cow and 2 calves, of a total value of $150. He did not see Merson and Sherman, but left the cattle at the tation, and, in accordance with a previous understanding, the dealers left his cheque at the store. They gave him a note on Friday the seventh, stating they had got into difficulties. He had not then tried to cash the cheque, but on the Saturday he left both note and cheque at the Union Bank, with the request to collect.

Cross-examined by Mr. Huycke, he did not see the cheque until the middle of the week, following his delivery of the cattle. There was no difference in this deal as compared with two previous deals.

ENTHUSIASM IS KEYNOTE OF CONTINUING PRESBYTERIANS

Dr. Johnston Predicts That Position Will Be Recovered in Decade.

NEED MINISTERS.

Appeals Are Made For the Clergy to Step into the Field.

TORONTO, June 11. (Canadian Press).—Enthusiasm continues to be the keynote of the Continuing Presbyterians as last night's meetings at St. Andrew's and Cooke's Churches drew great audiences. Last night produced two speakers on the missionary movement, those who dealt with the subject being Rev. Robert Johnston, of Calgary, and Rev. Jonathan Goforth, D.D., of Honan. Dr. Johnston predicted that within 10 years the Presbyterian Church would recover its old position in Canada. The numerical strength of the continuing Church was reviewed. The delegates told of the manner in which many of the minority groups were already organizing to carry on, in theatres and even in old hotel buildings, or any place they could find to hold services and keep the minority congregations together. Added to that was the fact that, judging from the number of appeals made during the day, there was plenty of room for younger clergy to step into the field and get good charges. Some of the Presbyteries reported as many as ten vacancies, and it was stated, an appeal had gone out to the clergy to step in and fill the gaps and carry on the work. Yesterday afternoon was devoted to hearing reports from Presbyteries in Western Ontario.

NEW CHURCH UNITE SERVICE

Period Will Be Set Aside For Prayer, Praise and Consecration.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

TORONTO, June 11: — Canadian Press. — At an early date, not yet fixed, a period of time will be set apart when all members of the United church of Canada will be asked to gather for prayer, praise, and consecration.

This was recommended to-day to the general council of the church by the Joint Union Committee reporting through the Chairman, Rev. Dr. G. C. Pigeon.

"The present union," said Dr. Pigeon, "was born an evangelist, and and our first great effort should be towards deepening of our spiritual life."

The chairman told the delegates a resolution would be presented at an early session which he hoped would open the way for a still wider union of the Canadian churches than that yesterday consummated.

The council endorsed an invitation from Westminster church, Winnipeg, to the alliance of reformed churches to hold their 1929 convention in that city.

This afternoon the council continued the discussion of the Church Union report and undertook the appointment of committees to work out details of organization.

A LINE-O-TYPE.

Well, well, well! Bob French says there should be nothing written in Line-O-Type disparaging to the Caledonian Pipe Band. He says in his letter of protest: "Why should Line-O-Type single out the Caledonian Pipe Band for his ill-conditioned and sarcastic remarks?" In fact he says we bludgeoned the Pipe Band, whereupon we suppose it squeaked. And he concludes by asking for amends.

About Music.

As a matter of fact we never mentioned the Caledonian Pipe Band in Line-O-Type. So we can't apologize for that.

We didn't "bludgeon" the band or any members, having a healthy respect for their size. So we can't apologize for that.

The only thing in fact that we can apologize for is Mr. French's linking up the word "caterwauling" with the pipes. And if he does that we submit he is saying that the music of the pipes is "the crying, as of cats at night; uttering harsh discordant sounds." That is the meaning of caterwauling as given in the New Universities Dictionary.

But Mr. French is making that comparison, not Line-O-Type, so we submit that Mr. French should tender his apologies to the Caledonian Pipe Band.

About News.

What is the biggest imaginable news? Naturally whatever is the biggest possible thing, happening at the nearest possible place and time. A big thing far away in space or time, as a famine in China or the fall of the Roman Empire, or a small thing near by, as a dog fight next door, are about the same size. That is the element of perspective.

But imagine the biggest possible thing absolutely, regardless of nearness or farness.

If the sun were one solid mass of dynamite, and it should suddenly explode, annihilating all its planets, and leaving our earth scarcely a spark in the tremendous blast, that would be the limit of possibility.

Nobody would survive to report it, of course, but the story itself, if it were reportable, would be the biggest thing that ever "broke."

Well, just that did happen—not exactly the other day, but as near to it as the speed of light could carry the news.

In the constellation of Pictor, in the southern skies, a brilliant star, bright as the North Star, suddenly appeared where none had been visible before.

Of course that means some tremendous cosmic catastrophe, quadrillions of miles away, which must have wiped out a whole solar system, with its worlds, inhabited or uninhabited, in a flash.

Naturally, nobody is excited. It is too far away.

But in the perspective of the Absolute, something happened—something of the sort does happen every few years—a billion times greater than all the events of earth and its sister planets since the day of their birth. Measured by that standard, we are less than microbes on a speck of star-dust.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a note of thanks from the Peterboro Health Association to those who helped in the work of the Made-in-Peterboro Fair. It seems only fitting that the thanks of the people of Peterboro should in turn be given the Health Association for the excellent work being done for the children of the city. The labor involved in the making of the Fair was of short duration, but the work of the Association goes on fifty two weeks in the year.

The people of Peterboro were glad to assist in the great work, counting it a privilege to be allowed to help.

TALK ON SYRIA IS APPRECIATED

Princess Rahme Consents to Remaining Another Day in Peterborough.

RUTH AND NAOMI.

Princess Rahme of Haidar, the Syrian princess who arrived in the city yesterday, gave the first of her entertainments in George Street Methodist Church last evening. The princess has been requested to stay over for an extra day, and will give a dramatic presentation of the story of Ruth and Naomi at George Street Church this evening, and the story of Naaman, the Syrian, to-morrow evening, preceding her entertainment with an intimate description of the city of Damascus.

Last evening, the audience at George Street, although not large in numbers, was very appreciative, and took much interest in the Princess' address on "Syria, the Light of the Orient," and in the Oriental music by her companion, Miss Lucille Burgess, who played and sang very charmingly as an introduction to the address.

The Princess and Miss Burgess both wore Syrian costumes, the former appearing in the attire of a lady of the aristocratic type.

Referring to the mistaken notion entertained by many that Palestine was in Arabia, and Syria in Persia, the Princess said that Syria was really only another name for the Holy Land, and included Palestine in its borders. "Its inhabitants are neither Arabs nor Turks, but are a pure Semitic race, cousins of the Jews. Abraham was the first Syrian that we know of. God said to him: "Out of thee will I make a great nation." So if you wish to trace the story back to its proper source, you will find that Jesus Christ was a Syrian."

A descriptive outline of the country followed, the speaker telling of the climatic conditions, in a land where one may sleep at night under four blankets, and dine the next evening at Jericho, in a temperature of one hundred and thirty-five degrees of heat, or swim in a mountain stream just four degrees above the freezing point.

The Princess was born at Baalbek, the old Phoenician city named after the god Baal. Near by is the ancient town of Sidon, called the "mother of oranges," and famed for this fruit.

Palestine Decayed

"Palestine decayed under Turkish sway. Its proud cities crumbled into dust and it lost step with the onward march of progress. But it is awakening from its lethargy." Tourists come here from every part of the globe, "some to worship, some from curiosity, and some to wash in the healing waters of the Jordan, and to behold the tomb of the Saviour."

Foods of the Syrians were described. The famous mess of pottage that cost Esau his birthright was described as being prepared from lentils, cracked in the sun, mixed with onions fried with olive oil.

Another dish is a combination of mince pie and roast beef. The meat is pounded to a pulp in a stone mortar, seasoned with salt and butter, then mixed with prepared wheat, pounded once more and made into balls with mince meat and fried onions and chopped nuts.

The speaker mentioned the Ishmaelitish tribes, children of Hagar, wanderers of the desert, who ignore all law and order, yet excel in hospitable traits and the possession of native dignity. The "covenant of salt" is sacred to them, and they harm none with whom they have eaten salt. The lover and his sweetheart never see each other until the day of their marriage, and if a man does not possess enough money or cattle to buy a wife, he may serve seven years with her father, as in Biblical days.

The Syrian girls are not vain. They wish to become expert housewives. During the marriage ceremonies, which last two weeks, the wife is presented by her husband with forty dresses, which will last her lifetime, and she dons them in succession during the riotous fortnight. Each village has its own distinctive apparel.

As a conclusion to an interesting discourse, the princess and Miss Burgess sang together, unaccompanied, in the ancient Syrian language, "The Angel's Message," a Holy Night hymn.

MOST EFFECTIVE BECAUSE MOST POWERFUL

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burto

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling young lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children!

She refuses to cook or keep house. She hires Ranghild Swanson to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she swamps him with debts for her clothes and an automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with Stanley Wayburn, an out-of-work actor. She and Wayburn, with May Seymour and Jim Carewe make a jolly foursome. Wayburn is offered a job on the New York stage. Gloria lends him $200 of Dick's money to help him out.

Dick becomes ill with pneumonia. When he recovers, Dr. John Seymour, husband of the flighty May, sends him away for a rest. Gloria refuses to go along, because Dick's mother, whom she hates, is going.

As soon as they leave on their trip, Gloria sets out for New York. She goes straight to Wayburn. But he spurns her, and tells her he has just married his leading woman, Sonya Chotek.

For two weeks Gloria tries to land a job and fails. Finally she comes home to Dick. He takes her back into the house, but not as his wife. He feels sure that she would never have come home Wayburn had wanted her to stay in New York. One night after her return Gloria finds Dick having dinner in a downtown restaurant with his secretary, Miss Briggs, of whom Gloria has always been jealous.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

She pondered all morning as she went around the house with a silly feather duster that only stirred up the dust in the rooms instead of clearing it away.

A dozen times she came back to the living room table to look at those two pictures. She wasn't worried about the "Roxie" letters . . . but the girl who had written the "Lucie" letters had evidently cared deeply for Dick.

Had he cared for her, Gloria wondered?

She couldn't think of Dick caring for any woman save herself. She couldn't bear the thought of his holding another woman in his arms and telling her that he loved her. . . . And yet, of course, he had! He must have! Not only one but two women. Otherwise they would never have written him all these love letters. . . They wouldn't have dared.

She took the letters with her out into the kitchen, and read them again while she ate the cold canned salmon that was all the lunch she had. She propped the two photographs up against the mirror of her dressing-table while she dressed late in the afternoon.

She had never thought of any other women being in Dick's life, before she met him. And yet there must have been, of course. . . . But he had been so madly in love with her from the first night when he had kissed her that she had never dreamed of any other women . . . the thought had never worried her at all. It had not even ruffled her vanity.

While she sat there brushing her hair, the telephone rang.

"Hello, Glory." It was Dick's voice. "Are we going to have dinner at home tonight?"

Gloria gasped. "Who's going to cook it?"

"Why don't you make a stab at it?" Dick asked. "No time like the present, you know."

"Oh, no," Gloria objected. "I couldn't. And besides there's not a thing in the house."

"All right, suit yourself," Dick's voice was remotely polite. "I'll eat downtown then, if you don't mind. Goodby."

But Gloria did mind. She minded very much. . . . There was nothing she enjoyed more than having a meal downtown. And Dick knew it!

Gloria stamped her foot. What did Dick think she was, anyway? Some kind of a doormat that he could trample on?

Did he think that he could have a fine meal downtown, with a waiter hovering over him, while she sat alone at home and ate a couple of sandwiches? . . . Did he really think she'd let him get away with it?

Well, she'd show him where to head in! . . . She would get dressed this very minute, and march straight downtown to his office! She would go out to supper with him or know the reason why.

"'Mama goes where papa goes, Or papa don't go out tonight,'" sang Gloria at the top of her voice, as she turned on the faucets in the bathtub. Then she remembered that the song was Stanley Wayburn's favorite ballad. She stopped singing.

She wanted never to think of Stan Wayburn again, so long as she lived!

For the last six months Gloria had thought that she was in love with Stan. There had been something in him that called to her . . . his devil-may-care quality, his everlasting cheerfulness.

But when she found out that he didn't love her, it had not broken her heart. It hadn't even touched her heart! . . . It had hurt only her pride. That was the thing that cowered in her, ashamed . . . the thing that wouldn't lift its head. Her pride in herself. Her vanity.

At six o'clock Gloria was on her way to Dick's office.

It was the first white hour of the twilight, but the hall within the building was dark.

There was a light in Dick's office. Gloria could see it through the frosted pane of the door. But the door, itself, was locked. Strange, she thought.

She knocked. She knocked again. There was no answer.

"Oh, bother!" Gloria said, exasperated. "I've missed him. He's gone!"

But Dick had left a light burning in his office. That must mean that he was coming back there to work, after he had had his supper.

Suddenly Gloria made up her mind to telephone Miss Briggs.

Miss Briggs would be able to tell her where Dick usually ate when he was downtown. And then she would hunt Dick up. . . . She hated to eat alone. And besides, she wanted to ask Dick who the "Lucie" of the letters was! She couldn't draw a peaceful breath until she knew that!

She went into a cigar store and looked up Miss Briggs' telephone number. She called it.

A woman with quavering old voice answered the phone. Miss Briggs wasn't at home, she said.

"This is Mrs. Briggs . . . Miss Brigg's mother," the old voice went on, "I think Susy's working late. You could probably get her at the office. . . . Who is this talking, please?"

But Gloria had hung up.

She stood silent as a statue in the telephone booth.

Was Dick having supper somewhere with Susan Briggs? . . . Her first suspicion of him flicked her brain for an instant. Then it was gone. . . .

Oh, no . . . not Dick! He wasn't the kind of man who made dates with his secretary! He wouldn't do such a thing. . . . She put the thought aside.

Gloria was very hungry.

There was a little restaurant nearby on Charlotte street where the food was delicious. She made up her mind to go there for a bite. Then, afterward, she would run up to Dick's office and surprise him at his work.

On her way, Gloria bought a movie magazine. She looked through it, sitting at a corner table of the cozy restaurant with its shaded lamps and smell of savory food.

The waiter brought her soup . . . mock turtle soup, thick and steaming. Gloria ate it hungrily. She sat back and looked around her, as she buttered a hot muffin.

She was the only person in the room who was alone.

At the other tables were little groups of two or three. Two, for the most part . . . the eternal duo of a man and a woman.

"You can always tell the married couples from the ones that aren't married," Gloria giggled to herself. "The married ones usually have a newspaper to read. They never talk, and they're always glum!"

Then her eye was caught by the familiar look of a man who sat with his back toward her, in the farthest corner of the restaurant. There was something about him that made her think of Dick. . . . It was Dick!

Gloria stood up to go to him.

It wasn't until then that she saw that Dick was not alone.

Across the table from him sat a woman. A woman with blue, shining eyes and a mouth which might have been too large if it had not been so fine and firm . . . Susan Briggs!

Gloria stared at them. Miss Briggs raised her eyes and saw her, standing there. She leaned across the table and spoke to Dick.

Gloria's first impulse was to laugh when she saw Miss Briggs and Dick at that half-hidden table in the corner of the little restaurant.

It was certainly the best laugh of the year—to catch the straight-laced Dick out "stepping" on the sly! To catch him taking his secretary out to dinner without telling his wife about it! . . . It was too funny. The corners of Gloria's mouth went up in a malicious little smile.

Then Dick turned and saw her. And something in his eyes startled her with its intensity. What had he and Miss Briggs been talking about to make him look like that? Could it be that he was in love with her, after all?

All the laughter died on Gloria's lips at the thought. Was she going to play second fiddle to Miss Briggs in Dick's life? Was she going to be one of the great army of wives whose husbands are in love with their office girls? . . . Well, she just guessed not! Not so you could notice it!

With fury in her heart, Gloria marched forward to the table where Dick was sitting with Miss Briggs. Dick jumped up and pulled out a chair for her.

"Well, this is a surprise!" he exclaimed.

"Yes—I noticed you looked surprised when you saw me," Gloria answered with sarcasm that bit.

Without a word of greeting to Susan Briggs, she sat down at the table.

"Have the waiter bring the rest of my dinner over here," she commanded Dick, "unless you have something to say to Miss Briggs that you'd rather not have your wife hear."

She laughed unpleasantly. She took out her vanity case and dabbed a bit of rouge on either cheek. Then she raised her eyes to Miss Briggs.

"You don't have to wear rouge, do you?" she asked. "You're as red as a beet. You look as if you have a fever, right now!"

It was true. Poor Miss Briggs had flushed to a deep, unbecoming red under Gloria's words.

She looked as if she wished that the earth would open and swallow her up. And, as a matter of fact, Miss Briggs was devoutly wishing herself out of that little restaurant.

She had come there that night alone, when Dick had asked her to work late. Five minutes after she had begun to eat, Dick, himself, had walked in. It would have been queer if he had not sat down to share her lonely meal. A friend could do no less, could he?

Miss Briggs wished now that Dick would explain the whole thing to his wife. But she knew he wouldn't. She could see that he was going to let Gloria think anything she wanted to think.

And what Gloria evidently thought was that Dick had taken Miss Briggs out to dinner . . . to "show her a good time."

Miss Briggs drew a breath of relief when Gloria turned her shoulder upon her, and began to talk to Dick.

"By the way, dear," she said with sugary sweetness, "I forgot to ask you if your mother's better. Did her trip with you do her good?"

"She's much better," Dick answered, last person on earth that Gloria cared to hear about was his mother. He knew that Gloria detested his mother. . . . What game was his wife up to, now, he wondered.

He soon found out. Gloria went on talking to him about things that didn't matter to her or to him, either. She kept up a flow of foolish chatter. She spun it out until the meal was almost over.

She did her best to shut Miss Briggs out of the talk. She snubbed her. She talked in a half-whisper so low that Miss Briggs couldn't have caught a word if she had tried.

Dick saw the rude and cruel thing that Gloria was doing. And he came to Miss Briggs' rescue just as he would have rescued a mouse that a cat was torturing.

He leaned across the table toward her. Deliberately he tried to draw her into the conversation.

"What did Smithers want to see me about today, Susy?" he asked gently.

"About that Parmely injunction case," Miss Briggs answered with lips that trembled. She fumbled in her purse and pulled out a $2 bill. She laid it on the tablecloth.

"That's to pay for my dinner," she said, "and I think I'll leave you people now, and get back to my work. . . . Goodnight, Mrs. Gregory."

It cost Miss Briggs an effort to bid Gloria goodnight. And Gloria knew it.

"Good night, Miss Briggs," she said airily.

She smiled, with narrowed eyes. She knew she had spoiled Miss Briggs' dinner. And she was glad of it! She'd show Dick's secretary that she couldn't go dining around with him, and get away with it! She'd show her a trick or two worth knowing!

Miss Briggs got up to go. Dick rose with her.

"I wish you wouldn't rush off like this, Susy," he said. "See you later, though. Get together the data on that injunction case, will you?"

Wordlessly Miss Briggs nodded. She walked out of the little restaurant, jerkily, as if she were pulled by unseen wires.

Gloria watched her go, with an amused smile. Then she turned furiously to Dick.

"So!" she cried, "this is why you didn't want me to come downtown to eat with you! This is why you don't want to kiss me any more! . . I see it all, now! How long has this affair with Miss Briggs been going on, for goodness' sake?"

"Affair with Miss Briggs?" Dick repeated quietly. "I don't know what you're talking about. Do you know, yourself?"

Gloria stared at him.

"Do you mean to say you don't know Susan Briggs is cuckoo about you?" she asked. It would be just like Dick not to be able to see it!

"You ought to know it!" she went on. "She doesn't take the trouble to hide the fact that she's gone on you. You've only got to look at her to know!"

At that the smouldering anger in Dick burst out. He brought his fist down noiselessly on the thickly padded tablecloth in front of him.

"You ought to be ashamed of talking about a decent girl that way, Gloria," he said. "And the way you treated her just now was about the rottenest thing I ever saw. . . ."

"What do I care?" Gloria cried wildly. "Who's Susan Briggs that I should bow and scrape to her! She needn't think she can go jazzing around with my husband, and have me treat her like a tin angel!"

"You think I'm 'jazzing around' with Susan Briggs?" he asked shortly.

"Sure I do!" Gloria's tone was airy. "You know I'm not," Dick said quietly. "You know I'm not the kind of man who chases women. You know I run away from them. If I'd known Susan Briggs was coming here tonight to eat, I'd have gone somewhere else. And you know that, too!"

Gloria gave a short, ugly laugh.

"You can bet your boots she knew you were coming here, though!" she said. "I'll bet she even knows where you go to get shaved, and where you buy your collars . . . everything about you! She makes a study of you. . . . And she came here tonight, knowing that you'd show up if she just waited long enough. And sure enough, you did!"

HEART TROUBLE SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Mrs. Geo. E. Bowman, Morrisburg, Ont., writes:—"I am writing you a few lines to let you know of my experience with Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Two years ago I became very poorly with my heart and nerves and whenever I took the least little bit of exercise my heart would start to jump and flutter. I could not walk up-stairs without having to sit down and rest before I was half-way up, on account of my breath becoming so short.

I commenced taking

Prices Too Low.

An auction sale of purebred Holstein cows was to have been held at the Paisley House yards on Saturday afternoon. The cows were there, the auctioneer, Mr. Clancy, was there, and the crowd was there, but the sale didn't materialize as the prices bid didn't seem to be sufficient to warrant the disposal of the animals to the bidders. The prices reached were between $80 and $100.

At the regular meeting of the Women's Institute on Friday last the attendance was small owing to the excessive heat.

A. D. HONE IS MADE PRINCIPAL AT SOO

Former Peterboro Collegiate Teacher Gets Important Post.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., June 11.—A. D. Hone, M.A., of London, has been appointed principal of the Sault Ste. Marie technical school at a salary of $4,000 a year. He will report for the fall term.

While Mr. Hone has not had official communication of his appointment, it is likely that he will accept the position. Speaking on his behalf last night, Mr. Hone himself being confined to his room by a severe attack of pleurisy, Mrs. Hone stated that Mr. Hone was offered the post last Easter, but that he had refused to leave his classes at the technical school in the middle of a term. Mrs. Hone added that if the appointment has been made now, it comes entirely unsolicited upon Mr. Hone's part.

Mr. Hone, who holds the degree of master of arts from Trinity college, Toronto, with specialists's certificate in science and physical culture, has been headmaster of the technical department at the London technical and commercial high school for the past few years. During that period the department has grown from 90 to 500 students. Meanwhile, Mr. Hone has played no small part in the splendid success achieved by the school in recent years.

Prior to coming to London in 1919, Mr. Hone was head of the science department in Peterboro collegiate for five years. Mr. Hone was with the Cobourg heavy battery during the war, and was appointed a research fellow by the honorary advisory council of research for the dominion. In this connection, Mr. Hone did some important research work in connection with agriculture, which was afterwards published by the council.

The principalship of the Sault Ste Marie technical school was rendered vacant by the appointment of L. J. Williams as an inspector.

BIRDS

A Little Editorial From Lakefield for Boys and Others.

LAKEFIELD, June 11.—With so much said and written of the preservation of the home, it would not be untimely for parents to point the moral to their boys and girls as to the value of the preserving the home of our little feathered songsters. People who have lived on the prairie lands of the West speak of the absence of birds as being a great loss to the country but we in our well favored Lakefield are doing our best to exterminate bird life by allowing the wholesale destruction which the combination of boy (not always small) and stone is causing. A bird is a mark to be aimed at, a bird's nest, a home for the young birds or a resting place for the eggs is to be destroyed.

How dull life would be without the birds and we know all things were created for good and man's benefit and when we destroy bird life we leave ourselves defeneeless against the horde of pests which the birds destroy. Stop and think and spare the birds and their homes.

HASTINGS NEWS

The heat of the past week has been very oppressive and many bathers are noticed around the water front.

Dr. J. H. Hess left on Monday evening for Cobourg where he will attend the Spring Meeting of the County Council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

Mr. and Mrs. Bygott and daughter, Helen and Kathleen were in Hastings on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stinson and family of Cobourg spent Saturday with friends here.

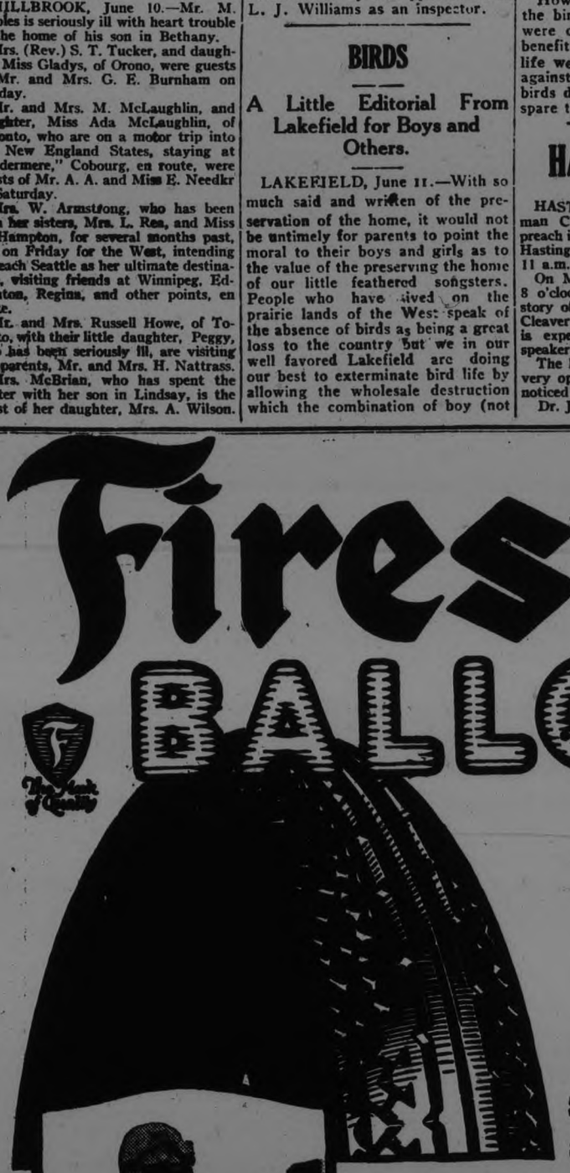
Firestone BALLOONS WIN Battle of Tires

Set new speed records at Indianapolis Track



"Gum-Dipped Balloons Helped Me Break World Record" — Says Peter De Paolo

Without Firestone Balloons I couldn't have put it over. I felt safe on those big tires—and could maintain the higher speeds on the treacherous turns, enabling me to finish the race with the average of 101.13 miles per hour—breaking all track records from 10 to 500 miles. Twenty-one cars started—ten finished "in the money" on Firestone Balloons. Never before have tires been subjected to such a gruelling test—one more convincing testimonial for Firestone's extra process of Gum-Dipping that eliminates internal friction and heat.

PLAN TO AMEND FREIGHT RATES ACT

Would Strengthen Act Relating to Revision of Rates.

OTTAWA, June 11. Canadian Press — Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, gave notice of an amendment to the bill authorizing the Railway Commission to investigate and revise freight rates throughout Canada, at the opening of the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. The Minister explained that the amendment did not alter the effect of the bill but strengthened it. The amendment makes it clear that Crow's Nest rates on grain and flour shall apply to all the territory west of Fort William covered by tariffs filed by the Railway Commission under the terms of the agreement at the date of the passing of this act.

It stipulates that the Crow's Nest rates on grain and flour shall apply to all lines of railway "now or hereinafter constructed by any company subject to the jurisdiction within such territory."

The second reading of the bill was not proceeded with this afternoon, the Prime Minister postponing it on request of the Progressive leader, Robert Forke.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, the Opposition leader, agreed that it might be wiser to delay consideration of the motion for second reading in view of the amendment which required some consideration.

FAMILY TROUBLES CAUSED SHOOTING

Man is Dead and Wife Suffering From Serious Gunshot Wound.

REGINA, Sask., June 11. — Mike Brapkowski, aged 44, of Edenwold, is dead from a gunshot wound in the head, supposedly self inflicted, and his wife is badly wounded as a result, it is believed, of an assault by her husband. The injured woman is suffering from gunshot wounds in hands, knees and other parts of her body.

It is said that the tragedy resulted from family troubles. Brapkowski had been living apart from his wife for some considerable period.

MONEY FOR SCIENCE PASSED BY COMMONS

Maintenance Money For Observatories and Surveys Is Voted.

OTTAWA, June 11.—(Canadian Press.)— Money for the maintenance of scientific institutions carrying on work under the direction of the Department of Interior was passed by the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. The items included: Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, $50,000; Dominion Observatory, Victoria, $18,500; Topographical Surveys, $400,000; Geodetic Survey, $270,740; and $20,000 for expenses in connection with the survey and demarkation of International boundaries. Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of Interior, explained that a treaty had just been signed with the United States respecting division of costs for the maintenance of boundaries, and it had been estimated that it would cost each country $20,000 to keep the line clear and the stone monuments marking the line preserved. The work came under the Department of the Surveyor General. In all, $759,240 for scientific institutions was passed.

ADJUST DUTIES.

House of Commons Sat Until 4 This Morning in London.

LONDON, June 11 (Canadian Press)—The House of Commons sat until nearly four o'clock this morning discussing various proposals of the finance bill, the Laborites and Liberals submitting numerous amendments aiming at a defeat of the government's preferential duties. All amendments were rejected by large conservative majorities. The proposed increase in imperial preference on sugar was opposed by an amendment of the Laborites on the ground that such duty benefitted neither consumer nor treasury, but merely aided growers in the West Indies and other parts of the empire.

The Laborite amendment was rejected and the sugar clauses adopted 190 to 98.

PRINCESS RAHME BRIDGES A GAP

VISITOR HERE

"East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet", wrote a modern writer. Problems of the Oriental world will perhaps always remain peculiarly their own, with a differing Occidental outlook on manner and customs in the home and the business world.

To the Western hemisphere come from time to time citizens of that old world that has its being over the sea. One of these is at present in the city, the Princess Rahme of Haidar, an ancient house of that old city of an old continent, Damascus, with its Street Called Straight, trodden by men and women in days long before the advent of Christ. Bridging the gap between the two lands are these arrivals, and the princess is an interesting exponent of the two worlds, her bobbed black head in contrast to the tatooed insignia on the backs of her hands, pale emblems of branches on the left, on the right the ancient Christian cross. Fear of the Ismaelitish tribes of the desert, those nomads who swoop down on city homes of Syria and carry away the little children, cause the people of the better class to have these marks drawn on their children's hands, so that they may be identified with little trouble, in case of kidnapping. Each home has its special emblem, and the work is done carefully by a doctor, to prevent poisoning of the blood from the ink.

Covering the marks were the long sleeves of the sequined draperies that covered the Princess' robe, a trailing gown with lace bodice and skirt of knife-pleated lavender crepe. On her hands were numerous large rings, in her ears huge pendant earrings with turquoise matrix insets. Black eyes and hair, regular, fine features and an olive skin, with charming manner, such is the physical presentment of this scion of an ancient house. She was born in the little Syrian village of Baalbek, at the foot of Mount Lebanon, her fathers' house situated in the city of Damascus. Educated in the American schools of Sidon and Tyre and Beirut, the Princess came to this country to complete her study of the English language, after a course that included study of the Greek and Arabaic and Egyptian tongues. From the University of Chicago, she went to the University of Southern California, in Los Angeles, to take a post-graduate course in dramatic expression, and later, was presuaded to embark on a lecture and Chautauqua tour that has held her for many years.

Better Understanding.

To promote a better understanding between the people of this continent and residents of Palestine and its neighbors is the avowed work of the Princess, who has been recalled time and again to different centres where she has given talks and the Oriental readings and plays which she stages. Starting in Victoria, B.C. she has been one year and five months in reaching Peterboro, speaking at all the large cities and many of the smaller centres along the route. Coming from Whitby to this city, she goes from here to Trenton.

In Toronto, the Princess and her companion, Miss Burgess, spent much time and staged while there three dramatic productions of Oriental type, including a huge production at Massey Hall, and others at St. Aidan's and Trinity churches. To present the manners and ideas and customs of the Holy Land to her audiences is one of the aims of this entertainer.

Through the United States and down through Texas and Mexico, the Princess and her companion have appeared, sometimes with the Chautauqua courses. Next summer, she will travel with the Canadian Chautauqua for a ten weeks' tour, providing, with her companions, Miss Burgess and an English 'cellist, the entire programme for one whole day, with afternoon and evening performances. In Hollywood, they remained for some time, putting on these Oriental performances, and being constantly mistaken for movie stars.

Flappers Strange.

Interrogated as to opinions of the actions of the 'flapper' species of young girl of this continent, the Princess replied that they compared strangely with customs of her country, where the young girls were not allowed to meet or "go hand in hand" with the young men. In that land, all marriages are arranged by heads of both families. When a young man wishes to marry, he tells his father about it and gives him the proper dowry. The parents then enlist the services of a professional matchmaker, who does not work for wages, but takes a pride in her profession, and is rewarded with a rich gift if everything is satisfactory. The matchmaker is told just what the young man's ideal girl is like and what qualities he requires in a wife. She begins an extensive tour of the neighborhood, canvassing various families for marriageable daughters, and making exhaustive enquiries as to physical and mental qualifications. It is a long and laborious process, but finally a certain girl is selected, and the parents of both parties have a solemn conclave and arrange the engagement. For two years, the young people are engaged, and during that time, the young man may visit the maiden, who is always properly chaperoned. Neither of them, however, ever speaks of marriage. That would not be considered the proper attitude to take. Annulment of these engagements is almost impossible and the marriage eventually takes place. Divorce is practically unknown.

At funerals, also, professional mourners are engaged, women making a special business of dirges for such occasions.

The Princess thinks that women should have the vote, but is not at all sure that they should carry their interest in public life and public questions to such an extent as they do in this country. They should confine their activities, she thinks, so that they will not interfere with what is exclusively man's business.

Tonight, as on last night, the princess gives an entertainment at the George street Methodist church.

OTONABEE CHAPTER I.O.D.E. MEETING

Garden Party Postponed Until September—Report of Convention Heard.

The regular monthly meeting of the Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. was held yesterday afternoon, in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association, the vice regent, Mrs. R. R. Hall, presiding.

It was decided to postpone the projected garden party, to have been held this month at the residence of Mrs. R. R. Hall, until September.

Miss Mary Archer, delegate of the chapter to the recent convention of the I.O.D.E. in Ottawa, gave a very interesting report of the proceedings, telling of the progress made in National work of the I.O.D.E. Miss Archer attended the garden party given at Government House, also the reception by wives of Cabinet ministers, held in the restaurant of the Parliament buildings.

It was reported that the Otonabee chapter's share of the collection on tag day for the Blind was $200, and that net proceeds of their tea and upper room at the Made-in-Peterboro Fair amounted to $133.

October 7th was announced as the day set for the visit to Peterboro of Mrs. Burkholder of Hamilton, Provincial President of the I.O.D.E.

HANGING VINES

Of course, everyone has planted vines or other climbing plants on the ground and watched them climb up the pillars of a porch. But here's a novel suggestion, if you have a porch roof of this type. Plant them in large boxes on the porch roof and the hanging vines will be very beautiful.

Latest French Styles

NEW YORK, June 11.—(United Press).—In spite of the vogue for wide skirts most of the Parisians at the Longchamp racetrack are wearing straight lined frocks and suits. The Parisian evidently believes that the sports frock should not be as bouffant as the dressy one.

Its a relief to some of us who like straight-lined clothes to know that the chic French woman is still wearing them, in spite of the returning Americans who wear full skirts of knee length.

While some of the models worn at Longchamp are beltless, the majority have some sort of a narrow belt worn at a low waistline. Skirts, of course, are just as short on straightline models as they are on the bouffant ones. A typical frock of the Parisian racetrack is made of bordered material, the border forming the hem of the skirt. The border is often handwork of colored wool and is the only touch of trimming on the frock. Sleeves are long and neckline rounding. A belt of self material or leather may be worn at a low waistline.

A model of beltless type is made of mauve silk crepe with tucks graduating in width from hipline to hem. This also has long sleeves and rounding neckline. Still another model, which is made on straight lines, has a slender tunic of white crepe embroidered about the border in black, red and yellow and this is worn over a black foundation which extends about four inches below the tunic. Sleeves are long and finished with black cuffs. This outfit was worn with a draped turban of black crepe.

Pearl chokers are invariably worn with frocks of semi-sports type. Both pink and white pearls of large size are popular. French women are wearing a very light flesh shade stocking with the sports costume. Very few white stockings are seen. Shoes are white or of a shade used on the costume.

Weddings

O'BRIEN—BRADY

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday morning at 6 o'clock in St. Peter's Cathedral, when Miss Blanche Brady, second youngest daughter of the late Peter and Mrs. Brady of Lindsay was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Gerald O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Brien of Peterboro. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father P. Costello.

The bride was charmingly attired in a navy French tricotine suit with hat to match and carried a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. Miss Kay Brady, sister of the bride also looked dainty as bridesmaid and wore an old rose crepe frock with trimming of thistle-bloom and hat to match. She carried a bouquet of iris and carnations.

The bridegroom was ably suported by his cousin, Mr. Jack Burke, of this city.

The happy couple left on the morning train, amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Toronto, Windsor and other points via C.N.R. On there return they will reside in Detroit.

BULLOCK—NELSON

The wedding took place very quietly on Saturday morning, May 23rd, at Stewarton Presbyterian church, Ottawa, of Kathleen Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Nelson, Vars, Ont., to Victor E. Bullock, M.A., of the staff of the Glebe Collegiate Institute, Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bullock, Orono, Ont.

Rev. Wesley Megaw performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was unattended. She wore a smart ensemble costume of navy blue with applique in crabapple shade, and a small French hat to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of Columbia roses and valley lillies, and the groom's gift, a necklace of pearls.

Mr. and Mrs. Bullock left for a short trip to Montreal and Quebec City and on their return will reside at 9 Imperial Avenue, Ottawa.

Cynthia Grey Says

QUESTIONS-ANSWERS

Dear Miss Grey: How can I stop my fur choker from "shedding?" Is it possible to clean furs satisfactorily in the home?—Martha S.

You might be able to correct the shedding condition by drenching the fur in gasoline, but it is always doubtful economy to try to treat furs in the home. I believe as a rule it is cheaper and better to turn them over to an expert.

Dear Miss Grey: You have answered many questions for people who are beauty seekers. Therefore, I want to ask you a question that has been on my mind for more than a year.

I am a young girl of 17 and never have bobbed my hair. Many people think that I am old-fashioned, but I am not. I really would like to have it bobbed, but I am afraid bobbed hair soon will go out of style? Do you think bobbed hair is becoming to a girl with a full face?—Sally Wilmington.

Personally, I believe that there will be many women with bobbed hair in this country ten years from now. But fashions in hairdressing are certain to change. So fickle is fashion that no style, whether it be in hairdressing, frocks, coats or shoes, really stays with us for any length of time. I believe there will be some important modification of the bob that will become popuar soon. It may not be long hair. I believe that since you have waited this long, it would be better not to bob your hair for a few months more and see whether fashion will continue its stamp of approval of the bob. Although many girls with full faces have bobbed their hair, I do not believe shorn tresses are as attractive on them as on their sisters with more slender faces.

Dear Miss Grey: Why is it that so many people think that a girl is bad just because she uses rouge and a lipstick? Can't you explain to them that a rouged face can be as pure and clean as one which is not? —Clayton.

There's no argument to your statement that a rouged face can be just as pure as one which is not. Of course, that is true. I don't believe the moderate use of rouge and a lipstick affects the reputation of any girl, except with a few narrow-minded people who see evil in every little touch of cosmetics. But I have very little sympathy for the girl who uses an excessive amount of cosmetics. Her reputation undoubtedly is damaged, because those with reputations known not to be very good follow the same practice, and in the public mind all the girls with an excessive amount of rouge are placed in the same class. The real purpose of cosmetics is not to make a woman look wild and unnatural, but to give her a natural-like beauty.

PONIES POUND OUT VICTORY, NICKING PETERBORO' HURLERS FOR SIXTEEN SOLID SMASHES

Regained Leadership of the League and Took Revenge For Loss Here.

POOR WEATHER.

Cold Wind Bothered Players of Both Teams, Who Erred Frequently.

(By F. D. C.)

The Kingston Ponies are again at the top of the Central Ontario League as the result of their 14-7 victory over the Petes at Kingston last evening.

It was Saturday's game all over again, with reverse English.

While the Ponies' pep was shrivelled up by the heat on Saturday, the Petes' ginger was congealed by the Arctic breezes in yesterday's fixture, and although not quite so badly beaten as were the Daleyites last week the talent left by the Petes gave but a faint imitation of the sparkling ball club they looked to be in their last appearance on the home lot.

The weather conditions were anything but favorable to good baseball. It was raw and cold with a strong breeze blowing and a drizzle of rain through the later stages.

Cairns, the Kingston left-hander, turned in his third winning card last evening and tops the league's pitchers. He gave six bases on balls and allowed eight hits, but outside of a couple of innings he kept the Petes at bay when hits would have produced runs, and with his teammates running up a score his task was a comparatively easy one.

He was opposed by Al, Heckman, who sustained his first defeat of the year. Heck lacked his customary stuff and in addition was the victim of some shaky support. Seven of the twelve runs scored off his deliveries being unearned. Errors crept in when they would do the most harm and the Ponies had the punch to follow up the openings thus crated, with some timely hitting; Cherry showing the way with called out on strikes, and Rose was

It was a long drawn-out and generally lifeless fixture, made more so by the miserable weather conditions and it speaks well for the endurance of the Kingston fans that the majority remained until the last man had been retired.

How It Was Done.

In the first, Legon fanned. Rose drew a walk but Swanston was called out son strikes, and Rose was caught off first.

The Ponies bagged two they shouldn't have got. Holyman tossed out Teepel to start with, but Halbert bounced a hit off Harrison's leg. Batstone hit to McPherson for what should have been a double play, but Rose was late in getting over for the third baseman's throw which went through into right field, Halbert going to third. Batstone stole second. Somerville flied to Legon, a nice catch close in on which the runners were held. Cherry however, smashed a single through short to send Halbert and Batstone in. Purvis lofted to Legon.

The Petes lost a good chance in the second. Heckman singled past third and went to second on a passed ball. Harrison walked and after Wolfe had bunted a fly to Batstone, Hall also drew a pass, filling the bases. Holyman and McPherson struck out, leaving the runners stranded.

The Ponies added another in their half. Walker started it with a lucky single, the ball bouncing over Rose's head. Quinn sacrificed him to second, and Cairns helped his own cause by scoring Walker with a single to left. Teepel hit into a fast double play, Holyman to Rose to Harrison.

In the third Legon drew a pass. Rose popped to Batstone. Swanston hit to Cairns and everybody was safe, when Halbert dropped the pitcher's toss to second. Heckman forced Legon at third on a rap to Cairns and Walker took Harrison's long hard drive in deep left.

Halbert led off for Kingston with a double down the first base line. Batstone hit to Heckman who threw Halbert out at third. Somerville fouled to Swanston. Cherry singled through short. Purvis flied to Legon.

For the Petes in the fourth, Wolfe singled past Somerville and stole second, but Hall fanned. Holyman flied to Cherry and McPherson was thrown out by Batstone.

A Big Inning.

The Ponies scored four after two men were out. Walker rolled to Rose and Quinn hoisted to Holyman. Cairns walked, however, and registered when Teepel pasted a triole to left centre. Halbert's roller got away from McPherson. Teepel counting. Batstone singled over second, sending Halbert to third and taking second on the throw to McPherson. Somerville singled over short to send Halbert and Batstone in. Cherry got a life when Holyman lost his bounder, but Purvis popped to Harrison.

The Johnstonites broke into the scoring column in the fifth. Legon was safe on Batstone's low throw and took second on a passed ball to score when Rose doubled past third. Swanston rolled to Somerville. Heckman singled to right, scoring Rose. Harrison dropped a Texas Leaguer over short, and the runners took an extra base on Halbert's bad throw. Wolfe drove a vicious liner at Cairns, the ball striking the Kingston pitcher in the chest, and carroming over to Purvis, who retired Wolfe, Heckman scoring. It was a terrific drive and Cairns was shaken up but continued on the rubber and struck out Hall to retire the side.

The Ponies went out in order. Walker flied to Wolfe and Quinn to Hall, while Cairns struck out.

In the sixth, Holyman fouled to Batstone, McPherson fanned, and Legon rolled to Batstone.

And Another One.

The Ponies had a field day. Teepel led off with a triple to right centre. Halbert hit to Rose, who made a pretty pick up and Teepel was caught between third and home but McPherson threw over Swanston's head, Teepel scoring and Halbert going to third. Batstone singled off Heckman's glove, Halbert remaining at third. Batstone stole second and scored with Halbert on Somerville's single to left, the batter going to second on the throw to the plate. Cherry singled to left scoring Somerville. Walker forced him at second, Holyman to Rose. Purvis flied to Wolfe. Walker was safe at second on a steal when Holyman dropped the throw, Umpire Dell first calling the runner out. Quinn doubled to centre, scoring Walker. Cairns fanned.

Rose started the seventh with a single to left, but Swanston rolled to Cairns and Heckman and Harrison flied out to Teepel.

Reserves Go In.

Gartner went behind the bat for the Petes at this stage while Ash replaced Legon in the outfield, taking right field. Teepel was thrown out by McPherson, Halbert rolled to Rose and Batstone to Heckman.

Johnston batted for Wolfe to start the eighth and rolled to Somerville. Hall fanned and Holyman flied to Teepel.

Harrison went to the rubber for the Petes in the last half of the eight, Heckman going to centre field and Johnston to first base.

Somerville greeted the new heaver with a double to left and scored on a passed ball and a wild pitch. Cherry singled to left, went to second on a passed ball and after Purvis had been thrown out by Holyman registered on a wild pitch. Walker was tossed out by Harrison. Quinn was hit and Cairns fanned.

The Petes' scored four in the ninth. McPherson singled over second. Legon flied to Cherry and Rose to Teepel, but Swanston and Heckman walked, filling the bases and Harrison scored McPherson and Swanston with a single over second. Walker dropped Johnston's fly to left after a run and Heckman and Harrison trotted home. Hall's fly to Cherry wound up the game.

TRUNKS HOPE TO WIN ONCE MORE

Broke Into the Win Column Yesterday and Expect to Beat Petes Here Saturday.

Belleville, full of pep as the result of their victory over Oshawa yesterday, will be here on Saturday to clash with the Petes in a Central Ontario League fixture at Riverside Park. The Johnstonites after winning four games in a row got a lot of bad baseball out of their systems at Kingston last evening and hope to hit their stride again on Saturday, although they realize that the re-invigorated Belleville gang will be stiff opposition, and the Trunks came within an ace of nosing the Petes out in their last appearance here, and they can be depended upon to put up a tough argument on Saturday. The Ra'-roaders figure that Kingston will beat Oshawa in the Motor City and that by beating Peterboro, they can climb up on even terms with Oshawa. Judging by the last clash between the teams, Saturday's game should be full of interesting features.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER THORON
Maker of 51 Golf Champions.
"Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The rule that applies to the mid-iron in the back swing, previously described, of never letting it go beyond a line even with the right shoulder, applies to the driving iron, and explains why the back swing with the iron is shorter than with the woods. Now the mashie. As you step up closer to the ball with the shorter irons, you use a swing more and more upright. That is, the shorter the iron the more upright the swing, so with the mashie the back swing is so upright that the blade would be directly above your head if you took it clear on up. This means that the mashie blade goes straight back from the ball, with the blade kept closed, or facing at right angles to the ball, all the way. You can go with this only to the point where the arms are just short of shoulder high—and that's the top of the mashie back swing. In the forward swing hit slightly from the inside out. Keep the right arm close in.

COBB'S FIRST LIEUTENANTS

Stanage and McBride, Former Stars, Assisting Detroit Manager This Season.

LEFT TO RIGHT—OSCAR STANAGE AND GEORGE McBRIDE

DETROIT, June 11.— Here are the two players Ty Cobb is leaning on most in his quest for the 1925 American League pennant.

No, they are not present-day stars, but former celebrities who have outlived their careers as regulars.

George McBride, one of the greatest fielding shortstops the game has ever produced, who managed Washington prior to his retirement from the majors, is Cobb's right-hand man in directing the club.

Oscar Stanage has charge of the pitchers. His job is as important, if not more so, than McBride's, for pitching is the thing. Stanage, although he has been out of the majors for several years, is still a capable catcher. He caught 100 games last year for Toronto in the International League.

LACROSSE GAME BOOKED FRIDAY

A CELEBRATION

HASTINGS, June 11.—The first Intermediate O.A.L.A. game of the district will take place on Friday at Campbellford between Havelock and Norwood combined and Hastings and Campbellford combined. These amalgamated teams are real strong this year and a real old time battle is expected.

An official referee from Toronto will be in charge and a good clean game is assured.

Dominion Day.

A Dominion Day celebration will be held by the Hastings Athletic Association. The above teams will present an exhibition game of lacrosse and a league game of baseball is also billed.

LACK OF MOWING COST BETHANY GAME

Ball Was Lost in Grass, Permitting Winning Runs to Score.

BETHANY, June 11.—One of the best ball games seen in Bethany for a long time was played on the local diamond on Tuesday evening betwen the old rivals for baseball honors, Janetville and Bethany. Janetville had the edge on the pitching and gathered 11 hits against Bethany's nine. Jackson for Janetvile striking out 11 of the Bethany players against one by Dawe. Syer hit a long hit into left field for a home run which should have been only a single, but unfortunately for the home team the grass was not cut in that section and McCartney could not locate the ball until Syer crossed the plate with a runner ahead of him.

McCartney in left field played a good game, taking three chances without a slip.

On the nights' play these teams were evenly matched and should provide a good baseball attraction as the season advances. There was a very small attendance and those who were present were not disappointed although the home team was defeated. The brand of ball being played in this league deserves better support and the boys would appreciate a larger attendance.

KIWANIS WON IN TWO GAMES

Juvenile and Midget Teams Beat Dodgers and Young Cops.

GOOD BASEBALL

Yesterday evening, the Kiwanis Juveniles met the Dodgers in a good game in the Juvenile City League. Both teams put up a hard fight but at the end of the game, the Kiwanis walked off with the score to the tune of 11-3. The air was pretty chilly for baseball but nevertheless both teams put up some fine ball and the whole game resembled very much a game in the Big Four League. The lineups were:

PICTON WON

Deloro Lost to Home Team by 6 to 4 This Week.

MARMORA, June 11.—Deloro visited Picton on Monday in seach of victory but were not rewarded. The game was late in starting and only a few spectators put in an appearance. Those, however, made their presence known. Possibly it was owing to the heat that the game itself was a poor exhibition of the brand of ball both teams are capable of. Deloro was fairly strong at fielding but woefully weak at bat on the other hand. Croft of Picton pitched good ball and had no less than eleven strike outs. Lamoreans for Deloro, although not so effective, showed promise of developing into a valuable twirler. The game resulted in a win for Picton by 6 to 4.

LEAGUE GAMES ARE ALMOST FINISHED

Only Two Games Remain in Public School Baseball League.

In the Public School Boys' Baseball League, King Edward School is now ahead. Queen Mary and Prince of Wales are tied for second place and will play on Friday afternoon, the winner being tied with King Edward for first place. A game will then be played early next week to decide the winner of the League.

CRAWFORD DIED IN SERVICE OF BRITISH EMPIRE

Is Father's Claim in Asking Acknowledgment From Government.

PROPOSE MEMORIAL.

Premier King Supports Plan to Commemorate Young Man's Heroism.

OTTAWA, June 11. — C. P. — The ill-fated Wrangel expedition, which involved the death of Allan Crawford, its 20 year old commander, was discussed in the House of Commons last night, when Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, made a statement to the House regarding the governments' association with the expedition.

The Minister first read a letter from Professor Crawford of the Ontario College of Education, Toronto, dated May, 8, 1925, in which Prof. Crawford asked the minister to make it clear that his son, Allan Crawford, had been persuaded by Mr. Stefansson, the organizer of the expedition, that the British government had a claim to Wrangel Island, and would back his expedition if they would raise the British flag there. His son's patriotism had been appealed to and he died in the belief that he was dying for the British Empire.

Mr. Stewart then made a statement in which he reviewed the circumstances of Mr. Stefansson's endeavor to secure Wrangel Island, according to his own statement, for the British crown.

In 1921, the expedition commanded by Allan Crawford, under Stefansson's direction, went to Wrangel, but the Canadian government took no part in the expedition, and did not give any enouragement to Mr. Stefansson. The British overnment also declined to claim Wrangel.

Mr. Stewart added that Mr. Stefasson had assured him several times that the party could live off the country at Wrangel.

Premier King said that there was no doubt that Allan Crawford had had been actuated by the highest motives. He suggested that the heroism of this young man and his companions should be commemorated by the placing of a tablet or something of that nature at some suitable place.

Mr. Meighen joined in the tribute to Allan Crawford, and Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, supported the idea of a memorial to Crawford.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

ROBERT KEABLE'S SENSATIONAL SEQUEL TO "SIMON CALLED PETER"

And Vaudeville at the the Capitol To-Day.

Robert Keable's sensational novel "Recompense," which was written as a sequel to 'Simon Called Peter,' will be the featured attraction at the Capitol Theatre, beginning today.

Mr. Keable's two books, "Simon Called Peter" and "Recompense" have become such household literature that everybody knows Peter, the Army Chaplain, and Julie, the nurse, who battle with life and their own natures with all the sincerity and intensity of two fine, courageous and high-minded hearts.

"Recompense" tells the story of Peter and Julie from the time they are brought together and then separated by war. They endure the bitter pangs of separation, each undergoing indescribable torment mentally and physically in the wilderness of South Africa. Alone they work out their individual salvation, growing cleaner and greater in the process, until circumstances bring them together again in happiness.

Warner Bros. have given "Recompense" the very best in the directorship, screen presentation, and strength of cast, judging from the names connected with the production. Harry Beaumont is the director of "Recompense," which was adapted for the screen by Dorothy Farnum. Marie Provost, Monte Blue, John Patrick, John Roche and other notables head the cast.

As a special added attraction, the Famous London Three will offer their entirely new act, "Melody and Mirth." Miss Joan Duff, Miss Dorothy Alwynne and Richard Alexander are late three principles with the London Famous Eight. They have just returned from a coast to coast trip, and have been the biggest kind of a real hit in every city.

AT THE ROYAL

AMATEUR NIGHT TO-NIGHT.

To-night, as an added attraction, another list of local talent will make their appearance at the Royal. Some new novelties will be introduced, including a real old-time country fiddler.

"ON TIME!" PRESENTS RICHARD TALMADGE IN THRILLING MELODRAMA.

Richard Talmadge, whose daredevil stunts have long thrilled moviegoers, will be seen at the Royal Theatre, commencing to-day, for an engagement of three days, in his latest and most exciting photoplay, "On Time!" The picture was made by Carlos Productions and is being released by Truart Films.

"On Time!" is an unusually fantastic story into which are woven, by turns, stunts of the most thrilling nature, melodrama that is swift-moving and filled with suspense and exciting action, and comedy of an exceptional vein that becomes uproariously funny. The theme revolves about the star, in the role of Harry Willis, a young man with nothing but a desire to make good, a justly supreme confidence in himself and a sometimes faithful valet of ebony hue, Mister Casanova Clay.

The photoplay is built about the young man's rough and bumpty road to success during which he is called upon to surmount such obstacles as a stalled train, a dice-playing valet, an unscrupulous villain who strives to sacrifice the hero's life, a band of masked marauders, an insane doctor with a penchant for transferring gorilla's brains to human beings, a den of idol-worshipping Chinamen and many other things equally as dangerous and as strange.

With his usual buoyant spirit Richard Talmadge meets these dangers, one by one, and after a fashion that will thrill audiences he overcomes them. Jumping from the top of a telegraph pole to an adjoining roof, seven stories in the air, leaping from the upper balcony of his home to the ground in a startling chase after a fleeing thief, a sensational dash in an auto going at break-neck speed, a terrific battle against overwhelming odds are but a few of this star's stunts in the curriculum that ends in success.

Supporting the athletic Richard Talmadge in "On Time!" is a cast of sterling merit. Playing opposite the star, as the female lead, is the beautiful and charming Billie Dove, star of a dozen photoplays in her own right. Stuart Holmes, George Siegman, Tom Wilson, Charles Clary and Douglas Gerard, all well-known and featured players, make up a list of principals such as is rarely seen in a single photoplay.

BOUT A SWINDLE SAY SPORT FANS

Bob Runner Committed to Stand Trial on Charge of Fraud.

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask., June 11. (Canadian Press).—Bob Runner, brother of Jack Reddick, and promoter for the Reddick-Miske bout at Swift Current last week, last night was committed to stand trial on a charge of conspiring with J. Bennie to defraud the public.

Bennie, who gave evidence against Runner, was taken into custody immediately after the preliminary hearing of Runner. Runner is held without bail.

The hearing and committal is the result of a protest by a number of sport followers of Swift Current that the bout, in their opinion, was a swindle.

NO ANTI-NATIONAL SPIRIT IN SCHOOLS

Rabbi Says Jewish Schools Take Place of Sunday Schools.

WINNIPEG, June 11. — The Jewish schools operated in Canada do not foster any anti-national spirit, but they work in co-operation with the Public schools, taking the place, in large measure, of the Sunday schools of the other denominations, stated Rabbi B. R. Brickner, of Toronto, who arrived here yesterday. Rabbi Brickner will tour the west, addressing several Canadian clubs.

The Rabbi stated that one of the things in which he was most interested was the promotion of better feeling between the Jewish and non-Jewish peoples. When Jews came to Canada they came to stay, he maintained, and were prepared to relinquish any previous nationality and to become absorbed in the new land.

SECURITY PACT TO BE MUTUAL

Chamberlain Objects to Misleading Reports of Note to Germany.

ONE-SIDED.

PARIS, June 11. (Canadian Press).—Apparently moved by the utterances of British Foreign Secretary Rt. Hon. Austen Chamberlain, the French newspapers are withholding comment on the Anglo-French security pact plan until Foreign Minister Briand returns and the terms are given out for publication.

Mr. Chamberlain, in a diplomatically worded communique, issued at Geneva yesterday, made a stinging attack on the publication of what he termed misleading statements about the proposed allied note in reply to Germany's security pact proposals.

M. Briand and he had agreed, he said, not to divulge the contents of the note until its delivery to Berlin, but one-sided and misleading accounts had appeared in print in some countries.

The chief British objection, say Geneva despatches, is that erroneous accounts failed to make clear that the proposed security pact would be mutual as to operation among the participating powers.

PENAL OFFENCE.

To Marry a Mental Deficient or an Epileptic.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., June 11. (United Press).—It will be a penal offence in New Zealand to marry any one mentally deficient or epileptic if the drastic recommendations of a Special Parliamentary Committee issued Wednesday are adopted.

The committee advocated compulsory registration of all effectives from which a defective may escape if he or she will consent to be sterilized.

HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA WITH GUN AND CAMERA

By H. A. SNOW

This Is the Picture That Thrilled New York For Three Solid Months at the Lyric Theatre

What the Foremost New York Critics Say About It

"'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera', H. A. Snow poked his camera right up under the noses of the wildest animals of the African jungle and came away with pictures of the whites of the beasts' eyes. This is an extraordinary film."—Quinn Martin, N.Y. World.

"A picture which thrilled, delighted and entertained us as much as anything in years. It is absolutely fascinating from the opening shots of over a million penguins flying into the ocean to the closeup of a giant African elephant charging into the camera. All in all, we consider this the best film entertainment in New York today."—P. W. Gallico in Daily News.

"The most complete — which means the most instructive and the most thrilling — motion picture of wild animal life ever made. The beautiful, the ugly, the swift, the ungainly — they are there, singly and in herds, at water holes and darting across plain or diving into the jungle undergrowth. Comedy is introduced to relieve the tense action."—J. O. Spearing, N. Y. Times.

COLOSSAL AMAZING

"Most satisfying pictures of wild animal life yet taken."—Don Allen, Evening World.

"More drama in a single reel than in a bale of Hollywood productions."—New York Tribune.

"BY ALL MEANS SEE THIS PICTURE AND TAKE THE CHILDREN, FOR IF YOU DON'T THEY'LL NEVER FORGIVE YOU, IF THEY FIND OUT ABOUT THIS SHOW"—DAILY NEWS.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

SUNDAY BATHING

Editor, Peterborough Examiner,
Peterborough, Ontario.
Dear Sir:

Re Bathing Beaches

In a city the size of Peterborough which suffers, as other Ontario cities do, from periods of extreme heat in summer, it is just as natural for the children to seek the water to cool their bodies as it is for the animals in the fields to go into the creeks and lakes to obtain relief.

The objection to children going to the bathing beaches on Sunday—and for that matter, the grown-up persons, too—probably arose from the fact that it was feared that this meant a carnival of high-diving, swimming, and other diversions.

I have never known such to be the case, however; that is, while the caretaker was in charge during the day.

Without questioning the motives of the members of the city council who decided to have the dressing rooms in the bathing houses locked on Sunday, let me suggest that thousands of persons in Peterborough, every summer, are relieved of the intense heat during these hot spells, by being able to use the splendid natural advantages given to Peterborough by the River Otonabee; and surely they should have that right on a stifling Sunday, providing there is no disorderly conduct.

I quite appreciate that closing up the bathing houses does not prevent every one from going in bathing; but it is so necessary for them to change their clothes, that many will probably be denied the right to enter the water to cool their bodies and give them a little comfort from the most distressing of feelings—that is the suffering that one has from intense heat.

I am taking the liberty of voicing my opinion as a ratepayer who appreciates that the members of the City Council have the right to reach a decision, and it is hardly fair to impute wrong motives to them; but I trust that, for a part of Sundays at least, the bathing houses may be open for those who are unable to go to Stoney Lake and Chemong to cool off.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

Mining Trading Quiet On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, June 11 (Canadian Press).—Trading on the standard mining exchange was fairly quiet this morning, with transactions totalling 98,040 sales. Tough Oakes featured with 15,173 shares. Opening 1 point higher maintained its strength and closed at 32 3-4. La Rose was next with 12,600 shares traded in. It opened at the close of yesterday and advanced two points, but receded a half, closing at 47 1-2. Hattie Preferred made a slight advance to 10, while Crown Reserve was also steady at 23 1-2. Barry Holly advanced two points to 49.

Wheat Prices Lower Depressed By Rains

CHICAGO, June 11 (Canadian Press). — Wheat prices averaged lower today during early dealings. Heavy rains in Canada counted somewhat as a depressing factor. Trade was chiefly in small lots, with most of pit speculators working for a decline and disposed to regard unfavorable crop conditions as having been discounted in full.

The opening, which varied from unchanged figures to 2 3-4 cents lower, July 160 to 161, and Sept. 159 1-2 to 160, was followed by a rally to 162 7-8 for July, and 160 3-4 for Sept., but then by a fresh downturn all around to well below yesterday's finish.

Corn and oats developed strength owing largely to adverse crop prospects for both oats and hay. After opening at 5-8 cent off to 3-4 cent up, Sept 116 1-2 to 117, the corn market scored good general gains, September touching 118 5-8.

Oats started at 1-8 to 1-2 cent decline, September 53 3-4 to 54 cents. Later, all months showed a material advance. Provisions were without important change.

Prices Rose Rapidly With Much Speculation

NEW YORK, June 11 (Canadian Press)—Easy credit conditions facilitated pool operations throughout the forenoon dealings in Wall Street, with traders taking advantage of the abundance of funds available or speculative and investment purposes. Influenced by the speculative possibilities of neglected issues, operators extended their activities into new fields, where they were successful in pushing prices up sharply.

American republics, long inactive was taken in hand and whirled up 11 points before noon and West Penn was given an additional six points boost. Gains of 3 to 5 points were registered by Pittsburgh Steel preferred, American and Foreign Power (25 per cent paid) and "Big Four." Western Maryland and other low priced rail shares moved up on merger rumors, while among the popular shares, American Can, Dupont and Lackawanna showed conspicuous strength. Call money renewed at 3¼ per cent.

Smelters Again Feature Trade On Toronto 'Change

TORONTO, June 11 (Canadian Press).—Consolidated Smelters was a feature of this morning's session of the Toronto tock exchange. Advancing 3 3-8 points to high for current movement of 80 7-8 on transactions totalling 460 shares. Brazilian was nother leader, but reactionary, easing off a half at 55 3-8. Canada Bread advanced a point at 124, and was prominent in trading. Other issues showed an unsteady tendency, Duluth dropping a point and Barcelona a quarter. The session was active from the point of volume of sales.

FACTS ABOUT OPTOMETRY
No One Can Tell The Condition of His Eyes

Without undergoing an examination. No one in the world can tell anything about the eyes merely by looking at them. They must be examined by instruments that detect the slightest deviation from normal. So there is very little use asking any one if his eyes are normal. He doesn't know. But our examination would tell him. Then we could correct the defects we found.

STRONG, SWIFT, SILENT ENGINE SLIPPED THROUGH PETERBORO' WITH FORTY-FOUR CARS TO-DAY

Big Feature to Residents Here is Quietness in Starting Up.

BIG SMOKE STACK.

Train of Loaded Cars Reached From Diamond to Charlotte Street.

Silence, Power, Speed. And the greatest of these, to Peterborough people, is Silence.

These are the attributes of a new type of C.N.R. locomotive that passed through Peterborough at two o'clock this afternoon, hauling forty-four car loads weighing 2,721 tons, and doing it without the coughing and snorting that usually attends the passage of a train load of grain through the city.

It's all because of an oversized smoke-stock that reminds 1925 people of the pictures they have seen of the old wood burners. Maybe there are some internal works that help too, but the smoke-stack is the thing, to the casual observer. And it can't be missed. It's a real eyefull. And as far as the residents along Bethune Street are concerned Sir Henry Thornton is at liberty to make the stacks twice as big again if it will help deaden the noise.

Quick, Quiet and Queer, is this new product of modern engineering skill. The difference in noise is most noticeable in starting up, when the usual ear-splitting racket is altogether missing. And the power is shown by the long string of cars that reached from the C.P.R.-C.N.R. diamond to Charlotte Street.

The engine was numbered 3421, and it had in the tab W. J. Fee, supervisor of locomotives, who was watching its performance. In the van was R. E. Orr, also making observations. Mr. Orr stopped off at Peterborough.

Maybe the new "superdraft" locomotive will settle an age-old objection held by residents along the track. And the next time the railway men have a desire to do something nice for the housewives of Peterborough, they might arrange a machanism to take the cinders out of the smoke—at a saving to newly-hung washing.

Each "extra" was given a number and then the winner of the car determined by drawing a number from a bowl. More extras than could be used applied.

EIGHT KILLED WHEN CHINESE MOB BRITISH

Students and Laborers in Hankow Go On Strike as Protest.

INFLAMED MOBS.

Fire Hose Fails to Quell the Attack—Machine Gun Used.

By RANDALL GOULD
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

PEKING, June 12.—Angered by the killing of eight Chinese during a mob drive against the British armoury at Hankow, students and laborers in that city to-day called a general strike. Advices from the latest scene of Chinese outbreaks reported that the students and laborers had been inflamed by the vernacular press and had finally broken forth in a riot which directed itself against the British and Japanese chiefly. Japanese shopkeepers were assaulted and their shops damaged, and the mob drove against the British volunteer army.

According to the Hankow messages those at the armoury did their utmost to frustrate the advance, at first playing a fire hose on the advancing rioters. This, however, proved ineffective and te volunteers turned theire machine guns upon the crowd, killing eight and wounding a number of others.

NAME COMMITTEES IN UNITED CHURCH

Fifteen Appointed to Undertake Preliminary Organization—To Report.

TORONTO, June 12. C. P. — Fifteen committees, varying in size from ten members to 96, were appointed by the general council of the United Church this morning to undertake the work of preliminary organization.

All committees will report later to the council.

Some of the matters which will engage the attention of the committees are the formation of Presbyteries, and the settlement and transfer of ministers and church property.

Explanation was made to the delegates of the character and scope of the various funds of the Uniting churches, which are held in trust for the aged and infirm ministers and for widows and orphans of ministers. These funds altogether total about $4,500,000 and while for the time being they will be administered separately as in the past it will be the aim of the church eventually to consolidate them under one board and to provide uniform rates of payments to beneficiaries.

Desperate Clerks Discard Their Coats in Heat Shattering Traditions Of Conventional London

LONDON, June 12 (United News).—It never happened before and it may never happen again, but it happened on Thursday. In many London offices, the clerks worked in their shirt sleeves.

This piece of unconventionalism, generally considered a most desperate measure, was brought on by the temperature, which rose to 87, the highest here in nine years. One suburban theatre has transferred its performances to an open park for the duration of the heat wave.

COMMITTEES ON ORGANIZATION UNITED CHURCH

Many Bodies Are Being Appointed to Consider Different Phases.

NO AUTHORITY

All Committees Must Report Findings Back to General Council.

TORONTO, June 12 (Canadian Press.—Feeling its way cautiously the General Council of the United Church yesterday afternoon proceeded to take steps for temporary and permanent organization. This is to be affected largely through one commission and a dozen or so committees, to which will be referred a great variety of matters which require action by this council or the next.

A commission is to be appointed, with its membership not limited to the present council, which is to consider the permanent organization of the United Church and the General Council, their boards and committees, in harmony with the basis of Union signed by the uniting denominations some years ago, and with the Federal act which brought the Union into legal being. This commission, which has not been named, is to sit when the council has concluded its sessions, and report to an adjourned meeting of the council or it successor.

"It is our conviction," said Rev. Dr. Laird, treasurer of the Presbyterian Church, in presenting the resolution, "that the whole question of permanent organization cannot be settled in a week or ten days. We are passing through a period requiring patient adjustment, and it is highly desirable that we have the best equipment possible for carrying on the administrative work of the United Church."

There is to be a committee to recommend means of carrying on the various church departments until permanent organization is completed. This committee is to be large

ASSEMBLY MEETS AND GETS RIGHT TO ITS BUSINESS

Continuing Presbyterian Church Has Many Missions to Look After.

NEW MINISTERS

Numerous Applications From Men Who Wish to Enter Ministry.

TORONTO, June 12 (Canadian Press.—Following the election at the morning session of Rev. Dr. Ephriam Scott as moderator, the General Assembly of the Continuing Presbyterian Church got straight to business yesterday afternoon. By motion passed unanimously, the Assembly was enlarged to include all ministers and one elder from each congregation of the church. Minorities because the church is continuing were regarded as congregations. Revs. Warlaw Taylor, J. W. McNamara and F. Baird were appointed Assembly clerks. A committee was appointed to recommend three men to the assembly for appointment as the representatives of the Presbyterian to the Federal Commission of nine, which is to allocate Presbyterian church property.

The Assembly received a report from the Presbyterian Church Association, in which it was stated that 746 congergations had voted against Union. There were 110,105 church members in Canada who voted against Union. Rev. Dr. A. J. McGillivray of Guelph, who was chairman of the provisional home mission committee, reported; and his report and also that of Dr. A. S. Grant on the same subject were endorsed by the Assembly. Dr. McGillivray said that while a great number of missions had followed officialdom into the United Church a great many were still Presbyterian and were presenting a problem which must be met immediately if the church was to hold its own on the frontier. Between 60 and 70 students were already at work in the Presbyterian mission. He said

NATHAN MERSON BREAKS DOWN AS HE TELLS OF HIS EFFORTS TO MEET BUSINESS LIABILITIES

Farmers Who Lay Complaint Never Had Trouble Before, They Say.

TRIAL CONTINUES.

Prior Debts Landed Partners in Low Financial Condition.

Examination of Reuben Sherman was resumed this morning at ten o'clock before Judge Huycke on the charges of having along with Nathan Merson obtained goods by false pretences and of intent to defraud creditors.

Shown a note by counsel, Sherman identified it as the one he had given to Charard and which had become due on November 4, 1924. Sherman received the note after Charard got the money. Answering Crown Attorney Hatton he did not accompany the cattle to Montreal, but he arrived there on the same day, November 2. He had not told Charard the cattle would be there. He told Charard he had not yet paid for the cattle and asked Charard to wait for his money. Charard would not wait. He agreed that he told the farmers they would be paid on delivery of the cattle. He did not write the words "payable on November 3," but they were written on the check by his instructions. He told some of the farmers he and Merson had not the money but Merson said they would pay by check. At Peterboro when he gave out the checks it was daylight. He wanted the checks to be dated ahead to give him time to get the cattle sold and get the money to pay the farmers.

Great Man For The Women And Only 113 Years Old

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., June 12.—(United Press).—Peter Thompson may be 113 years old, but he is still a great man for the women; at any rate that's the opinion of Miss Annie Thompson, his 101-year-old sister.

Thompson is being sought in connection with the $30,000 state of Margaret Sinon. His sis , one of the heirs, offered to help in the search for Thompson, and said she believed he was "playing around Toronto with some women."

She has not seen him for a quarter of a century, but, she said, "he is probably just as wild as ever."

TROOPS RUSHED TO HALT RIOTS AT C.B. MINES

Mobs Loot Stores, Wreck Power Plant and Spread Terrorism.

EXTRA POLICE.

Wash House Burned—Damage Require Three Months to Repair.

SYDNEY, C.B., June 12 (Canadian Press).—Five hundred troops who left Halifax late last night by special train are expected to arrive at the centre of yesterday's strike disturbance this afternoon and in co-operation with special police, will take control of the district which is now in a [illegible] due to excesses committed by the strikers yesterday and last night. Following an alarming day which saw one striker slain by a police bullet, and dozens on both sides wounded in a fight between the police and strikers at the New Waterford Power plant, rioting and looting broke out last night and many of the Empire Steel Corporation's stores were raided and stripped of their stock. Late in the evening the company's two stores at New Waterford, the store at Aberdeen and the store at Reserve were looted as well as a wholesale grocery store conducted by Solomon Undovin at New Waterford. During the night, the wash house at New Waterford was destroyed by fire. Attacks on other company properties were reported. The latest report from New Waterford is that the power plant has been badly wrecked by the strikers and that three months will be required to put it into commission again.

A detachment of about fifty police arrived in Sydney this morning under Captain B. Curry.

More Troops.

Officers and men of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, now encamped at Niagara-on-the-Lake, together with other details of regular forces here, are under orders to be ready to proceed to Cape Breton for duty there at short notice.

Ask Information.

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press). — Several members of Parliament will this afternoon press the Government for information regarding the summoning of troops to the Cape Breton strike area. Official advices so far received here indicate the troops were requisitioned in the usual way and have left Halifax for Sydney.

CHOIR PICNIC.

Murray Street Church Organization Has Enjoyable Event at Chemong.

Murray street Baptist church choir held its annual picnic at Dr. Morgan's cottage last night, when about fifty members and friends were present. Arriving at five o'clock the party had tea on the verandah, and afterwards indulged in baseball, games and races. Later in the evening a sing-song was held, and everyone voted the affair one of the best the choir as enjoyed.

Too late, but with the best intentions, Rev. J. R. Webb, former pastor of Murray street church, Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Miss Scott and Miss Aldridge, called at the cottage to pay their respects to the choir members.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

Effort To-day To Save Life of Russell Scott, to Hang.

CHICAGO, June 12. — Canadian Press. — A new effort was to be started before the Supreme Court late to-day to save Russel Scott, the former Toronto promoter, from the gallows.

Attorney C. P. MacAuley departed for Springfield to-day to file another petition for a writ of error, saying the execution of Scott set for July 17th, upon his conviction of the murder during a hold up of Joseph Maurer, a drug clerk.

Several weeks ago the Supreme Court denied a similar petition without hearing arguments.

Scott's wife recently came here to find work to support herself and to pay for the children's board in a Canadian institution, and so that she might occasionally visit him in jail.

SHERMAN CAN PAY FIFTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR, HE STATES IN WITNESS BOX WHILE ON TRIAL

Brother-in-Law in Montreal Has Advanced Him $1,500 for Purpose.

MORE WITNESSES

Prosecution Questioned Balance of Its Witnesses During Afternoon.

The trial of Nathan Merson and Reuben Sherman on charges of obtaining goods by false pretenses and conspiracy to defraud continued yesterday afternoon before His Honor Judge Huycke and jury in the mid-summer Sessions of the Peace. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton continued his examination of witnesses, farmers from this district who say they did not receive payment for cattle transferred to the two accused. Joseph Wearing and W. F. Huycke are appearing for the accused.

After the witnesses for the prosecution had been heard, Sherman was called to the stand. He said he had obtained an advance of money from his brother-in-law and was prepared to pay 50 cents on the dollar.

James Healey.

James Healy, son of Mortimer Healy, who gave evidence earlier in the day was called to the witness stand. He said he took no part in the making of the bargain. His share in the transaction was merely that of delivering the cow. On Merson turning over a bundle of checks, Healy junior pointed out the one bearing his father's name. Beyond observing a mistake in the spelling of the surname he saw nothing unusual in the check.

Leo Connolley.

Leo Connolley, Ennismore, last saw Sherman and Merson on the evening of October 28, said he. He saw them again on November 1 when he delivered the cattle he had sold. The check was given to his brother who handed it to witness. He took the check to the bank on Tuesday, November 4. Sherman later called and gave him a note saying it would look better than a check, as they were up against it for money.

J. W. Tulley.

On the last day of October, J. W. Tulley, Smith, sold a cow and a calf. He would have liked the money there and then, but was told he would receive a check and the money would be in the bank all right. It was rather difficult to

SAW DOWN LIMB TO CATCH BEAR

One of New Nicholls Oval Pets Gains Temporary Freedom.

TO MAKE CAGE.

Some excitement prevailed at Nicholls' Oval last night, about 6 o'clock, when a 9-weeks'-old male bear cub, one of two kept at the Oval, found itself at liberty through the loosening of the snap of the chain, which bound it to a stake driven into the ground.

For over an hour the cub eluded recapture by taking refuge in the topmost limb of a lofty elm, from which all efforts to dislodge it by shaking the branches were unavailing.

Finally two De Laval employees climbed the tree and cut away the branches supporting Master Bruin, who fell to the ground, ignominiously entangled among the foliage and branches. He was promptly seized and thrust into an enclosure.

It is the intention of those responsible for the care of the young bears and raccoons to have special cages made for their comfort and guarding.

VETERANS SENT AID TO STRIKING MINERS

One Unit Sent More Than $900 in Cash, Besides Clothing.

OTTAWA, June 12.— (Canadian Press.)— More than $900.00 in cash in addition to more than $2,000.00 in cash and large quantities of food and clothing from the Quebec unit, with the assistance of private contributions, has been forwarded to the Nova Scotia miners by the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, it is announced here by Capt. Harry Colbourne. Montreal unit sent $500, Halifax $135, Winnipeg $100, South Vancouver $50, and Victoria and Ladysmith, B.C., $25 each.

POSTPONE ADOPTION OF SUBSIDY PLANS

Committee's Report Asks Further Investigation of Conference Books.

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—Although the Ocean Rates Committee does not specifically recommend the abandonment of the subsidy to Sir William Petersen, that is the net result as the report is interpreted in political circles.

The probability is that the bill granting the subsidy will either be dropped or allowed to remain on the order paper, unpassed.

When the bill was before the House, Premier King emphasized that the putting into effect of the contract was dependent on the approval of Parliament and with a view to investigation, the contract was referred to a special committee.

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—The postponement at least of the adoption of the Dominion Government's proposed contract for subsidizing Sir William Petersen's line of steamers is probably as a result of the report of the special committee of the House which has been investigating the proposition for the past few weeks. The committee made a report to the Commons this afternoon. The committee recommends that the examination into the books of the Shipping Conference lines be continued in Britain and elsewhere, to determine whether the rates now charged by the Conference are excessive. It is also recommended that similar examination be made into Petersen books and plans, that tests be made with respect to Petersen ships and an accounting made of their expenses, operating costs, etc. It is expected that the report of the committee will provoke considerable discussion in the House.

FEZ, French Morocco, June 12. M. Painleve and Marshal Lyautey talked of battle planes until such a late hour that the Premier had hardly closed his eyes in sleep before he was awakaned to go to the front. He will spend the entire day along the battle lines, returning to Fez late to-night.

SYDNEY, Australia, June 12. — (Canadian Press Cable Via Reuters.)— Final returns in the New South Wales elections gives the Labor party a majority of two seats. Get the Habit of Phoning 275

To draw a crowd, all one has to do is to start a row. People will come from far and near to see who gets the worst of it, and woe betide that party.

One day I was sitting in a woodland glade, watching the various birds going about their business of destroying bugs, worms and insects, when a warning note told me that a hairy woodpecker was about to enter the little clearing.

You know, a hairy woodpecker is about the size of a robin, in body, possibly a tiny bit smaller, but in any case, a woodpecker of respectable size. He is boss of the situation, for the other birds of ordinary size usually give him ground.

This hairy woodpecker had his wife along. They had hardly entered the glade when they noticed a red squirrel coming out of a newly-made hole. Now, I don't swear that the hole was theirs, but it must have been their newly-made nest, for they accepted his presence there, as a challenge.

It was speaking about hair, that made me think of this story. The hair distinctly did fly. The red squirrel is a thief and a bird's nest robber, and he may have been eating their eggs. If he had a feed of woodpecker eggs, he paid for them at top prices.

The female hairy would fly at him with a wicked swoop or dash, which seemed to be a feint, to confuse the squirrel, for I noticed that the birds worked with a wicked teamlike action. I thought it was very funny at first, but was soon sitting up, taking notice, for the birds meant business. The female would make the fake attack and the squirrel was fast in recovering but not fast enough to avoid the attack of the male woodpecker, who crippled him in the left hind leg and removed skin and hair at times. The squirrel was beaten to a finish but got away.

When I looked about, I had to laugh. Almost every point of vantage was occupied by some bird or animal, interested in the fight. The hairy woodpecker is black and white. The male has a red spot on his head.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 12. (Canadian Press). — All Canadian motorists must show their license cards when entering United States by local bridges, according to the new regulations which went into effect here yesterday. MY EUROPEAN EXCURSIONS
By Elwin Robert Petre

THE LAND OF THE DONS

I am now in London; twenty-four hours ago I was in Spain, the land of the Dons—so quick will the modern Pegasus transport one. After every visit to Spain I feel like quoting Byron's words of it—"It is a goodly sight to see what Heaven hath done for this delicious land." This time I was much in Toledo, overhanging the Tagus. It is very much today as the Moors left it centuries ago. When you pass through its gate and find your way amid the network of cobbled alleys, encountering lumbering ox waggons, it is easy to imagine oneself back in the Middle Ages. It is one of the oldest cities of Europe. Toledo, Ohio, has a population ten times as large as its Spanish godfather, but has it the lovely tower of Santo Tome, or the medieval bridge of San Martin or the ancient gate Puerta del Sol? I trow not.

The Spaniards are among the most kindly and hospitable people in the world, and are always ready to offer assistance to a foreigner. Every man considers himself a gentleman, and if this is borne in mind the humblest worker will be found as courteous and well-mannered as the highest grandee in the land. Stories of the quick-flashing stiletto and the hot-tempered Southern spirit, so dear to the novelist and the dramatist, make up in picturesqueness what they lack in truth.

THE COUNTRY WITHOUT ANY SEA

The one thing lacking in Switzerland is the one thing lacking in heaven according to the Bible—the sea. But it possesses numerous lakes—the lake of Geneva, with its immense glistening surface; the lake of Neuchatel, with its vast horizons; that of Zurich, with its girdle of green rills; the lakes of the Berness Oberland, whose banks are both wild and smiling; the celebrated lake of the Four Cantons and the warm, sheltered Italo-Swiss lakes.

The mountain railroads of Switzerland, reputed as the best in the world, are, in most cases, masterpieces of bold engineering. They convey travelers gently and with complete security to the mountain tops (above the very glaciers themselves) where they can enjoy the incomparable delights of mountaineering without fatigue; and on its little inland oceans regular steamer services bring you in touch with the lovely shore resorts that you have seen from the mountain tops.

SOMETHING NEW.

Permanent Hot Water Bag Will Prove Popular and Lasting.

A device that enchained the attention of a crowd in a local drug store the other day was a new idea in hot water bags. Encased in a small rubber covering, a very ingenious compound that is composed of some sort of secret chemical preparation, is ready at any moment to provide a heat that is said to last for thirty-six hours without abatement. The exact temperature is decided by the amount of friction applied by the hands to the mass inside the casing. The preparation, it is claimed, will last without renewal for two and one-half years, and the contrivance can be retailed at a moderate sum. The "Presto" pad is the name of this interesting discovery.

WAS BIGGEST STADIUM.

ROME, June 11.—Excavation of the Circus Maximus of the Caesars, the greatest sport stadium ever built, soon will be started.

It is said to have had a seating capacity of 350,000, or nearly four times as many as the Yale bowl, It was three times as large as the Coliseum. The huge stadium was 2,200 feet long and elliptical in shape.

SENATE PASSED TRADE TREATIES

Senators Declare That They Are Eating Into Protection.

RECIPROCITY

OTTAWA, June 12 (Canadian Press)—Third reading was given in the Senate yesterday to bills providing for trade treaties with Finland and the Netherlands.

Senator Smith declared that such treaties ate into the principle of protection; he held that this country had no positive policy as to protection, free trade or revenue tariff. Canada required protection in order to sustain herself. He would put Canadian industry on an equal footing with its strongest industry and to this end would have a board of experts to advise on the tariff. The fruit growing industry was sufferng especially from want of protection

Senator Beaubien declared that the trade treaties being made by the government were a roundabout way of reducing the tariff. The result would soon be that all countries would have the privileges of the most favored nation provision which was originally intended to apply to France.

Senator Dandurand, replying, asserted that Canada secured reciprocal advantages under the treaties and would benefit greatly by them.

SHERMAN CAN PAY FIFTY CENTS

read the check as it was dark when he received it on November 1. He could not get the check cashed. He expected to get a check which would be honored immediately he presented it at the bank. All previous business with Sherman and Merson was carried out satisfactorily.

J. Christie.

J. Christie, Asphodel, assisted his brother in the delivery of the cattle they sold to Sherman and Merson. He did not receive the check. It was given to his brother. He never heard any complaint before about defendants.

Richard Sheenan.

A small debt of two dollars lying over from a previous deal caused Richard Sheenan to accost Sherman and Merson when he met them on the road. They agreed to pay him his money at the same time initiating business which led to a further purchase of three lambs from Sheenan. His hired man delivered the lambs and received a check for $35. Merson later got him to take a note, telling him his acceptance of it would enhance defendants' credit at the bank. Merson said they had not been able to get the cattle sold and intended to hold them over for a week. Merson assured witness that he would get the money when the note fell due. He had not yet got any more from them.

F. S. Armstrong.

F. S. Armstrong, Otonabee, received in return for his cattle a post-dated check, he said. He had consented to this arrangement beforehand. But when he presented the check at the bank he learned there were no funds available. Several days afterwards Sherman, Jr., came to him and gave him a note explaining that the firm had struck a bad patch on the market. He kept the note, but left the check at the bank asking that the amount be credited to him when the money came in. He had had fairly extensive dealings with defendants in the past. He had once before received a check dated ahead but had never failed to get his money until the present case.

John Crane.

The fluctuations of defendant's account with the Dominion Bank were traced by the manager, John Crane. Merson has had business with the bank for three years and has had an account cojointly with Sherman for the past year. At the end of September, 1924, they had a credit balance of $1,632. This became a debit of $734.42 on October 1. By October 31 this debit was reduced to $373.61. On November 5, when the account showed a debit of $420.11, Merson accompanied by a young man, whom witness afterwards discovered to be Sherman's son, called at the bank and deposited $3,795.60. Immediately afterwards they presented simultaneously two checks drawn on Sherman and Merson, each for $1,707.75. Answering Crown Attorney Hatton witness said they had every right to have the deposit credited. He did not think the checks that were deposited needed to have been brought to Peterboro, but he considered this might have been done in order that Merson might endorse them. Answering Mr. Wearing he said there was nothing to hinder them from drawing their account from the bank and leaving the country. He saw nothing to indicate that they were going out of the cattle buying business. He believed many cattle dealers were men of small capital. He could not recall other instances of cattle buyers being unable to meet their creditors, but he knew it could happen in this and every other business.

The ledger clerk, of the Dominion Bank ,a young lady took the stand and confirmed the entries.

J. Goodfellow.

J. Goodfellow, North Monaghan, said he was part owner of the cow which his brother sold to defendants. He and his brother brought the cow into Peterboro where they formed part of a group of about 18 farmers who received checks from the dealers on November 1. Not until the following day, when he examined the check, which was for $75 did he notice the words, payable on November 3. When he took the check to the bank it was returned to him and he was told "no funds." He saw Sherman who offered him a note, saying that they were in financial difficulties through failing to sell all the cattle and wished to avoid a bad impression that would be created by the appearance of so many dishonored checks at the bank. He took it that the dealers were desirous of continuing in business and of paying the money they owed to him and his brother.

John Calder.

John Calder, Indian River, on October 28, sold a cow and five calves. Nothing was said as to payment, but he thought he would get paid at the station. The calves were weighed but the cow was sold by the dollar. When Sherman and Merson came in the evening a crowd of farmers gathered around the car to get their checks. He saw only the amount and the name and did not observe that the check was dated three days ahead until eleven o'clock that night. He put the check into the Union Bank at Norwood. He did not think he would have accepted the check had he noticed it was marked payable on November 3. He sold cattle on four previous occasions and had always been satisfied until the last. Answering Mr. Huycke he said he did not go to the banks until the second Monday after receiving the check so the fact that it was not payable until November 3 would not have had any great effect.

J. O .Collins.

J. O. Collins delivered his cattle at 5 o'clock and waited until 8 p.m. until the arrival of the dealers. He did not get his check cashed. When the note was no good either. Eventually, however, he was persuaded to accept the note. He had dealt with defendants before and had been paid in cash on these occasions. When he sent his check to Peterboro and did not get it cashed he did not like it very well.

A number of witnesses called at this time failed to respond.

Luke Nelson.

Luke Nelson, Otonabee, knew nothing either for or against defendants until the present case. All he knew was that they had given him a check for $25 for two calves which he had been unable to cash.

This concluded the examination of witnesses for the prosecution.

Reuben Sherman.

Reuben Sherman on the witness stand stated he had been in business as a cattle dealer for a year. When he entered into partnership with Merson, the assets of the firm were $3,800 of which $3,000 was represented by 40 head of cattle. He had borrowed from his brother-in-law, L. Charard $1,650 at 7 per cent for six month, for which he gave a note. In partnership with Merson he had transacted a large amount of business. They bought on an average, one to three car loads per week. He identified as his, the signature on a number of checks shown him by counsel. He described his movements on November 1 as he journeyed through the districts where he superintended the shipment of cattle. Questioned by Crown Attorney Hatton he recollected telling Mr. Duffy that he could take the cattle back if he did not like the idea of taking a check. He returned to Montreal on Sunday, November 2. The note he had given Charard, his brother-in-law, had become due. Charard met him in the West End Market and threatened to hold up the cattle if his demands were not met. Sherman stated that he sent Merston back to Peterboro to see all the farmers and persuade them to take notes. He was still trying to raise money when he was arrested. His brother-in-law had since advanced him $1500 and he was prepared to pay 50 cents to the dollar.

Further questioning of Sherman by Crown Attorney Hatton disclosed the origin of Merson's share in the firm's assets. Merson, he stated, also secured $1,650 on a note at 7 per cent for six months. Sherman backed Merson's note. On November 3 each of the partners paid $1,707.75, the full amounts due with the interest. The money was the proceeds from the sale of the cattle they had bought from the farmers. He received over $3,700 in checks and cash, the proceeds of the sale, less the commissioners' charges. He sent this money to Peterboro.

that for a time it would be necessary that elders take services in some places and contended that the first duty of the Assembly was to the minority groups throughout the Dominions in getting them pulpit supply

Dr. Grant said that the students who had worked so faithfully had been promised that the Presbyterian Church would look after them. "I am satisfied we can secure men and the means for these missions," he said, "but we must have a definite budget fixed so that we will know the situaiton clearly. "I think it will be a good thing if we put all the missions under one board. We must not multiply the machinery of the church nor have too many officials. The women ought to be on the mission board." All suggestions by Drs. McGillivray and Grant were adopted.

Rev. Dr. Clay of Victoria, B.C., moved that a committee be appointed to consider the qualifications and standing of outside ministers who were applying for service in the Presbyterian Church in Canada. "We cannot allow any lowering of the qualifications for the pulpit and I believe we should safeguard it by every means," he said.

Rev. H. Hyde, North Vancouver, said they should see that all were good Presbyterian ministers "without mental reservations."

Rev. Dr. Wylie of Ottawa objected to a committee passing upon the qualifications of incoming ministers, and thought their applications should go through the regular chan-budget fixed so that we will know point was not settled and discussion on it was adjourned until this morning after it had been explained that there were dozens of outsiders applying for work in the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

COMPLETE AUDIT

system in every Department of the Government, and believed that all accounting should be taken over by the Finance Department, which would have a representative in each of the other Departments, making daily entries and performing similar work.

E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) asked if the audit proposed by Sir Henry would be independent.

Sir Henry replied that it would certainly be independent in the sense that Mr. Garland intended, even though it would be performed by Government employees. The audit staff would be quite distinct from the ordinary Departmental staffs.

Mr. Robb informed the committee that a system had been adopted in connection with overseas branches of the Government, whereby High Commissioner Larkin now exercised control over all expenses

Mr. Garland remarked that at one time, there must have been a rather loose system of checking up the various Departments. He referred to defalcations which had taken place since he had become a member of Parliament. He hoped that there was now an efficient and strict system for checking up the various Departments.

Mr. Robb said that his officials informed him that there was almost no chance of irregularities such as Mr. Garland referred to taking place under the present system. He pointed out, however, that it was impossible to make a man honest if he was dishonest.

Mr. Garland pointed out that in Canada there were 36 officials of the Government holding the rank of deputies and drawing salaries as such. The yearly salaries of those actually holding that rank totalled $173,000; while those holding equivalent rank received a total of $104,000 annually, making a grand total of $277,000 In the United States, however, there were only 21 officials of the American Government who were paid at a Deputy Minister's rank and the total amount paid to them per year was $157,000. He hoped that the Acting Minister of Finance would bear this in mind and that no further officials in Canada would be advanced to the rank of Deputy Minister for salary purposes.

Items totalling $998,050 carried.

THE NEW WAY.

The fact that a motor bus owned by the Toronto Transportation Commission made the run from Toronto to Montreal in a little over 14 hours running time, indicates that before long the steam railways will find the gasoline-propelled vehicles on the highways very serious competitors even for long trips.

Indeed that situation is already arriving.

The improved roadways and the improved bus have arrived together.

Big, roomy, comfortable, smooth riding cars, capable of railway speed if considered necessary and carrying twenty-five or more passengers, are increasing in numbers on Ontario's roads, and there is no reason to doubt that in the summer at least much of the travelling will be done in these conveyances in preference to the railways.

Even now the motor buses in service on the Kingston highway are cutting into the receipts of the railway, and the new method of transportation is just in its infancy.

Constant improvements are being made in the vehicles themselves, and when the Provincial highway is paved from Toronto to the Quebec boundary the popularity of travel by motor bus will undoubtedly increase by leaps and bounds.

TONIGHT'S MEETING.

Tonight's meeting of the City Council will afford the Aldermen a chance to deal with the question of Sunday bathing and Sunday band concerts, and the Examiner hopes that the city fathers will take this opportunity of readjusting a decision that is unpopular with the majority of the citizens.

The Examiner has said a lot about this matter because it feels that it is of importance to many people, and because it realizes that there is a very strong sentiment throughout the city that the action of the Council, particularly in regard to Sunday bathing, reacts unfairly on citizens who are not possessed of motor cars or summer homes, and who are thus denied the privilege available to many others of a cooling dip on Sundays.

As to band concerts, it should be possible to alter the schedule to provide for a number of concerts for Sunday evenings during the summer.

The popularity of Sunday concerts has been so thoroughly demonstrated in other seasons that there should be no hesitation about making arrangements to have some of the city's musical organizations heard on Sunday.

The Examiner hopes that the protest it has felt constrained to make in this controversy will be accepted by the City Council in the spirit in which it has been made, and that tonight some action will be taken to set the matter more in joint with public opinion.

SEEING CANADA.

Of all classes of Canada's population there is none that should have such a thorough knowledge of their own country than the members of the teaching profession, and the opportunity that is afforded by the trans-Canada tour, arranged by Dean Laird of MacDonald College in co-operation with the Canadian Pacific Railway, is, therefore, of great importance to teachers generally.

Our teachers should have a first-hand acquaintance with their own country and not content themselves with knowing their own immediate district, but often, of course, the expense of long trips makes it impossible for many teachers to gain the knowledge that would be of so much benefit to them and to those over whose education they preside.

The Laird tour, offering a chance to travel in a specially organized party with every arrangement made for the comfort of the members and thorough preparations made to allow them to see Canada to best advantage at a cost that would not be possible in the case of individuals, provides a unique opportunity that Ontario teachers would do well to investigate.

It appeals to the Examiner as a splendid chance for them to gain that personal knowledge of their native country that should be an essential of their education.

The itinerary of the Laird tour shows that nothing has been neglected.

A special train of sleeping cars will leave Toronto on July 20, visiting Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise and Vancouver, from which city the party is to go to Victoria via steamer.

Returning the teachers will go via the Okanagan Valley, Nelson, the Kootenary Lakes and Windermere Bungalow Camp, from which place they will be motored to Banff, 104 miles, over the newly completed Banff-Winidermere highway, with stops at Radium Hot Springs, Vermilion River and Storm Mountain Bungalow Camps.

Then after another day at Banff, they will visit Edmonton, Saskatoon and the Devil's Gap Bungalow Camp, near Kenora on the Lake of the Woods.

They will then take steamer from Port William to Port McNicholl and return to Toronto by rail.

As Sir Arthur Currie expresses it, "all those who take in this trip will not only be better Canadians but better teachers for the visit to the West."

EFFICIENCY.

President Coolidge favors the appointment of an official who will take charge of all purchasing for the United States Government. This policy has long been followed by big corporations with gratifying results and there is no reason why it should not be equally successful if applied to the administration of national affairs.

No doubt the United States will benefit greatly from the change, and so would Canada if any Government had the courage to countenance such a radical departure from the beaten track. If there ever was a young country with free-spending proclivities it is Canada. Vast sums of money have been spent in the past, are being spent at present and will doubtless be spent in the future, on public works that are not of vital necessity. Great canals have been built at enormous expense—canals whose waters are untroubled by the passing of any craft more important than a pleasure launch. Useless railway lines have been constructed, unnecessary public buildings erected and money has been lavished in all directions with a dreadful prodigality. Sometimes when thoughtful Canadians look back over the performances of administrations past and present they find themselves wondering how the Dominion manages to remain solvent.

It is a safe guess that the United States does not need a purchasing comptroller half so badly as her young neighbor What is required at Ottawa is an official of the kind proposed by President Coolidge —an official whose powers would be widespread and whose position would be as impregnable as that of the Auditor-General. We are not likely to get such an official under our present system of government, however. With a commission-manager administration, such as the Star has been suggesting in a series of articles recently, there would be no doubt as to the appointment of an official of the kind referred to by the American chief executive. Such a move would be made because such a move would be good business for the country. Many changes of this kind would be registered and just such changes would justify a change in our form of government. We would be substituting business for politics, efficiency for inefficiency, results for lack of them, wise economy for senseless extravagance. A commission-manager system would not tolerate the overlapping of departments we now find in Ottawa. A commission-manager system would not permit the Canadian National drain to proceed year after year without taking steps to eliminate it in just the same way that the manager of a private business would proceed to dispose of a department that was not only failing to pay its way but actually endangering the future of the entire enterprise.—Border Cities Star.

BRITAIN'S PLACE.

Great Britain has committed herself, in promise, to intervention in European affairs. In a proposed four-power pact with France, Germany and Belgium, Britain will pledge herself to throw her whole fighting force into the fray if the Rhine frontier is violated as drawn by the Versailles Treaty. The pact is of mutual assistance, and therefore guards the Rhine from invasion by both sides. Thus it is conceivable that Britain and Germany might be aligned on one side, and France and Belgium on the other.

The significant thing is that Great Britain has recognized, and acted on, the principle that she must lead in preserving world peace. Central Europe is the question mark of the world at present, and probably will continue to be so. Britain aims to protect the western half of Europe, and incidentally, her own channels of trade, from war.

So far so good. It looks like an admirable arrangement. But there is another clause which says that France will guarantee the execution of any arbitration decision resulting from proposed treaties among Germany, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. In other words, if Germany and Austria, for instance, effect an economical union, and decide they want a political union, so they can extend their border, France is committed to war on behalf of her allies, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. That, in itself, does not involve Britain, which is pledged only as regards the western frontier of Germany. But in time of war, war-like things are done, and if it suits either party to transport provisions or troops across the Rhineland, that will be done, and all the pacts between here and Kingdom Come will not stop them.

Thus, the very pact that was designed to localize trouble, would prove a boomerang, and because of its very rigidity, force a theoretical eastern boundary dispute into the western theatre. The making of another world war is immediately provided.

There is a hopeful phase of it, however, and that is insistence that Germany, if she becomes party to the security pact, shall also become an unqualified member of the League of Nations. In this way, one safety pact caps another.

But the ominous part of it, for all that, is the fact that it bottles Germany in between two corridors, the Rhineland on the one side, and the Polish corridor on the other. Jealous interests are watching over both. The proposed security pact is a magnificent effort to regulate those jealousies, but it makes no provision for Germany's inevitable expansion. What will come then is just as much a problem as it was in the palmy days before 1914. In Europe's present temper, the security pact, if negotiated as sketched in news dispatches, would probably be useful just so long as there was no need for it.

But the suggested agreement is a much happier arrangement than the first protocol which was so deservedly scrapped, and which would have called the British navy out for police and job work over the seven seas, or wherever any nation chose to be recalcitrant. It is just twice as secure in appearance as that protocol, for it is a triple guarantee in itself, and over it all is the unified guarantee of the League of Nations. It makes Britain definitely a European state, in a military sense, and it draws a line right through the world, with the Anglo-Saxons, Teutons and Latins of Europe on one hand, and the Americans on the other. To be quite brutally frank, it should provide a self-sustaining war machine, if the worst comes to the worst. In theory, if not in practice, it could carry on without the western hemisphere.

In a constructive sense, and under reasonable circumstances, it may prove to be the most courageous thing Great Britain has done in her indomitable history.—Border Cities Star.

BRITAIN'S BILL FOR FOOD £1,700,00,000

Royal Commission Concludes Investigation Into Prices of Staples.

The national expenditure of Great Britain on food, drink and tobacco is estimated to be in the neighborhood of £1,700,000,000 by the Royal Commission of Food prices, which was appointed in November last and has just completed a very elaborate report on prices of bread, flour, wheat and meat in Great Britain, according to advices received by Bankers Trust Company of New York from its British Information Service. This committee attributes the rise of prices in Great Britain to the fact that the value of gold has fallen about 40% since 1913 owing to the substitution of paper money in European countries, an accumulation of gold in the United States and also an increase in bank deposits. They do not think that other explanations of the general rise in prices, such as the increased taxation, increased wages, transportation charges, trade disputes and increases of rent and rates are adequate. They feel that the recent rise in staple food prices is the reaction from a serious depression in agricultural prices in 1921-23. They find there is a wide dispersion of the profits in the turn over of retail food trade, and that the retail profit on turn over is highest in bread and confectionery. They do not find that those engaged in the production and distribution of food as a class, are taking any undue advantage of the public.

They make no constructive recommendations, except to suggest that a food council be established to maintain a continued supervision over staple food trade.

MY ROAD.

If I could find a little road,
A happy little, winding road
Away up in the hills,
With hemlock trees o'ershadowing it,
And flecks of sunlight gladdening it,
And clear, brown, chuckling rills,
I'd give my very life to it,
The joyous, luring thrill of it,
Clean swept with fragrant air,
I'd break my bread with humble souls
My creed the gypsy's glowing coals,
The evening star my prayer.

ACROSS CANADA AND BACK.

The wonder trip of the coming summer will be conducted by Dean Laird of MacDonald College, to Victoria, B.C., and back.

Inspired by the success of the trip to Victoria last year on the occasion of the Teachers Federation meeting at that point, and filled with patriotic motives for everyone to see their own country, the Dean has arranged for a special train of standard sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 20, visiting Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver thence steamer to Victoria.

Returning, the trip will be via the Okanagan Valley, Nelson, the Kootenay Lakes, Windermere Bungalow camps from which place the party will be motored to Banff, 104 miles over the newly completed Banff-Windermere Highway, the most charming and awe-inspiring trip it is possible to conceive, with stops at Radium Hot Springs, Vermilion River, and Storm Mountain Bungalow Camps—another day at Banff, then Edmonton, Saskatoon, Devil's Gap Bungalow Camp, near Kenora on the Lake Of The Woods, steamer from Fort William to Port McNicholl, thence rail to Toronto, where the trip will terminate on August 10.

Everything is included at the price of $325.00 from Toronto; transportation, sleeping cars, accomtation in hotels and bungalow camps, meals in diners, hotels, and on steamers, sightseeing tours at points visited, and all gratuities.

While appealing primarily to teachers, the tour is open to everyone desiring to go.

All will be welcome.

TORONTO CATTLE

Nearly 1,700 cattle were sold at the Union Stock Yards on Wednesday, but this still left over 1,300 on hand, and these will certainly not be all sold today. For today no cattle were fortunately sent in and the receipts were 8 cars, 207 calves, 239 hogs and 19 sheep and lambs. Wednesday's cooler weather aided the marketing on butchers' cattle, but the abattoirs bought sparingly even on the price decline of 25 to 50 cents a cwt. The market was not surfeited with butchers' cows and the price drop in these scarcely reached as much as 15 cents a cwt.

Rogers & Maybee, who have two boats to load next week, are making a clean-up of any steers good enough for export at a discount of 50 cents a cwt. They have now 250 on hand for next week and will want 1,000 to 1,100 to fill up. The market for butchers' cattle was very draggy again today and any buyers were mainly prompted by the idea that this week's slump will make for a light run next week. Four loads of export steers were bought from $7.35 to $7.75 a cwt., and some heavy bulls at $4.50 to $5. These latter were down 25 cents a cwt. Eddie Parsons bought a load of 850-lb. stockers at $5.75 a cwt.

Calves are about steady at the decline. A few good calves sold at 8 cents, mediums 6 1-2 to 7 cents, and common calves at 4 1-2 cents a pound.

The few lambs and sheep for sale today were marketed at steady prices. Choice light sheep sold from 6 1-2 to 7 1-2 cents and good lambs at 16 1-2 cents a pound.

Hogs are holding at $11.75 a cwt. f.o.b., but the price is uncertain. Competitive buying at country points is the only thing that prevents the packers from lowering prices here.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, June 12 (Canadian Press).—The cooler weather will probably have a beneficial effect upon consumption. Receipts are reported to be showing further signs of falling off and quality on many markets is not so good. Prices continue firm. Two further cars of Western poultry have arrived at Montreal on consignment.

Toronto — Extras, jobbing, 36, firsts 34, seconds 30.

Montreal—Eggs firm and unchanged. Good demand for chickens, prices ranging from 25 to 36; storage fowl not selling so well. A carload of fowl on spot was offering at prices ranging from 20 to 27 cents per pound.

Western Markets—Unchanged.

New Brunswick—Country points, firsts 25, jobbing extras 33, firsts 28, seconds 25.

Chicago—Spot 30, June storage packed 30 5-8, December refrigerators 34 5-8.

New York—Extra firsts 33 1-4, firsts 32 1-4, extra firsts, storage packed 34 1-4, firsts 33 1-4, December refrigerators 36.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 12 (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday showed an improvement and especially so from the Continent for Canadian Western oats and as the prices bid were in line with exporters' views in the early part of the day a number of the orders were accepted and a fairly active business was transacted.

According to advices received here, one of the largest Western mills reported that they had made sales of Spring wheat flour to the Orient, which will keep them grinding until the middle of July, while on the other hand millers here in most cases stated that business in all directions was still quiet and that the few orders coming forward from foreign sources were principally for small lots. The trade for domestic and country account was also of a limited charected and prices were unchanged.

The market for winter wheat flour was without any new feature to note, the demand being still low, but prices were steady.

A moderate amount of business was done in baled hay and the tone of the market was steady with sales of good No. 2 timothy hay at $14 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton f.o.b. cars here.

Owing to the cooler weather prevailing there was an improved demand from grocers and other dealers for small lots of eggs and the market was rather more active, but as supplies were ample to meet all requirements there was no change in prices to note.

The receipts were 2,104 cases, as against 2,112 for the same day last week, and 4,260 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of butter were 5,282 packages, as against 495 for the same day last week, and 5,706 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no actual change in prices to note, but the undertone to the market was strong in sympathy with the continued strength in the cheese situation and the improved enquiry from American buyers for supplies which it is reported has resulted in a fair amount of business. There was also a better demand from local buyers and on the whole the market was more active.

The receipts were 3,760 boxes, as compared with 3,760 for the same day last week, and 6,650 for the corresponding day a year ago. A feature of the trade was the increased demand from English importers for supplies and as cables were stronger at a good advance, in some cases a fair amount of business resulted with sales in some cases as high as 94s 6d per cwt. There was also a better demand from spot buyers and the tone of the market was stronger at an advance of 1-8c to 1-4c per lb. The prospects are that prices will go still higher in the near future owing to the continued strength at the boards in the country.

Beans were unchanged at $2.70 per bushel.

KINGSTON CHEESE BOARD

KINGSTON, June 12.—The offerings on the board were 152 boxes and all sold at 19 7-16c per lb. which shows an advance of 1 11-16c per lb., as compared with a week ago and 3 1-16c per lb. with the same date last year when 335 boxes sold at 16 3-8c per lb.

SUPERTWIST BACK OF GOODYEAR MILEAGE

THE ever-increasing mileage which users report from all Goodyear Cord Tires—balloon and other sizes—is due in large measure to the amazing qualities of the exclusive, new, Goodyear cord fabric, SUPERTWIST.

SUPERTWIST is but one more in the long line of Goodyear achievements in tire construction. It is another evidence of what world-wide buying and selling in the tire industry means—greater opportunities for tire improvements, wider experience, lower costs. The Goodyear fabric mills where SUPERTWIST was developed are made possible only by world-wide Goodyear sales.

SUPERTWIST'S great virtue is its ability to outstretch other cord fabrics—to stand more punishment without breaking or weakening. Developed specially for Goodyear Balloons, it is now used in all Goodyear Cords—and only in Goodyears.

The Goodyear Selected Dealer has tires of SUPERTWIST in stock.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

FINANCE NEEDS QUALIFIED ECONOMIST, SAYS W. C. GOOD

Is Casting No Reflection on Integrity of Present Deputy.

KNOWLEDGE WANTED

Mr. Meighen Would Like to Know Something About Australian Agreement.

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—In discussing items to provide $80,000 for expenses in connection with negotiations of treaties, and unforeseen expenses of the Department of Finance, W. C. Good (Progressive, Brant) pointed out to the Minister of Finance what he claimed was the urgent need for a thoroughly qualified economist in the position of Deputy Minister of Finance. He did not wish to attack in any way the integrity of the present Deputy Minister, but stated that as a man who had been in the office for many years, he was probably out of touch with the very recent tendencies in modern finance.

Replying, Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, admitted that he himself was not as good a farmer or financier as Mr. Good, but he was satisfied that the present Deputy Minister was an excellent officer, and hoped he would remain many years in office. Already his resignation had been refused on more than one occasion.

In discussion of the estimate for expenses connected with treaties, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, pointed out that everyone seemed to have the right to know all about the "alleged treaty" between Canada and Australia, except the Canadian Parliament. Parliament was not even permitted to know what the mission of the trade commissioner to Australia consisted of. Was the Government going to allow this treaty to be at sea when the session ended? Mr. Robb replied that in Australia and on the Continent of North America, there were trade interests endeavoring to arouse opposition to the treaty, and no good purpose could be served by present discussion.

Mr. Robb gave figures covering the expenses in connection with the negotiation of French, Belgian and Italian treaties in the fiscal year, 1922-23. The total expenditure of $8,264 was divided as follows: Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, Finance Minister, $4,434; J. A. Russel, commission of tariffs, $1,797; R. B. Viets, who was then acting as secretary to the Minister, $2,033. There was no expenditure for the negotiation of treaties in the fiscal year 1923-24, but in 1924-25 there was an expenditure of $3,695, $1,680 to Hon. Ernest Lapointe and $2,015 to W. McL. Clarke, Canadian trade agent in Italy, in connection with negotiations for a proposed treaty with Spain.

The vote carried.

All Legislation Of Importance Is Already On The Order Paper of the House, Says Premier King

OTTAWA, June 12 (Canadian Press)—"Will the government state whether they have any more legislation intended to be introduced this session, and if so what?" asked Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

Premier MacKenzie King replied that he thought that anything of any importance was already on the order paper. There were, however, small amendments to deal with respecting the Battlefields Commission, and the Audit Act. Replying further to E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River), Premier King declared that legislation would also be brought down in regard to rural credits.

"I may also," humourously interjected Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, "Have a bill relating to a home for girls in the maritime provinces, but it will not be controversial."

NEW WATERFORD IS QUIET AFTER STRIKE BATTLE

One Man is Dead and Twenty-eight Others Are Wounded.

TROOPS MOBILIZED

Entrained Last Night at Halifax to Proceed to New Waterford.

GLACE BAY, N.S., June 12 (Canadian Press).—New Waterford, C.B., the scene yesterday of a battle between striking miners and British Empire Steel Corporation police for possession of a company power station, was quiet last night. The power station remained in the hands of the miners and was not working, so that New Waterford remained without light and water, and mines of the district were being flooded for lack of pumping power.

Casualties in yesterday morning's battle in which two thousand miners rushed the power plant occupied by thirty or more company police, stood last night at one dead, three seriously wounded and twenty-five or thirty suffering from injuries of varying gravity.

William Davis, a miner, was dead, and Gilbert Watson, also a miner, was in a precarious condition with a gunshot wound in his stomach. Two seriously injured police remained in New Waterford while twenty-five police had been removed to the hospital at Sydney.

Accompanying the police to Sydney were General Manager H. J. McCann of the corporation, and D. A. Noble, chief of the Corporation force. McCann was previously reported missing.

Troops Mobilize.

HALIFAX, N.S., June 12 (Canadian Press. — Troops were being mobilized in Halifax last night and were entraining at Pier 2 presumably to go to the Cape Breton coal fields, where a collision between the United Mine Workers of America and police of the British Empire Steel Corporation over possession of the New Waterford power plant occurred yesterday morning.

Hon. W. J. O'Hearn, attorney general of Nova Scotia refused to make any statement concerning the transport of troops early last night, but promised one later. It would not be possible for troops and provincial police, from Halifax, to arrive at the scene of yesterday's difficulties until late this morning.

Yesterday's devolopments were the most sensational of the coal miners' strike, which has been in existence throughout the workings of the British Empire Steel Corporation since March 6 last. The men went out following a breakdown in wage negotiations; about 12,00 miners are affected.

Steps Taken.

HALIFAX, N.S., June 12 (Canadian Press).—The attorney-general for Nova Scotia, Hon. W. J. O'Hearn, called back to the capital from a political tour through the eastern section of the country, gave out the following statement concerning the Cape Breton miners' strike yesterday afternoon.

"I have just returned to town and received official details of the disorders at New Waterford. I have already taken steps for securing re- [illegible] ity affected, and I can assure you that all the energies and resources of the Crown will immediately be directed in that direction."

EIGHT-HOUR DAY LAW IS BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Question of Competence of Federal or Provincial Governments to be Settled.

GENEVA DRAFT

International Convention Was Sent to Provinces—Several Points Raised.

OTTAWA, June 12.—The competence of the Federal Parliament to enact an eight-hour-day law was argued in the Supreme Court of Canada yesterday. Judgment being reserved.

Under the Labor provision of the Treaty of Versailles an international Labor conference, of which Canada was a member, by its draft convention provided for an eight-hour-day and forty-eight-hour week in all industrial undetakings and that each member of the conference should bring the draft convention before the authority within whose competence the matter lies for the enactment of legislation or other action. The draft convention was sent by the Federal authorities to the Lieutenant-Governor of each province.

The law officers of the Crown held at the time that the eight-hour-day did not come within the jurisdiction of the Federal parliament. The point aroused considerable discussion before a special committee of the House of Commons and it was decided to refer the question to the Supreme Court for a ruling.

Questions submitted to the Supreme Court today were in substance:

1—What is the obligation of the Dominion of Canada in such matter?

2—Is the subject matter in whole or in part within the competence of the provincial legislatures

3—If in part only, in what particulars [illegible] and to what extent?

4—If in part only, in what particular or particulars and to what extent is it within the competence of the Parliament of Canada?

MACMILLAN NOT GIVEN ADVICE

United States Government Has Not Given Him Instructions.

NO SOVEREIGNTY

WASHINGTON, June 12 (Canadian Press)—The MacMillan expedition when it departs for the Arctic June 17, Secretary Wilbur said yesterday, will carry no special instructions concerning the course it should pursue in claiming any lands which may be discovered or in flying over disputed territory.

The queston was brought up in a letter to Mr. Wilbur from Donald B. MacMillan, head of the expedition, who asked if there were any special instructions in view of statements at Ottawa indicating an interest on the part of the Canadian government in the plans for the undertaking. The letter was transmitted to the State Department, but Mr. Wilbur said yesterday no reply was expected, adding, however, that the two departments were in accord on the decision to provide no special instructions for the explorer.

It is understood to be the position of the Departments that no question has been raised as to the right of the navy planes which will accompany the expedition to fly over Ellesmere Island or any other territory including that claimed by Canada north of its generally recognized boundaries. Inasmuch as no question of sovereignty would be raised unless land were discovered in the unexplored region to be visited by the expedition, the responsible officials also appear to feel that no necessity exist for proceeding on the theory that such discoveries may be made and that if any developments arise requiring action, it would be time enough then to consider them.

The negative attitude of the Navy and State Departments towards the issues raised by the MacMillan expedition and the possibility of its traversing territory which Canada, through Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, has laid claim to disposes temporarily of the matter of discovery rights in the Arctic circle, and leaves unanswered the questions centering on the statement of MacMillan at Provincetown over a week ago that should he find any land in the course of his travels he would claim it for the United States.

In the House of Commons Wednesday, Mr. Stewart defined the area claimed by Canada as lying within a triangle whose base is a line drawn from the Canadian continental boundary at Alaska eastwards to the Davis Straits. He suggested in his address to the House that the least expeditions from other countries could do was to take out permits before crossing Canadian territory, but the stand of the United States Departments expressed in the understanding that no rights are involved in the flight of the planes across the northern islands leaves this matter also "in statu quo."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

ON DOGS

MR. EDITOR:—

Having read your editorials as also the letters which have appeared in your paper with regard to dogs running at large one might almost be inclined to think that everybody wanted dogs, and then more dogs, on the streets but such is not the case. Ask the man or woman who is trying to keep nice flower beds and shrubs in front of their homes; ask the man or woman who spends their evenings in the parks admiring the flowers planted there by the City with their tax money and who has to sit there and see these flowers destroyed by dogs; ask the merchant on George Street who is constantly having his place surrounded by dogs, or ask the man who owns a horse or a cow which must not run at large, and you will find out that the great majority of the people feel that dogs should not be allowed to run at large on the streets.

Warsaw Sunday School is large and well organized, and it will carry on until the end of the year.

Rev. P. L. Juit is expected to preach in Cottersloe next Sunday afternoon, June 14, and June 21; that congregation will hold its anniversary services, with the tea meeting the following Monday. Cottersloe is one of the best Sunday schools in the township, but if there is a continued term of no preaching, that Sunday school can hardly carry on, as the different parts of the congregation, according to location of homes, would go to different churches, which hold services at different times, thus making it next to impossible to carry on the Sunday school.

There is to be a meeting of both congregation's sessions and managing boards Monday evening.

Rev. W. L. Atkinson, who has had charge of the Presbyterian work in Cottersloe and Warsaw for the past two years, preached the last sermon in these two churches as minister, and also as under the present administration. At the close of each service, the beautiful Presbyterian Communion service was observed. In Warsaw four united with the church by profession of faith, and two by letter. Mr. Atkinson said he did not preach farewell sermons.

COMPLETE AUDIT MADE EVERY DAY

Minister of Finance Says That Staff Must Stay During Audit.

COMPLETE SYSTEM

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—When the estimates to provide for salaries and contingencies in the Department of the Receiver-General of Canada came before the House of Commons yesterday, Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, made a brief statement to correct an impression which had gone out from the evidence given at the Public Accounts Committee, to the effect that there was not a complete audit made of the Finance Department.

There was, Mr. Robb said, a complete internal audit made by a competent staff of the Department every night in the Finance Department before the staff was allowed to leave the building. Mr. Robb explained that it was by Order-in-Council of January, 1925, that the Auditor-General's Department was excluded from carrying on its work in the Finance Department. It had been found that the Auditor-General's staff had made very casual examination and that in one instance a man let out of the Finance Department for incompetence, later re-appeared in the Department to examine the books for the Auditor-General. Mr. Robb asked that the Public Accounts Committee summon the Comptroller of Currency to give evidence as to the thoroughness of the internal auditing of the Finance Department.

Mr. Robb said he felt that the Auditor-General was making every effort to surround himself with a competent staff, but the impression that he had given the committee, that his powers were curtailed, should not be interpreted as a reflection on the auditing of the Finance Department.

In replying to a question, Mr. Robb stated that in the proposed extension to the Audit Act, changes would be made providing for advice from the Board of Audit in respect to a more effective measure of control regarding an audit of Government revenues.

Sir Henry Drayton (Conservative, York West) recommended a "free audit system." He did not see the necessity for a separate accounting

PICNIC MARKS CHURCH UNION

Cobourg Sunday Schools Unite to Celebrate History Making Occasion.

SPORTS DAY

COBOURG, June 12.—Thursday was a great day in Cobourg for a united picnic took place at Horse Show Park in which the Sunday Schools from Brighton, Colborne, Grafton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Baltimore, Warkworth, Roseneath, Alderville, Coldsprings and other points were asked to participate to mark the historical significance of the joining of the new church. The proceedings opened at 2.30, when the schools began to assemble. The first event arranged was a baseball match between a picked team from the Sunday Schools of Port Hope and Cobourg and one from the other schools. From 4.00 to 5.30 there were all kinds of games and sports for the children. Then there was a basket supper, followed by a programme of music given by Cobourg United Church Orchestra, assisted by a number of musicians from other places. There was community singing also, led by massed choirs from the church and brief addresses. A happy day for children and elder folk was concluded by a display of fireworks.

LAKEFIELD'S NEEDS.

An Editorial That Urges Action For Good of the Village.

LAKEFIELD, June 11—With the opening of the summer season the work of improving the village park has been resumed in spite of the fact that Park development is not a universally popular idea. The weather is one which has points pro and con but one feels if the Park, on which a good deal of money has been expended, can be made to pay its way by a comparatively small amount of money, the said expenditure is justified. The Park needs advertising, clever, catchy advertising, to bring its charms before the motor camping public. The Park is a municipal asset and no doubt there will be no offensive restrictions forbidding the villagers the use of the Park.

—And a Bathing Place.

The question of an adequate and suitable bathing place especially for the children has, within the past week and by reason of the extreme heat, become a vital question. A few citizens have labored hard with this end in view but there is always a stone wall opposition which blocks any action. Last Sunday Strickland's Point was crowded with children but while it is a fairly pleasant and safe bathing place, it is too far away as children and adults are tired out after a trip over and back. With the prospect of extreme heat let some movement be made for the sake of the children.

—And Band Concerts.

With the erection of the new band stand and the advent of the warm weather it is expected that the Citizens' Band will very shortly announce their first band concert which will be eagerly looked forward to by old and young. The band have been practicing assiduously and are greatly improved since last year, showing the value of hard work.

—And Bridge Lights.

Citizens are asking "when will the bridge be lighted?" The contract has been let, it is understood, and one hopes to see the work completed at an early date.

Sunday School Plan

The following plan or Sunday school organization was presented yesterday evening by Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose to the 123rd annual meeting of Peterborough County Baptist Association:

Mr. Rose said:

Before presenting the plan which we have adopted in Murray Street I wish to state that there is nothing so nearly ideal in Sunday School organization as The Lake Avenue Church School, Rochester, New York. It is a model of excellence. Many city schools have adopted it. Dr A. W. Beaven, pastor of the church, is the builder and inspirer of that fine organization. About him is a staff of officers and teachers composed quite largely of specialists in religious education. After such a statement you wonder why we do not accept it in detail. The answer is to be found in the fact that we are not as far advanced in the science of religious education as the Lake Avenue Church and that we must have something more simple and so more easily worked before we can go forward to practically their full program. In other words the difference between success and failure on the part of Murray Street Churhc and many others at first, is to be discovered in the adaptations of, and additions to, their general plan.

While I presented in substance the plan of Murray Street nine months before I came in touch with the Lake Avenue plan I recognise the influence of my visit to the Lake Avenue Church as the most helpful and enjoyable of all visits made to other churches. Dr. Beaven did everything within his power to assist me in my study of th and effort to see their practical working. His assistants also, by their gracious attention to my interests, made me their lasting debtor.

The Plan Stated.

The Church and Sunday School meet at the same hour and place and so closely linked in worship and study that they begin, continue and end as a whole, though in different departments after their worship period. When the hour of meeting is 11 o'clock the arrangements are as follows: 11.00 to 11.30, worship period; 11.30 to 12.00, instruction period for all under 15 in departments, and for all over 14, a sermon which will also be full of instruction; from 12.00 to 12.30, all will be formed into classes and follow the general order of the well graded and organized Sunday School. The senior Bible Class, however, under this plan, includes all in the morning congregation who are not connected with one of the other classes. In this plan the combined service does not close till 12.30, and so people do not consider the service over at 12.00 and retire. The benediction comes at 12.30.

Plan Benefits.

This plan requires one offering instead of two, though the same total is expected from those who attend church and Sunday School. This offering is received during the worship period and is made much more an act of worship than the usual giving in the Sunday School. With the Sunday School at the heart of the Church there will be less trouble than formerly to both meet local need and to support missionary enterprises, including the boards of religious education. If the Church will give each Sunday to the finance committee of the Sunday School one half the amount that the school formerly received through its offerings and take two offerings a year for the support of the school after having made proper announcements there will be no difficulty in financing all of the Sunday School interests more liberally than on the former plan.

Needs Direction.

Every organization needs devoted and intelligent direction. Though the plans be ever so perfect success can only be secured finally through the direction of those who have the work at heart and ability to make it function. The best leadership is probably a small local board of religious education. The duties of this board will be to select officers and teachers and to supervise the work generally. A monthly meeting with minute kept, and constant vigilance will help to secure live success. There will be a danger of this becoming a one man board as is the case in most others. This tendency should be overcome and the board as such should be made to feel its responsibility. Under this new plan the superintendent has not the same kind of work that he had under the former when the first half hour of worship was directed by him. Under this it is directed by the pastor. The superintendent nevertheless is the key-man and the secretary is another. Both should be members of the board directing the whole. I am taking it as if stated that all understand that the work is the Lord's, and that without His favor the builders work in vain, though the organization be perfect otherwise, and the human instruments ever so well gifted and trained.

Sample Combined Service.

The following sample combined service is taken from the Murray Street Baptist Church Calendar for June 7 of this year, and is in general arrangement, the same as that followed during the last four months while this plan has been in trial there:

Morning Service at 11 o'clock.
(Church and Sunday School.)
Doxology.
Invocation.
Responsive Reading.
Hymn
Scripture
Prayer Hymn
United Prayer
Offertory
Anthem
Announcements
Hymn
The members of the Primary will retire during the first stanza, the Juniors during the second and the Intermediates (illegible)
Sermon
Hymn
Formation of Classes and Bible Study
Benediction

There is nothing in this that cannot be followed by the average church either in the country or city. If the pastor does not wish to follow his sermon by teaching the Adult Bible Class he can probably find some good laymen who will do it well. In most cases, however, it will be a distinct advantage for the pastor to follow a series of sermons of both doctrinal and practical value with thirty minutes discussion of the same subject. If the sermon has been thoroughly prepared he will find the last period a great opportunity to answer the people's questions and to get into living touch with those who have real problems. The people will like it and will surprise him by their interest.

In this Sample Service the parts which are new are the Prayer Hymn, the Offertory Hymn, each of one stanza, the One offering, the Recessional Hymn, and the Junior and Intermediate Groups which are practically small congregations, the Sermon followed by a discussion of the same subject in the Adult Bible Class. This order of service can be carried through in three periods in the time named, and must be so conducted if there is to be success. If classes in daily school can close on time, and subjects be dealt with effectively, the Church and Sunday School can do the same. In this plan there is no place for long sermons. Every service MUST begin on time, continue on time and end on time.

How This Plan Was Introduced.

The way this plan is presented to a church and Sunday School will determine quite largely its success or failure If some one hearing this report decided his plan is a good one and that conviction seeks to start a Three Period Session of the Sunday School next week, fully organized, failure will be inevitable. If this report arouses your interest and you study the matter with a group of five, ten, or fifteen, according to the size of your membership for at least two months, three would be better, and at the same time keep your people thoroughly informed, your success, will be assured. A leaf from our experience will be of interest to you at this point.

Objections Received and Answered.

Young people may misuse Sunday afternoon.

Ans.—The morning in church and S.S. should help them to use it wisely. At present the S.S.'s do not in cities meet in the afternoon.

It may be difficult to secure as large an attendance.

Ans.—It may be, but is is much more likely to be less difficult.

It might be hard to interest children in the last half hour.

Ans.—Since there are three periods of thirty minutes each and a change of teachers and lessons it is not likely to be.

The presence of many children in the morning service might interfere with the worship period.

Ans.—The presence of children in the family pew or with teachers will add new interest to worship.

Some might only come to the last period and so miss the worship period and the first study period of sermon.

Ans.—This may be, but with the understanding that the service is a whole one and that it begins at 11 and closes at 12.30, few will come in the middle of it or leave till the close.

Some of our children might attend another S.S. in the afternoon, and in a short time be lost to the church.

Ans.—Some may attend another S.S. but they need not be lost to their own church.

It might be difficult to finance the Sunday School.

Ans.—This plan of fianncing is not necessary to the success of the new arrangement though we think it will add to it an element of strength.

It will make it harder to secure a good evening congregation.

Ans.—It should be easier. The attendance of S.S. by those who attend the morning service when they meet separately is all that many hard working people can do and observe the command to REST on the Sabbath. If there is a united service in the morning the people will be rested by evening and ready for attendance.

The Study Periods Described.

The primary has the same time in its own department that it had before attending the combined service during the first thirty minutes for worship. That means that the Primary would carry on as formerly with the same officers and teachers and the same general course, the Keystone Graded Lessons.

The Juniors who are in age form 9-11 and the Intermediates who are from 12-14 meet in their fespective departments and are led by teachers who have them for that period of thirty minutes only. All in each department meet in one room and form practically a small congregtion. There special courses are followed. The Juniors memorize selected scriptures and hymns and are told Bible and missionary stories. The intermediates take a course in Bible History.

The Senior members of the Sunday School, and those who formerly constituted the morning congregation during this period that the Juniors and Intermediates are being instructed, are listening to a sermon which is more study than the pastor's sermons formerly were. This is one of the finest opportunities that the minister has ever had for he has before him the young men and women, boys and girls in large numbers and these scattered through the church and in the family pew or as in some cases in class groups and attentive. During the twenty weeks that this service has been on trial there has not been an interruption or an occasion when it was necessary to speak to anyone.

During the third period all classes are meeting as they did, in the Junior, Intermediate and Senior departments, except in time and numbers, before this new Plan was adopted and they follow as before the Graded Lessons.

During the third period of Thirty minutes, form 12.-12, 30 the Keystone Series of Graded Lessons is followed in the Junior, Intermediate and Senior Departments and the same teachers in most cases who formerly taught, direct them. The only difference in the adult classes is in numbers. In the Baraca and Young Ladies' Classes the International Lessons have been followed. In the second class for young women, the Life of Paul has been studies and in the Pastor's Class the subject has been "The Example of Jesus."

The New Plan Commended.

It is commended by its fruitage—The average attendance for the last four months over the same period of the preceding year has been 69%, and over the same periods for the preceding five years it has been 83%. The increase has been healthy and it has covered every department in the School.

The numerical increase however we do not consider the principal advantage though we recognize its significance. We feel that doubling the time for instruction in Bible knowledge and Christian service is the part which has most to commend it. The numbers attending are likely to vary, especially in the orgahized classes. We cannot be certain of numerical increase in every church where this is introduced though we feel that there will be very few exceptions. We can count, however, on doubling the time in every case.

It enables the parents and children to come up to the House of God at the same time and it enables them to worship together and to be profitably employed during the periods that they are separated into classes and departments. It enables them also to return home at the same time. It binds the home together by the bond of united worship. It puts religious training at the centre of the Church and makes possible a future of Church lovers and workers such as the present methods are not likely to produce.

It is commended by ministers. During the last four months we have had from many ministers the heartiest words of interest and approval. Though we have had as visitors leaders of religious education in Canada and men who are advanced students, we have yet to hear anything but commendation and what they have said to us they have on their own initiative proclaimed among the churches. Letters are coming from the most unexpected sources asking for the plan adopted by Murray Street. Last week a prominent Methodist Pastor secured a supply for his congregation and made the trip to Peterborough to make himself thoroughly acquainted with it. Though he has been pastor of strong churches he stated that he had seen nothing like it and believed that it was good in every part and that he hoped to introduce it into his church.

Among the many who have given encouragement to the Pastor as he has sought to introduce this Plan the following deserve special mention:—

Rev. A. W. Beaven, D.D., Rochester, N.Y.; Prof. J. H. Farmer, D.D., of McMaster University, Rev. George, T. Webb, D.D., Secretary and General Superintendant of the Baptist Board of Religious Education in Ontario and Quebec. Rev. Waldo C. Machum, M.A., Secretary of Religious Education and Leader of Boys' Work for the Maritime Provinces.

TAX IMPOSED ON ALL LACES

British Government Has Grudge Against Women, Says Lady Member.

FOR FIVE YEARS

LONDON, June 12. (Canadian Press). — The House of Commons last night, by a vote of 233 to 123, adopted a resolution introduced by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, former President of the Board of Trade, to impose for five years a tax of 33 1-3 per cent. ad valorem on imports of all kinds of lace and embroidery.

The resolution was strongly opposed by the Liberals and Laborites. Miss E. Wilkinson, Labor member for Middlesborough, asked whether the Government had conceived a grudge against women. "At first," she said, it was silk, and now it is lace."

William Graham, Labor, Edinburgh, moved an amendment to limit the duration of the tax to one year. His amendment was rejected by a vote of 196 to 120.

Premier Baldwin announced in the Chamber last Tuesday that the British Government had decided to adopt the recommendation of the Lace and Embroidery Committee to impose the 33 1-3 per cent. duty on lace and embroidery.

AMEND ACT.

Minor Changes Made With Reference to Bankrupt Farmers.

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—A bill amending the Bankruptcy Act, enabling the provinces to provide for the administration of estates of insolvent farmers by a Government officer, who shall be appointed by the province, was given third reading in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. The bill, which had already passed the Senate, provides for several minor changes in the Act, with special reference to bankrupt farmers. The bill comes into force by proclamation.

RUMANIA WILL PAY.

Intends to Make Arrangements to Pay Debts to United States.

BUCHAREST, June 12. (Canadian Press).—Rumania will follow the lead of France in settling her war debts with the United States, it is indicated in apparently inspired articles in newspapers that support the Government.

Rumania's reply to the note presented six weeks ago will not be prepared until it is definitely known what steps France finally will decide to take regarding her own obligations to the United States and to Great Britain, it is stated.

Peoples who still hunt for nearly all their food are the bushmen of Africa, the pygmies of Congo, the Eskimos and the tribes in the Malayan forests.

CLUB MEETINGS AT MILLBROOK

Big Attendance at Lawn Gathering—Mrs. Lunn Entertained.

Y. P. L. OUTDOORS.

MILLBROOK, June 12.—About sixty members and friends of the Golden Links Mission Circle motored to the home of Mrs. Robert Lunn, Cavan, on Tuesday afternoon, and the June meeting was held on the lawn of this hospitable homestead.

Mrs. Lunn, and her daughter, Miss Martha, received the guests as the various carloads arrived, and games and social intercourse furnished plenty of entertainment until the well-laden supper tables were in readiness, when all enjoyed the bountiful repast provided.

Mrs. McKnight, president of the Circle, then called the meeting to order, and after the opening devotional period, a report of the missionary convention held last week at Oshawa was given by Mrs. McKnight and Mrs. O. Williamson, the latter being the delegate from the Women's Missionary Auxiliary.

Both speakers expressed, in the warmest terms, their personal enjoyment of the convention, the first branch meeting which either one had been privileged to attend. Three hundred delegates were enrolled, and four returned missionaries were among the speakers. One of these, Miss Paul, who has spent thirty years in mission work at the Crow's Nest Pass, B. C., has promised to address the local mission circle when it re-opens for the fall and winter term.

A paper on "Broadcasting," given at the convention, was read by Mrs. McKnight, and its companion, "Listening In," was read by Mrs. Williamson. Both were replete with helpful suggestions for improving the attendance and interest among the girls who make up the mission circle membership.

A chorus, "Cheerily," was sung by Misses Marjorie Sayles, Jean Burnham, and Margaret Howard, and the meeting closed with the circle benediction.

Y. P. League.

The Young People's League held its regular session this week as an out of doors meeting on the verandah of Mr. G. E. Burnham's home, a fair number being in attendance, considering the excessive heat.

Various aspects of nature study were taken up, Misses Wilma Fallis, Dorothy Crossley, and S. Hetherington, giving readings, both prose and poetry, appropriate to the topic.

Everyone was given opportunity to take part in the Scripture study, the president calling for passages from memory, either from the Psalms, or from our Lord's teaching, which have special reference to nature, and her lessons.

"Search out the wisdom of nature; there is depth in all her doings; she seemeth prodigal in power, yet her rules are maxims of frugality."

Next week's meeting will be held on the lawn at the home of the president, Miss Estelle Hetherington, the special programme, which was to have been given that evening being postponed on account of the counter-attraction in the vicinity, which most of the young people usually attend.

Plans for the annual picnic of the League will be completed in the near future, and the gathering held before the meetings are discontinued during July and August.

SLEEPING 15 YEARS.

LONDON, June 12.—Miss Swanepoel, a Transvaal woman, has been asleep for 15 years, says a despatch to a London paper. During this period she never has been fully conscious. Fifteen years ago she became hysterical after her lover's death and the sleeping sickness followed. She is little more than a living skeleton. Food is administered at frequent intervals.

THIS TIN CAN WALKED.

NEW BLOOMFIELD, Pa., June 12. — William S. Clegg was almost ready to believe in ghosts when he saw a tin can "walking" across one of his fields. He found that a ground hog had poked his head into the can and then couldn't get out. Clegg pulled off the can and the animal scampered away.

BLOODHOUND HUNT FOR MURDERER OF LITTLE SUSSEX GIRL

Battered Body Found in Rododendron Bushes of Big Estate

BOY ARRESTED

Son of Gatekeeper to Marquis of Abergavenny Remanded for Observation

East Sussex has again been shocked by a tragedy. A little girl named Joan Annetts, aged ten, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Annetts, of Bohemia Lodge, was found lying in Brushwood a few yards from a road in Eridge Park, the seat of the Marquis of Abergavenny.

The discovery was made by Thomas Beaumont, chauffeur of Lord Henry Nevill, brother of the Marquis. On Friday night the girl had gone to Eridge village, about six o'clock, to do some shopping, and as she had not returned at eight her mother walked through the park, and not seeing her, went to the castle and informed her husband, who was a servant there.

Search parties were formed and they searched long after dark, using lanterns and torches. About 11.15, when going along the gun-walk, Beaumont noticed a basket of groceries at the edge of the wood and on entering the wood, and about six paces from the roadway they found the body of the girl lying under some rhododendron bushes. Her head was terribly battered, and there was a gash on the side of the throat."

A touching feature of the discovery was the finding of a bunch of primroses by the side of the body which the dead girl had evidently gathered on her homeward walk through the park.

Bloodhounds were sent to the scene of the crime from Chichester, and they followed a trail leading from Broadwater Forest, one mile and a half across country. They then reached the high road, where the trail became obscure, and it is thought that the murderer might have boarded some vehicle or doubled back across his own track.

Scotland-yard officers were called in.

AN ARREST MADE.

George Jeffrey, a garden boy on the estate, was arrested the next day on the charge of the wilful murder of Joan Annett, aged ten, in the grounds of Eridge Castle, and appeared before the Crowborough magistrate.

He is only fifteen years and seven months old, but appeared to be the most unconcerned individual in the court, standing with head erect and arms akimbo in one corner of the small room.

His father, Charles Jeffrey, a gatekeeper on the Marquis of Abergavenny's estate, was also present, and Inspector Edwards of the Crowborough police, gave evidence of hearing a statement read over to the prisoner, which he signed.

The lad, with an unruly mop of hair and bright blue eyes, looked on unconcernedly, said he had no questions and nothing to say, and he was remanded to Brixton Prison.

MIRACULOUS ROOD AT WALTHAM ABBEY

Celebration of 865th Anniversary of Consecration Revives Tradition

Special services were held at Waltham Abbey, Essex, on the occasion of the 865th anniversary of the consecration. The Lord Bishop of Chelmsford was the preacher.

Within the Abbey Church of the Holy Cross, at Waltham Abbey, was laid the body of the last English king, Harold.

The tomb, if it still exists, lies outside the remaining building, about 40 yards eastward. It was of plain grey marble, according to Thomas Fuller, in his "Worthies of England" (1662), and bore the epitaph, "Hic jacet Haroldus infelix."

Tradition has it that the holy image bowed itself towards the king lying prostrate beneath it.

It was this crucifix that inspired the English at Hastings with their battle cry of "Holy Cross."

The nave only of the ancient church remains, and this was restored by the architect William Burges in 1860. The paintings on the roof were executed by his pupil, E. J. Poynter, later president of the Royal Academy.

GIRL BANKRUPT SOUGHT "CHANGE"

Nellie Sturdy, a girl employed as a head bookkeeper in a Manchester shipping office at a slarary of £7 a week, stated when examined in Manchester Bankruptcy Court yesterday that she spent £4 a week on clothes, theatres, and in going away.

"One cannot always spend time in a funny little place," she said. "One must live."

A receiving order was made at the instance of the income tax authorities.

"I just promised to pay," said Miss Sturdy, "and they went away."

SHELLS ARE EMBLEM FOR PILGRIMAGE

Sprinkled with holy water and blessed by the Bishop of Willesden, shells were distributed at the altar rails in St. Matthew's Church, Westminster, to the pilgrims who left for Palestine and the Near East.

This is the second Anglo-Catholic Pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and 216 men and women are making the journey under the leadership of Dr. Russell Wakefield.

The little opalescent shells which, it was explained by one of the clergy of St. Matthew's, have always been an emblem of pilgrimage, are the badges which each of the travellers will wear.

BACHELOR JUDGE'S STORY ON MATRIMONY

Mr. Justice McCardie, proposing "The Ladies" at the Whitefriars Club dinner, said it should have been done not by a bachelor, but by a young married man in the full tide of successful matrimonial experiment.

Of course, the young Benedick might have been nervous, like the Scot who at his wedding kept putting his hands in his pockets, and when asked if he had lost the ring, said: "No, mon, I have na' lost the ring, but I seem to be losing my enthusiasm."

MAYORESS THOUGHT HUSBAND DEAD

Strange Disclosures at Liverpool After Quarter Century

MARRIED YOUNG

Re-married When Informed Mate Had Died of Consumption

The remarkable disclosure was made during the action at Liverpool Assizes, that an ex-Mayor of Kendal and the woman he married at a registry office lived together for 24 years before discovering that her first husband was alive.

It was a case in which Mrs. Mary Ellen Goodall, aged 51, sued Abraham Pattinson, a timber merchant, of Kendal and Liverpool, claiming the return of £500 War Savings Certificates, or £3 a week, or damages.

Counsel for Mrs. Goodall said that in 1923 Mr. Pattinson instructed his solicitors to take divorce proceedings, still believing Mrs. Goodall to be his wife. He agreed to pay her £3 weekly, but denied that he agreed to do so for life.

With regard to the War Savings Certificates invested in Mrs. Goodall's name, Mr. Pattinson said that in 1919 he gave her £600 to be held in trust for him and to invest a portion of it in War Savings, again to be held in trust for him. In 1923 he discovered that Mrs. Goodall's husband was alive in 1911, and told Mrs. Goodall he would not make her any further payments.

MARRIED AT 18.

About 30 years ago, when she was 18, she married a man named Goodall, and lived unhappily with him for 18 months. About a year after he left her and went to America she received a letter saying he had died of consumpton, and she believed that statement to be correct. Not long afterwards she was introduced to Mr. Pattinson as a widow.

Mrs. Goodall was accused of bigamy at Liverpool Assizes in 1923, and stating that she believed her husband was dead when she went through the form of marriage with Mr. Pattinson, she was acquitted.

Mr. J. Singleton, K.C., for Mr. Pattinson, said after the term of office as Mayor of Kendal life there became too slow for Mrs. Goodall. Time after time after they went to Liverpool the woman was drunk and unfit to perform her duties as a wife and mother.

The jury found there had been a free gift to Mrs. Goodall of the £500 War Certificates, which she had given up in the mistaken belief that she would get £3 a week for life. There was also a free gift of certain other articles. Judgment was deferred.

OLD WOMAN HAD UNEXPECTED TRIP

From Devonshire to London When She Entered Wrong Train

London had an anxious and unexpected visitor on Cup final day in the person of an eighty-year-old woman who had left Paignton, Devon, to visit relatives at Forest Gate, E.

When changing trains at Newton Abbot she by mistake entered a Cup final special for London and travelled 194 miles in the wrong direction. Apparently nothing could be done until she reached Paddington, where she was greatly amazed by the enthusiasm of her fellow travellers.

Help was soon forthcoming from a kindly station-master, and the old woman left by a midnight express for Bristol, where she [illegible] and a half late. The Great Western officials had taken the greatest care of her, and she seemed to have enjoyed her experience.

WRITING BLOTTER GAVE UP SECRET

A wife who found a bundle of love-letters in her husband's pocket copied them in an exercise book, and extracts were read to the Brighton magistrates when she got a separation order.

The wife, Mrs. Rosa Storer, also produced some blotting paper on which she said she had found endearing phrases in her husband's handwriting.

Mrs. Storer stated that her husband's correspondence was with the housekeeper of an hotel at Bognor, where he had been employed as a waiter.

George Thomas Storer, the husband, said his association with the housekeeper was pure friendship. A separation order was made.

SUB-LETTING PAID

At a discussion on Exhorbitant rents at the meeting of the Property Owners' Protection Association, it was stated that a house which was let to a tenant for £55 plus rates and taxes, was now sub-let for £240. Where the pre-war rent was 12s. 6d. people were now asking £2.

In another case 12s. was obtained for a small room in a flat, the total rent of which was 13s.

OLD SOLDIER BRAVED DEATH TO RESCUE BOY

Was Lowered by Ropes from Famous Edinburgh Crags

PERILOUS CLIMB

Boy Trapped on Ledge, Came Down on Rescuer's Back

A nine-year-old Edinburgh boy who attempted to scale the lofty Salisbury Crags in King's Park, overlooking Holyrood Palace, and reached a point from which he could not move, was the subject of an exciting rope-rescue by an aged ex-soldier.

The boy, John Coleman, made his attempt at a point where the crags are some 80ft high.

He got within 20ft. of the top, and there reached a narrow ledge from which he could neither ascend nor descend.

His playmates, seeing his plight, ran to Holyrood Palace, and told Hector Gray, an ex-Scots Guardsman of 69, who is one of the parkkeepers.

ROPE ROUND WAIST.

Gray got a rope, called a police-constable and three other men to help, and hurried to the spot.

There three of the party made their way to the top of the crags and lowered the rope to Gray, who, fastening it round his waist, signalled to be hauled up.

On reaching the boy, who had by this time been two hours on the ledge, he took him on his back and the couple were lowered to the road.

Salisbury Crags form the western breastwork of the famous Arthur's Seat, the tall hill from which twelve counties can be seen. The road which runs around the base was made in 1820 at the suggestion of Sir Walter Scott, whose favorite resort it was when engaged on a new novel.

COMEDIAN LOST LINES; SUICIDED

Tragedy of Poor Memory Held Up Brighton Revue

The tragedy of a comedian who, unable to remember his lines, drowned himself in the Thames, was disclosed at a Westminster inquest on Leonard Kilroy, aged thirty-one.

Mr. Neville Delmar, a producer of revues, said that Kilroy, who was a temperate man, rehearsed with him for a fortnight for a new revue, but was unable to remember his lines.

Mr. Delmar should have produced the revue at Brighton on Monday, but was unable to do so because he had not time to engage another comedian.

A letter left by Kilroy to Mr. Delmar stated: "When you receive this letter my body will be lying at the bottom of the Thames. Believe me, I have tried hard to get the parts off, but failed. I wish you a very big success with 'Bulls Eyes'."

The coroner recorded a verdict of "Suicide while of unsound mind."

AGED CORNISH MINER RISKED LIFE FOR DOG

BRAVE GIRL STOPS BOLTING HORSE

Miss E. Roberts, of Penygroes, deservedly earned the cheers of hundreds of people when she stopped a runaway horse and saved a number of children from injury or death.

George Roberts, a milk dealer, was selling milk, at Glanrafon, Tonygrisian, when something frightened his horse and it bolted.

The street was crowded with children going to the Elsteddfod, when Miss Roberts jumped at the horse and managed to stop it before any accident occurred.

When the wedding party were assembled the registrar said he could not proceed until he had an official copy of the bride's decree absolute in proceedings between her and her former husband about three years ago. Lord Lyveden waited in the office for an hour and a half while the bride went for the document, and when she returned with it the wedding took place.

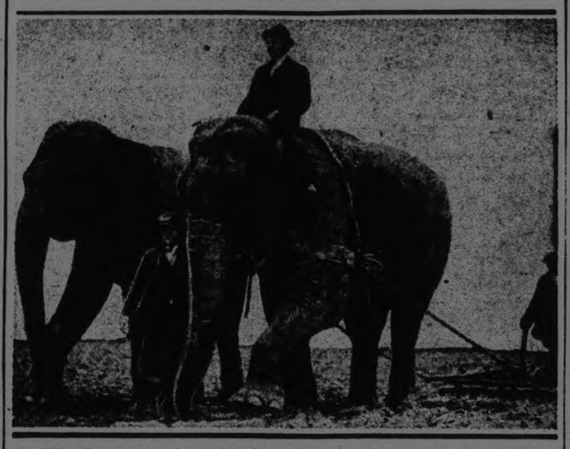
WHERE THE CIRCUS ANIMALS GO IN THE WINTERTIME



What happens to the performing animals of the circus in the wintertime is a question which has puzzled the minds of many a boy and girl ever since there has been a circus. The above illustration, which shows two of Sanger's famous elephants, Annie and Betty, in their winter quarters at Horley, Surrey, where they do part of the farm work at the plough and harrow, should help to answer the question.

AERIAL FUNERAL FOR AIR PILOT

Singular Honor Paid English Commercial Aviator by Colleagues

Although bodies in coffins have been brought from the Continent by aeroplane for burial in London and other places, what is claimed to be the first aerial funeral took place recently.

The fellow-airman of the late Mr. George Powell, a British commercial pilot, chartered a special saloon-'plane and flew his body from the Croydon airstation to Shawbury, Shropshire, for interment at Stanton, close by—a distance of about 150 miles. Mr. Powell was killed in a motor-car collision.

The aeroplane, a Napier-D.H. express used on the Continental services by Imperial Airways, was converted into an aerial hearse. The coffin rested in the saloon amid a mass of wreaths, many of which had come from the Continental air-stations, where Mr. Powell was well known. He had flown between London and the Continent since the start of commercial aviation in 1919.

One wreath of white flowers from his pilot friends was a model of an aeroplane.

FARMER FOUGHT TO STOP PIPE-LAYING

Council Employes Played Football Until Dispute Was Settled

Amusing and sometimes exciting scenes were witnessed on a farm at Cloud Hill, three or four miles from the village of Buglawton, Cheshire, when a party of workmen employed by the district council attempted to lay pipes in connection with an improved water supply.

When the men reached the field in which a spring is at present running to waste the owner (To Close) warned the men not to enter his property. The warning was ignored, and the pipes were run into the field.

The pipes were pulled up during the following night, and the next morning the men attempted to replace them. As they dug up the earth from the trench they had made the previous day, Close, working furiously [illegible]

It seemed futile to continue, and the men ceased work and played football for some hours.

The clerk of the council appeared later, and eventually persuaded the indignant farmer that the council would make a proper settlement with him for the use of the field. The work was then allowed to proceed, and the temporary hold-up of the scheme was ended.

YOUTH GETS "HUNG" AT ROYAL ACADEMY

To be "hung" at the Royal Academy at the age of 19 is the remarkable achievement of John R. Pimlott, of Forest Hill, S.E., who has just received news of the acceptance of a water color painting which he submitted, together with two other works.

Mr. Pimlott's father, who is an artist, has had several pictures "hung," his first being at the age of twenty-four.

A Sherwood Edwards, a young sculptor, of Ashton-on-Mersey, Cheshire, has been informed that a landscape in oils, which he painted from a sketch made while in an anti-aircraft battery in France during the war, has been accepted by the Royal Academy. "The actual painting," he said, "did not take more than two hours."

INDIAN ARMY MAN IS FOUND SHOT

The police have solved the mystery of the identity of the man who was found shot dead in a taxicab outside the Caledonian Hotel, Harpur street, Holborn, W.C., late one Sunday night.

At first the police thought he was Montague Noel Newton, a witness in the "Mr. A" case. The man actually was Frank Montague Noel Newton, a member of St. Stephen's Club, Westminster, who arrived in England the previous week from abroad. He served as an officer in the Indian Army during the war. When he took rooms at the Caledonian Hotel he gave no indication of his occupation or intentions. Recently he had complained of the "inhospitable climate of this country after tropical suns."

FLYING GOLFER WON STRANGE WAGER

Flew Over Four Hundred Miles and Played Two Games in Day

Mr. R. Graham Murray, son of Lord Dunedin, one of the Lords of Appeal, makes most of his golfing expeditions by air.

He was referee of the golf match in which Sir E. Holderness and Mr. T. A. Torrance met Duncan and Mitchell at Sandy Lodge, Northwood recently, and in the afternoon his aeroplane was circling over the course ready for him to fly home.

Mr. Murray a short time ago, for a wager agreed to fly to Westward Ho! Devon, about 220 miles, play 2 rounds of the championship course there, and be back in London in time for dinner the same evening. Starting at 9 a.m. he won the wager comfortably.

The flight to Westward Ho! with a following wind took him 88 minutes.

WOMAN LOSES MURDER APPEAL

Young Shop Assistant, Who Killed Musician, Seeks Mercy

The appeal of Mrs. Catherine Thorpe, the twenty-year-old Bradford shop assistant, against her conviction for the murder of Herbert Musgrove, a pianist, at Bradford on January 10, was dismissed by the Court of Criminal Appeal.

Thorpe was sentenced to death at Leeds Assizes, but the jury recommended her to mercy.

Mr. C. J. Frankland, for Thorpe, said that the only ground of appeal was that the assize judge failed to direct the jury that it was possible to find a verdict of manslaughter.

The Lord Chief Justice, in announcing the decision of the court, said that at the trial the judge was not asked to leave to the jury the possible alternative of manslaughter.

"The jury's recommendation to mercy is not a matter with which this court can deal," said the Lord Chief Justice, "and no doubt it will be dealt with in the proper quarter."

PRIEST WAS ACTOR IN HIS OWN PLAY

The Rev. Ralfe Davis, who has been a priest at St. Clement's Church, Leighon-Sea, for three years, took a leading part in a play written by himself at the Ambassadors' Theatre, Southend.

"Professor Tring's Experiment" is the title of the play, which was produced by the Southend Repertory Company.

Mr. Davis, who has been an actor for nearly two years, holds the view that priests should take part in the world's work. He first joined a Shakespearean company at the Old Vic, and has been with the Southend Repertory Company for about twelve months.

EARL OF CARDIGAN'S SECRET MARRIAGE IS MADE KNOWN

Love Match Was Consummated Ten Months Ago in Brentford

GROOM'S TRIBUTE

Says Countess Graceful and Talented in Sport and Art

The young Earl and Countess of Cardigan, whose romantic secret marriage in a Brentford register office last July has at last become public knowledge, were eagerly sought by friends who wished to shower congratulations on them.

Before her marriage the countess was Miss Joan Salter, the daughter of Stephen Salter, a prominent architect of Ryde, Isle of Wight.

The young countess in relating the story of her romance said:

"I am in such a whirl of excitement that I do not know exactly what I am doing or what I intend to do," she said in an interview. "This sudden publicity has so overwhelmed me that I cannot exactly realise yet that our little secret has been broadcast to the world.

"You may say that I am very, very happy, and that my husband and I are devoted to each other," she declared simply. "Ours was a love-match; we fell in love at first sight, and our marriage quickly followed.

The young countess has been living for the past two years with Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. A. C. T. Veasey at Greenford Place, Greenford, Middlesex. They are both devoted to her, and Mrs. Veasey "mothered" the girl, whose mother died some years ago.

After the news of his marriage became public Lord Cardigan had an interview with his father, the Marquis of Ailesbury at his home, Savernake Forest, near Marlborough. The earl is a tall, slim young man, over six feet in height, with dark coloring and dark eyes, and hardly looks his age of twenty-one years.

"My wife's appearance seems to have been the subject of some curiosity," Lord Cardigan said "and I should like to say authoritatively that she is tall, dark, and graceful. She rides well, is fond of hunting, is an extremely fine diver, and plays a good game of lawn tennis. She is artistic as well, and expresses this side of her character in attractive water-color sketches."

The grandfather of Lady Cardigan, recalled that her elder sister, formerly Miss Ida Florence Salter, married in a similar romantic way Walter B. Menzies, son of the late Sir Walter Menzies, M.P., who fell in love with her while he was at Oxford ten years ago. The couple in this case were secretly married, and Mr. Menzies is now a well-known Edinburgh advocate.

FOREST DWELLERS ARE ATTACKED

Two Aged Men Find Epping Forest Only Lodgings Available

A man of 82 who had been living under the trees in Epping Forest described to the [illegible] how he was attacked and robbed by two other men.

The forest dweller, William Street, said the men came upon him at night and began to kick and strike him. They took his purse, containing £1 8s. 3d., and left him so badly hurt that he had to lie where he was for two days.

Street said he had been living in the forest for some time because he had been unable to get lodgings.

Evidence was given by a second man aged 71, who also said he slept in the forest.

CHURCHWARDENS AS TAVERN CLEARERS

Churchwardens are really important persons whose principal duties, although they may not like it, lie outside the Church, said the Rev. R. F. Burnett, vicar of St. John's, Chelmsford, at the vestry meeting.

"How many," he asked, "know there is an old law still in force which says that, as soon as the church bells stop ringing, the churchwardens must go into the public-house and turn out the people? I don't know whether if that were done now we should get bigger congregations."

IRISH FISHERMEN RESENTED RAID

Civic guards who arrested a number of fishermen for illegal fishing in the Cashen fishery at Ballyduff, North Kerry, were attacked by a large crowd.

A party of Free State troops was sent to the district. They came armed with bombs and machine-guns, and after shots had been fired over the heads of the crowd, 14 men were arrested.

A young woman at a Shoreditch inquest rendered the oath as—"the truth, the whole truth, and 'everything' but the truth."

SAILOR SON SEEKS FOR LOST PARENTS

George Wreyford, a Torquay tramcar conductor, has lost his parents and cannot find the slightest clue to their whereabouts.

Wreyford joined the merchant service two years ago, and in an Elders and Fyffes liner visited Jamaica, South Africa, Australia, and Bombay.

Both in Aden and in Bombay he was suffering from malaria, but all the time he received communications from his parents, who lived at Hele, Torquay.

Wreyford left the service at Sydney and returned home, only to find that his parents had mysteriously disappeared, and that not even near relatives knew where they had gone.

All inquiries have proved unavailing.

COLLIERY OWNER RUNS OWN SHOP

Sir Charles Markham Weighs Butter Behind the Counter

DANCE HALL

Provides Best Food at Competitive Prices in Nottingham

Sir Charles Markham, the famous colliery proprietor, weighed out butter behind the counter of his new food store which was opened at Nottingham.

"It is the first time I have ever done this," the baronet shop-assistant said, "but it is all very interesting."

Sir Charles said his object in entering the business was to provide the best food for the people at competitive prices. "I am not exactly a philanthropist," he added.

"The coming into being of this concern is romantic. Four years ago I was supplying milk from my farm to a well-known firm. But when the price was reduced to 4d. a gallon I decided to build a factory and to deal with the milk myself.

This factory was duly built, and in course of time I was receiving supplies from over a hundred farms.

"Then came the question of disposing of the milk, and I opened a small shop in Mansfield and, with the products of the farms, the venture proved so successful that I decided to extend it to Nottingham."

The premises above the shop have been arranged as an up-to-date dance hall.

PAID FOUR YEARS SALARY IN ERROR

Unusual "Oversight" That Cost British Treasury £3,350

An Army officer who drew pay and allowances from the Admiralty for nearly five years is the subject of a note in the report of the Comptroller and Auditor-General on the Navy Appropriation Account, 1923-1924, issued recently, under the heading "Balances Irrecoverable."

The Army officer in question was lent by the War Office to the Admiralty in June, 1915, to develop an automatic rifle of which he was the inventor. In April, 1916, the Admiralty decided not to proceed further with the matter, and informed the officer, though no definite notice terminating his engagement appears to have been given.

Neither the War Office nor the accounting branches of the Admiralty were informed, and, as a result, the officer's pay and allowances were continued till December 31, 1920. In that time payments were made to the officer of £3,350 10s. 6d., and the Admiralty were advised that it would be difficult to claim a refund. War pressure was given as the reason for the oversight.

AN OIL DEAL.

An oil transaction which the Comptroller considers worthy of censure concerns a loss of £15,913. In August 1920 about 100,000 gallons of oil were sold to a firm, payment to be made in September 1920. No claim for payment was made till April 1921, and it [illegible] instalment of the purchase price was received.

Meanwhile in January 1921 a further sale of some 240,000 gallons had been made to the same firm, the total amount due on the two transactions being £37,413.

The firm found themselves unable to carry out their agreements, and in May 1923 the Treasury sanctioned a reduction of their liability to £21,500.

A sum of £52,034 appears in the receipts which represents a refund by the company acting as coaling agents for the Admiralty at a Colonial port.

It appears that the methods employed by coaling laborers abroad to secure pay for handling more coal than they did actually handle resulted in surpluses of coal.

Such surpluses should have been reported to the Admiralty, and they asked the agents for an explanation. As a result, the company agreed to refund £72,516, of which the sum referred to was the first instalment. The surplus coal accrued between 1917 and 1919.

REPARATIONS ROB WELSH COLLIERIES

The Italian State railways are closing their Cardiff purchasing offices, through which, before the war, some 3,000,000 tons of Welsh coal were bought every year.

This step has been taken because the railways are now meeting practically the whole or their requirements by supplies of German reparation coal, and by imports from the new coal-field in Russia, which is being exploited by Italians.

MAN ATTACKED CHRISTIANITY AND THEN FELL DEAD

Startling Tragedy at Rationalist Dinner Held in London Restaurant

LAST WORDS

Effort Was to Encourage Campaign Against the Christian Churches

Mr. George Whale, chairman of the Rationalist Press Association, attacked Christianity at a dinner at the Trocadero Restaurant, London, and a few moments later he fell dead.

His last words were: "Do I say eat and drink, for tomorrow we die? No! I say: Take hands and help, for today we live.

The dinner had been given by the association in honor of the birth centenary of Thomas Huxley and to encourage the campaign against the Christian churches.

Mr. Whale died after ending a ruthless attack on the dogmas of the Christian religion and its ministers.

"Do we wonder," he said, "that the number of our fellow-citizens who are willing to enrol themselves members of the Church is less than one-seventh of the adult population of this country? Yet they have the impudence to call theirs a national church. I suppose that from time to time you, like myself, occupy yourselves in seeing how they can justify their position.

BISHOP CRITICISED.

"I have been much interested in the career of the new bishop of Birmingham. Some little time ago he showed that he was inclined to fight the Book of Genesis, but now he has set the Church by the ears in his effort to fight against the magic in the Church—which he calls the Reservation of the Sacrament.

"The light from some providential spirit or Holy Ghost is said to have guided the Church for some nineteen hundred years. It has not come, and when it does come I venture to suggest it will not have the dazzling effect of the light that fell on the Apostle on his way to Damascus—the light which left him dazzled for the rest of his life."

The two hundred and seventeen guests present greeted his words with appreciative laughter. In a few moments there were only hushed whispers and awe-stricken faces.

Major G. H. Putnam had risen to propose Mr. Whale's health and the listeners were beginning to applaud, when there was a sudden movement at the centre table which arrested the glasses about to be lifted.

It was seen that Mr. Whale had collapsed in his chair, and in the instant silence his heavy breathing was the only sound.

Doctors rushed to his side, and he was carried from the room, dying. Artificial respiration was at once tried, but death was almost immediate.

DANCE ABANDONED.

The dinner was to have been followed by dancing, and at the moment that Mr. Whale was being carried from the banquetting hall the orchestra in the next room, unaware of the tragic scene from which a screen divided them, could be heard tuning up their instruments.

Major Putnam, a veteran of the American Civil War, himself more than eighty years old, stood for a moment seeking words. Then, remembering the toast he was about to propose, he murmumured with deep emotion: "I am wishing more than ever for the health of my dear friend."

While the guests waited to be reassured it was announced that the dance would be abandoned. Women in evening frocks, and the men who were about to partner them in fox-trots, stood about awkwardly. Although it was not officially announced that Mr. Whale was dead, the news spread from one group to another till the whole gathering slowly dispersed.

Mr. Whale, who was a solicitor, was Mayor of Woolwich in 1908-9. He retired from practice in 1913. He was one of the founders of the Omar Khayyam and Pepys Clubs, a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society, and on the council of the Folk Lore Society.

Two years ago—when seventy-three—he married Miss Sophia Charlotte Winifred Stephens, a writer on [illegible] with twenty-one years younger than himself.

CRIPPLED PORTER SAVED THE BABY

Rescued Child from Moving Train While Mother Faints

The prompt action of a young railway porter, Bert Lucas, averted what might have been a domestic tragedy at Victoria Station recently.

Just before a train to Gillingham left a woman with a girl, aged 12, and another child, aged 1, had been saying good-bye to relatives leaving by the train. The woman who left her baby in the carriage when the train suddenly started.

Her elder daughter screamed out "Grandfather is taking away the baby," and as the train gathered speed the woman in the compartment held the baby out of the carriage window over the platform.

Lucas, thinking that the frantic woman was about to drop the baby from the moving train, ran the length of two carriages, sprang upon the footboard, and worked his way along towards the compartment. He seized the baby from the woman, and, although he is a cripple, having been injured in a shunting accident, regained the platform without losing his balance or dropping the child.

The mother by this time was in a fainting condition, and Lucas held the child until she was restored. He refused to accept any reward, and, without waiting for the thanks of the family, said that he was only doing his duty and walked away.

STRICT CUSTOMS.

One Man Unable to Land, But Had Made Provision.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, June 12.—"Rocked in the cradle of the deep," the passengers on the big ferry boat, Ontario, returning from Rochester Wednesday night on the complimentary excusion given by Warden J. L. McCamus, certainly were, but the oscillation brought neither comfort or repose. At least three-fourths of the ladies and about one-third of the men on board suffered the agonies of seasickness, many of them for the first time. The wind blew a gale and the waves on the lake ran high. The rolling of the boat from side to side was constant and sometimes this motion was varied when the bow pointed in the direction of the flying clouds and then straight downward as if the bottom of the lake was to be the destiny of ship passengers and crew. At such times more than one passenger who could not be assured by his of her friends that seasickness is not immediately fatal, abandoned the last shred of hope and then "rose from sea to sky" if not a wild farewell at least a feeble wail of despair.

The four hours occupied by the trip were whiled away by the men in the smoking room in a new game, the test of which was to see who could walk from one end of the room to the other with circumspect gait and without clutching, widly or otherwise, for support at the posts which support the uper deck. Many a hard earned reputation for an abstemious life was forfeited by passegers who were uable to find their sea legs as they attempted to make their way from one part of the boat to the other.

Passing the Customs.

The uniformed and courteous custom officials at the American landing, hastily examined the baggage of the passengers, who carried such impediments, but appeared to be chiefly interested in their future intentions, exacting from all an assurance that it was their intention to return to Canada and not remain permanently on American soil. A guest arriving at a private house for a short visit would be naturally somewhat crushed if his host insisted on knowing at the outset what his intention were with regard to the length of his stay, but these international relations are of such long standing that the official procedure is now taken as a matter of course.

Not Allowed to Land

There was one Canadian who was not allowed to set foot on American soil or even on the plank flooring of the dock. That was Robert Chapple who resides near Castleton and whose only misfortune is that he lost one of his limbs when he was a youth of 16 and since that time has made the journey of life with the aid of two crutches. Mr Chapple was not surprised at the action of the American officials as he had been through the same experience before and looking for this action had made provision against it.

Mr. Chapple has a daughter whose husband, Kenneth Warner, has a good position with a big rubber company in the suburbs of Rochester. Apprised by mail that her father would be on the boat Mrs. Warner, accompanied by her five year old son was at the dock to meet him. She and the boy were allowed on the boat, her father not even being permitted to step on the gang plank and on the boat father, daughter and grandchild had the cabins to themselves during the five hour wait while the other excursionists were having a view of an American city in action.

Mr. Chapple has had a similar experience on more than one previous occasion. Once when he had notified his daughter of his expected arrival he failed to get his letter in time and failed to meet the boat. The father was obliged to return to Cobourg but his daughter telegraphed to the ferry people to bring him back to the American side on the next trip.

It was on a Saturday that Mr. Chapple made his fruitless journey and there was no boat for Rochester until the following Monday. In the interval of waiting the ferry company took grand care of him, giving him the run of the boat, providing him with free berth and board and a complimentary trip to the American side and back to Cobourg again.

Got Across Once

Once and once only has Mr. Chapple been able to elude the vigilance of the American officials. That was last fall when he crossed the frontier at Niagara Falls in an auto so that the immigration sleuths did not notice his physical handicap. He spent the entire winter with his daughter at Rochester and returned home by auto in the spring without trouble.

A Medical Wonder

Mr. Chapple has earned fame otherwise than as a liability upon the vigilance of the Americans. The loss of his limb is said to constitute the only case of the kind on the annals of medical juris prudence. He was 16 when he and a neighbor's boy of about the same size fretted at the close environments of Haldimand township and started out to see the world. The first night away from home they spent in the wood and the boy with young Chapple pillowed his head on the right thigh of the latter. In the morning Chapel's leg was numb and useless and shortly afterward it was amputated, the doctors saying that all the arteries were dead.

Mr. Chapple who lives alone on a small farm near Castleton and who is in easy circumstances, says that he is 80 years old but it is easy to believe that there has been a mistake made in the records as he has the appearance of a vigorous man of 60.

Returned Thursday

The majority of the Counties councillors and other guests of Warden McCamus spent Wednesday night in Rochester making the return trip over the surface of a lake as smooth as glass so that they met with none of the discomforts of the earlier returning contingent.

The Campbellford people who went to Rochester on the Warden's excursion on Wednesday, besides Reeve Davidson and Deputy Reeve Palliser, were: Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Palliser, Councillor and Mrs. W. J. Abernethy ,and Mrs. E. L. Plummer. This party remained over until Thursday and so escaped the stormy passage of the previous evening.

HOME BOY SHOT BY A STRANGER

Assailant Leaped From Bushes and Pulled Trigger Without Word.

SERIOUS WOUND.

(Special to the Examiner.)

KINGSTON, Ont., June 12. — Arthur Greenslade, aged 17 years, a Home boy sent out from Belleville, who was working for a farmer named Gordon Silver, who resides about three miles west of Harrowsmith on the Wilton road, was the victim of a mysterious shooting affray this afternoon.

He was in a pasture bringing up some cows to be milked when an unknown man suddenly jumped out from some bushes and fired pointblank at him in his face. He suffered a severe wound under his right eye and lay unconscious for some time.

When he came to his senses the man with the gun had made off.

Although suffering terribly from loss of blood the young man was able to make his way to the farm house, a third of a mile away, and was given medical attention, and although his condition is serious it is expected that he will recover. He has no idea who his assailant is but the Provincial police are at work on the case. It is feared he will lose the sight of one eye.

DIVORCE BILL IN SENATE AGAIN

Would Give Women in West Equal Rights With Men.

OPPOSITION

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—The Senate yesterday again discussed the bill to equalize the grounds for divorce, as between men and women, in the four Western provinces.

Senator Barnard, supporting the bill, explained that the law as it stands is the same as it was fifty years ago. Since then the status of women had been materially changed and they had acquired equality with men in many particulars. In Great Britain grounds for divorce were now the same for women as for men.

Senator Belcourt opposed the bill on the ground that it would increase divorce and that the aim of Parliament should be to sustain marriage rather than destroy it.

Senator Tessier adjourned the debate.

NEW WIRE MILL.

E. F. Phillips Company Has Started Work on Big New Building.

BROCKVILLE, June 12 (Canadian Press)—Work was commenced yesterday upon the construction of a second unit of the local plant of the Eugene F. Phillips Electrical Works, Ltd., to house the copper wire mill.

The estimated cost of the structure is $100,000 and it is to be completed by October 1st.

ALL CLASSES OF GRAIN ARE DEFINED

Numbers Two and Three Northern Have Been Settled By House.

OTTAWA, June 12 Canadian Press —The standard of Numbers two and three Manitoba Northern wheat was set by the adoption in the Agriculture Committee of the House of Commons of clauses the new Grain Act. The proposal to admit in No. 2 a slight proportion of Durum wheat with the higher grades brought a protest from Hon. W. P. Motherwell the Minister of Agriculture. He thought the quality was being slightly reduced thereby and the reputation of Canadian wheat in the export market debased.

Chief Grain Inspector Serls said the new definition did not reduce the quality of the grain. It maintained the same standard as has applied for years.

Mr. Motherwell had taken exception to the use in the new act of "reasonably sound" instead of 'sound' in the definition of the grades.

Mr. Serls said that the lower grades had always included a certain amount of kernels which were hard red wheat.

In answer to a question he said that piebald or "yellow belly" wheat was not necessarily unsound grain.

Discussion centred on the definition of sound and unsound wheat, which it is proposed to insert in the act. Members of the committee gave their opinion and related difficulties they had experienced in grading the different grains.

Considerable progress was made towards the end of the day and many of the routine clauses of the new grain act were adopted, with a great many minor amendments.

CROWN TO NAME SENATE USHER

NOT CIVIL SERVICE

OTTAWA, June 12. (Canadian Press).—Senator Dandurand laid on the table of the Senate yesterday a report from the law officers of the Crown on the question as to where jurisdiction lay with regard to the appointment of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. This report held that the Civil Service Commission having removed the position from the operation of the Civil Service Act, it reverted to the authority having jurisdiction before the Act went into force. According to this interpretation the appointment rests with the Crown.

Senator Dandurand stated that he had talked with the Prime Minister before the House sat and that the latter was willing to discuss the appointment with the leaders of both parties in the Senate.

Senator Sir James Lougheed dissented from the opinion of the law officers.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOHN JUNOR.

NORHAM June 12. — A large number of neighbors and relatives attended the obsequies of the late Mrs. John Junor, widow of the late John Junor, who passed away at the home of her son, John Junor, Brighton township, on Tuesday, May 9th, where she had resided for the past 13 years.

Mrs. Junor was born in the parish of Rosemarkie, Scotland, on Oct. 1, 1831, and with her husband came to Canada about 69 years ago, and settled at what is now Lakeport, on the Bay of Quinte, near Colborne. A year later Mr. and Mrs. Junor moved to Seymour township, and for 55 years occupied a farm on the Brighton and Campbellford highway, now occupied by J. W. Jones, and where Mr. Junor passed away 20 years ago.

About 18 months ago the deceased fell and broke her hip and wrist and has been in failing health ever since. Up to that time she was able to do her own work about the house. In religion she was a Presbyterian and for some 68 years a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Warkworth . The funeral services which were held at the home were conducted by Rev. Stillman A. Kemp, pastor of the United Church, Warkworth.

She leaves to mourn her loss two sons and three daughters, Mrs. Wallace McCall of Wooler; Mrs. Robt. Thompson, Miami, Manitoba; Mrs. John Runciman, Meyersburg; Alex. of Miami, Manitoba, and John at home.

The pallbearers were Arthur Russel; Jacob Clark; John Convey; Joshua Armstrong; John W. Jones and William Ross.

Interment took place at Warkworth, where her remains were laid to rest beside those of her husband.

125 MILES OF ROAD TAKEN FROM COUNTY ROAD SYSTEM AND RETURNED TO TOWNSHIPS

United Counties Council Sends Commission to Toronto to Explain.

DEPUTATIONS HEARD.

Usual Calls For Financial and Other Assistance Made Yesterday.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, June 12.—The Counties' councillors after their holiday to Rochester per Warden McCamus's excursion, got down to business again at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and put in extra work, meeting again in the evening and not adjourning until 11 o'clock. The main business transacted was the revision of the road map submitted by the Department of Highways, showing that it had been decided to take 125 miles of roads in Northumberland Durham from the county system and place them again under the jurisdiction of the various townships.

A number of the reeves objected to the changes proposed by the Department, hence the revision of the map. In this revision, the county road in Seymour Township on the east side of the river is left as it was, a distance of nearly eight miles. The total mileage restored to the county roads system as shown on the revised map is 26.

There is some doubt as to whether the Department will agree to this revision, and on motion of Reeves Ward and Davidson, the county roads commission and Superintendent Greer were instructed to go to Toronto as soon as possible to explain the matter to the highway officials.

Proposed Special Session.

Engineer Muir, who at the Tuesday session had been invited by wire to come to Cobourg to meet the Council with regard to this question, sent a telegram stating that he could not possibly accept the invitation, and suggesting that the Council hold a special session the first week in July for a conference with the advisory committee of the Legislative. Calling the councillors together for such a session would, however, involve an expense which all were anxious to avoid, and Mr. Muir's suggestion was not accepted.

To Reduce Assessment.

More Government-owned land, besides the 1,000 acres of Northumberland Forest in Haldimand Township will be exempted from taxation before the session closes. Deputy Reeve Wight gave notice that he will ask for a reduction of $9,700 on the equalized assessment of Darlington Township, in which is located the 200 acres of land purchased by the Ontario Government of the new industrial school.

When some of the councillors took the position that the new institution is a financial benefit to the township and the town of Bowmanville, Deputy Reeve Wight challenged the statement, and was backed up by Reeve Baker. The Government has built a siding to the school and all supplies are brought in from Toronto, A large number of cattle are pastured on the farm and these animals when in condition are sent to Guelph and slaughtered in the Government abattoir. The meat is then sent to the different Government institutions in the province.

Deputations Heard.

A number of deputations were heard during the afternoon session. A representative of an indemnity company offered to assume all claims for accidents in the two counties for a premium of $729 a year. On motion of Reeves Anderson and Deputy Reeve Austin this matter was referred to the County Roads Commission.

A. J. Henderson, an ex-warden, W. T. Donaldson of Cavan, a former member of council, and S. H. Winslow of Cavan, asked for a grant for the Plowmen's Association of Cavan and South Monaghan, all three referring to the substantial assistance the organization has received in the past from the citizens of Peterboro. The councils of the two townships referred to make yearly grants and the association gives about $200 in prizes every fall.

Their request was referred to the Agricultural Committee, of which Reeve McCubbin of Percy, is chairman. The committee met in the evening and unanimously decided to recommend that no action be taken.

Patrick Fitzpatrick of Rice Lake district asked that the road leading to the summer resort of Mrs. Richard Black be repaired to accommodate the tourists who come to it every summer. The Roads and Bridges Committee will report later on this application.

The municipal auditors: H. Reynolds of Morganston, and J. R. Rowe of Newcastle, submitted in person a report of the receipts and expenditures for the past year, the totals in each case having already been made public. The auditors are paid $75.00 each and out of this allowance they pay $25 each to have a typewritten statement prepared and for other clerical work.

Both auditors asked that the compensation be increased or that the council at least pay for the clerical work required. Another recommendation was that the auditors when found efficient be engaged permanently instead of being changed every year as under the present system.

This was referred to the Finance Committee.

Saw Highway Officials.

Deputy-Reeve Austin of Murray reported that instead of taking in the Wardens' excursion on Wednesday, he had gone to Toronto, and while in that city had called on Engineer Muir of the Highway Department, who had explained to him the proposition to reduce the county roads mileage. The reduction in the united counties was 34 per cent., and in Peterboro County 35 per cent. So far 11 counties in Ontario had objected to the proposed change and 18 had agreed. When the road system was inaugurated it was estimated that the counties of Northumberland and Durham would pay 17 per cent. of the cost of the Provincial and county Provincial highways and the actual charge had been only 13 per cent. The Department was unable to see where the counties had any reason to complain. There is at present a county road mileage of 364 miles, and it was proposed under the new arrangement to reduce this to 238.

Cost of Education.

The cost of secondary education, at least the counties share of the maintenance charges, is approximately $10,000 higher than it was in 1924, according to the report of the Committee on Schools. The grants to public schools are practically the same as those of last year.

So much time has been taken up with oratory that the council is somewhat behind with its work and when it resumes at 10 o'clock Friday morning it will be confronted with a mass of business. However, every effort will be made to finish the session by this evening. The matter of the Hastings pavement has yet to be disposed of.

Helping the Children

Deputy Reeve Palliser of Campbelford has taken a prominent part in extending financial support to the Children's Shelter at Port Hope. When Superintendent Daley at the January session asked that the monthly grant be increased from $300 to $350 Deputy Reeve Palliser moved that the request be granted but the motion was defeated.

Suprintendent Daley received his request on Monday and in the committee the Campbellford deputy reeve again moved that the increase be allowed to date from January 1st. An amendment by Reeve Bruce of Cartwright set the time for the increase at June 1st and this was carried.

To Present Petition

Reeve Anderson of South Monaghan wil circulate the following petition which will be presented at the Peterboro Council Council in midsummer session:

We, the undersigned ratepayers of the Township of South Monaghan hereby request the County Council of the County of Peterboro to add that part of the Public Highway in the Township of Otonabee leading from Bensfort Bridge to McAllister's Corners, a distance of about four miles, to the County Road System of the County of Peterboro.

FRANCIS STOKER ACQUITTED AT COBOURG JUNE SESSIONS

Charged With Arson and Shooting With Intent—Acquittal Yesterday.

PROFESSIONAL PRIDE.

Complainant Claimed He Was Returned Soldier—Resented by Stoker.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, June 12.—The trial of Francis Stoker, of Kendall, who was charged with arson and with shooting with intent was concluded yesterday and resulted in an acquittal. Judge Ward, who heard the evidence, in his address to the jury, charged strongly in favor of the defendant.

Stoker, who is a returned man, and who was badly gassed overseas, had for his next door neighbor, James Lawson, with whom he had been on unfriendly terms for some time. The evidence showed that this unpleasantness was caused by Lawson claiming that he, too, was a returned soldier, Stoker proving that this statement was untrue.

Lawson was the complaining witness, his charge being that Stoker had some time ago fired several shots through his window and had afterwards set fire to his house, which was destroyed.

Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr conducted the prosecution, and A. R. Willmott defended Stoker, adding another to his growing list of legal victories.

Charles Bedford, of Campbellford, was one of the jurors.

Think of the comfort it must be to mother and father to know Johnny is playing with the right boys instead of loitering on street corners or in lanes with a "gang".

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burto

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling young lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children!

She refuses to cook or keep house. She hires Ranghild Swanson to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she swamps him with debts for her clothes and an automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with Stanley Wayburn, an out-of-work actor. She and Wayburn, with May Seymour and Jim Carewe make a jolly foursome. Wayburn is offered a job on the New York stage. Gloria lends him $200 of Dick's money to help him out.

Dick becomes ill with pneumonia. When he recovers, Dr. John Seymour, husband of the flighty May, sends him away for a rest. Gloria refuses to go along, because Dick's mother, whom she hates, is going.

As soon as they leave on their trip, Gloria sets out for New York. She goes straight to Wayburn. But he spurns her, and tells her he has just married his leading woman, Sonya Chotek.

For two weeks Gloria tries to land a job and fails. Finally she comes home to Dick. He takes her back into the house, but not as his wife. He feels sure that she would never have come home if Wayburn had wanted her to stay in New York. One night after her return Gloria finds Dick having dinner in a downtown restaurant with his secretary, Miss Briggs, of whom Gloria has always been jealous.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I hardly ever eat here, "Dick answered. "So she couldn't have guessed I was coming here, in a month of Sundays. Come on, let's go! I've had enough of this!—Do you want to come back to the office with me, or are you going home?"

"I'm not going back to the office," Gloria answered shortly. And left him.

She didn't want to go home, either. After Dick had left her she walked slowly along George street, looking into the shop windows and the lighted lobbies of the moving picture theaters.

Suddenly she saw two faces that she knew in the moving throng around her . . . little blond Mrs. Wing and Gretchen Geist. The two were chums. Gloria had played cards with them dozens of times. They had been at her house for lunch, often.

And now she smiled at them in greeting. But the smile froze on her lips.

For both women looked her full in the face for a moment. Neither spoke. Then they looked sharply away. And the coldness in their eyes were like a slap across Gloria's face. She smarted under it.

She stood, quivering, for a long moment. Here was a new problem!

These women must have heard the story of her love affair with Stanley Wayburn . . . these women who had been her good friends. Oh, she couldn't lose them! They were the people with whom she would have to live her life, now that she had come back to Dick!

As a drowning man clutches at a straw, Gloria's thoughts turned to Mother Gregory. She would have to go to Dick's mother and ask her to stand by her. As long as Dick's own mother was her friend, no one would dare to believe the story that she had left Dick for Stanley Wayburn!

Gloria looked at the clock in a jewelry store. Half past nine. Too late to see Mother Gregory tonight. . . . She would go to her first thing in the morning, though.

In the meantime, she could telephone May Seymour. May would be sure to know whatever gossip was "out"a bout her. May was a born news pad.

There were scores of people in this town of ours who "knew for a fact" that Gloria Gregory had left her husband, and had run away with a Broadway actor named Stanley Wayburn.

No one knew where the nasty bit of gossip had started. But it flew all over town on the wings of the wind.

Gloria's card club heard it, and voted Gloria out of the club.

Lola Hough heard it and said it wasn't true. She defended Gloria.

May Seymour heard it, and said she didn't blame Gloria for going. May, herself, would have been glad to escape to New York for a few weeks. For the gossips were busy with her and Jim Carewe again.

"Sure they've been talking about you," she told Gloria cheerfully that night on the telephone. "They say you ran away with Wayburn, and that Dick went down to New York and brought you home."

Gloria sighed dismally.

"What a tale!" she said. If they must talk, why don't they get things straight?"

"Didn't you run away with Stanley Wayburn?" There was surprise in May's voice. She, too, believed the story of Gloria's desertion of Dick.

"Of course not! Don't be silly!" Gloria said sharply. "I went down to New York to go on the stage. I didn't even see Stan Wayburn!"

"That was a lie," she told herself bluntly, as she left the telephone, and began to undress, "but it's my story and I'm going to stick to it!"

She would never let anyone know that she had followed Wayburn to New York and that he had turned her down! She could never raise her head again and look people in the eye, if they had found that out!

Gloria tiptoed out into the hall and half way down the stairs. She thought she heard the sound of Dick closing the door. But no one was in the lower hall. The clock there struck twelve slowly and boomingly.

Where was Dick? Why didn't he come? . . . Surely he and Miss Briggs couldn't be working until midnight—

Suddenly as Gloria stood there on the stairs, she was afraid.

The empty house seemed to be filled with strange sounds and rustlings. The pantry door creaked. . . And was something or somebody moving in the dark dining-room?

With her heart in her mouth, Gloria dashed back upstairs to her room. She slammed and bolted the door behind her.

The lights in her room were blazing. Without stopping to turn them off, she plunged into bed and pulled the covers up over her head like a frightened child.

She lay trembling for long minutes, listening for the sound of Dick's key in the lock. . . . Where in the world was he at this hour of the night? Why didn't he come home? He had no right to leave his wife alone in the house half the night while he was out, doing . . . what? That was the question!

Surely he and Miss Briggs weren't still working in Dick's office? Where were they? Together, somewhere? . . . The questions swarmed like bees in Gloria's brain. She forgot her fear. Anger toward Dick took its place.

She swung her feet over the side of the bed and stepped out onto the rug. Then she put her head out of one of the open windows and looked up and down the street. But it lay empty and still under the hushed calm of midnight.

As Gloria stood there, she heard a sound in the house, itself! It came from downstairs . . . the harsh tinkle of metal against metal. Someone was at the silver in the sideboard drawers! Burglars!

Gloria pressed one hand tight to her breast. She felt as if her heart were jumping out of her body . . . it beat so fast! She tiptoed across the room to the door that led into the hall. She put her ear against it and listened for a long time. But there was no further sound.

Gloria began to wonder if she really had heard a noise, downstairs or not? Perhaps her tired brain had been playing her tricks. . . .

Well, as soon as Dick came she would find out if anyone had been in the house? She wouldn't be afraid to go downstairs to the dining room then. But why didn't he come?

Gloria got back into bed, and lay waiting for him. Oh, but wouldn't she pan him when he did get home, though! The very idea! Leaving her alone as if she were Lola Hough, or any other faded, middle-aged wife!

She'd let him know she wasn't going to be treated like this. . . . She'd leave him first! That's what she'd do. She had done it once, and she'd do it again! . . .

The next thing Gloria knew it was morning. Her room was filled with the warmth and sunshine of early June. Through the open windows came the sound of a neighbor's lawn-mower and the sweet smell of fresh-cut grass.

Gloria smiled and stretched herself like a tiger-kitten. Then she remembered last night. She frowned.

Softly she went out into the hall and listened at Dick's door. No sound within! She opened the door and peeked into the room.

The bed had been slept in. Dick's pajamas lay on the rug beside it, where he had stepped out of them. There were ashes in the tray on the bedside table. He had been home part of the night at least. . . . And he had gone that morning without even saying goodby!

Gloria closed the door of his room.

"I'll be jiggered if I make his bed or clean up the place!" she said to herself. "He can't treat me like a servant and expect I'll be one for him! Because I won't!"

While she was waiting for her tub to fill, she went downstairs to the dining room. The drawers of the sideboard were piled one on top of each other on the floor. They were empty.

So there had been burglars in the house last night! And they had taken every piece of the flat silver that had been Mother Gregory's wedding present! Not so much as a spoon was left!

Gloria shivered. Then it was the burglar she had heard taking the silver out of the sideboard drawers! . . . And it must have been the burglar whom she had seen moving stealthily against the darkness of the dining-room, last night! He must have been in the house when she entered it alone!

Why, she might have been shot, if she hadn't run upstairs when she did!

Gloria burst into tears of panic at the terrible thought.

. . . Well, she'd stand no more of Dick's neglect. The very idea of his sending her home alone at nine o'clock at night to a dark house! And then leaving her alone in it until 'way past midnight. She bet she'd never let him do a stunt like that again to her. . . .

She bathed and dressed. She didn't stop to dust or make beds.

But, leaving the house just as it was, Gloria closed the door of it behind her, and started out. She was going to see Mother Gregory! She'd let her know whose fault it was that Dick's marriage was a fizzle!

She was through talking to Dick . . . through pleading with him to treat her decently, Gloria told herself.

But she knew she was only trying to bolster up her vanity. Under all her bravado, she knew that the fact of the matter was that Dick was through with her! . . . She had seen it in his eyes the night she had come home from New York. She had heard it in the indifferent tone he used when he talked to her. And his indifference was maddening her. She couldn't stand it!

She had always had love and indulgence from Dick. He had treated her like a beautiful, spoiled little girl. And now he hardly looked at her.

Gloria's heart was heavy as she rang the doorbell of the old Gregory homestead. Maggie opened the door for her.

She found Mother Gregory eating her substantial breakfast of ham and eggs, rolls and coffee. Her face was flushed with too much food.

"Well, Gloria!" she cried in her rich, full voice. She got up from the table.

She put her well-rounded arms about Gloria and gave her a peck on either cheek.

"Come upstairs and talk to me while I get dressed," she said, steering Gloria out of the dining-room.

She nodded her head in the direction of Maggie, who was listening with all her might.

"We'll talk up here where Maggie can't hear every word we say," she told Gloria in a stage whisper as they mounted the wide stair-case. "What did you come to see me about, Glory?"

She knew that this was no friendly call the girl was making. She knew that Gloria didn't like her any more than she, herself, liked Gloria. She was sure that Gloria had come on a special errand.

The girl curled herself up in a little ball on the hard leather window seat in Mother Gregory's room. It was a room as plain as the woman who slept in it . . . a woman who scorned silk underwear and make-up as only Mother Gregory could scorn them! There were no cushions in that room, no ruffled curtains, no dressing-table laden with perfume and powder boxes.

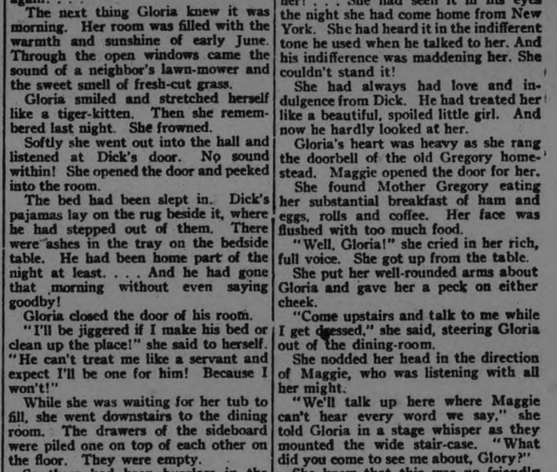
"Women often ask me — says Mrs. Experience — how I get my table linen so immaculate"



"I take it as a real compliment, because most women do try to excel in their table linen.

"Of course, I tell them the way I've found easiest and best is with Sunlight—just rubbing the linen lightly with Sunlight, rolling it up and putting it to soak. After soaking, perhaps a light rubbing here and there may be called for, then just rinse, and the linen is spotlessly clean. Fine linens should be protected and never come into contact with anything but the purest soap.

"As a household soap there is nothing better or more economical than Sunlight. Every particle is pure soap, with no wasteful 'filler'. Sunlight is mild and easy on the hands, too." Lever Brothers Limited of Toronto, make it.

YOUR GARDEN

STAKING AND CARE OF FLOWERING PLANTS.

The perennial border particularly will need a good deal of attention by way of staking.

Peonies will be the first plants to require supporting and they are a somewhat difficult problem. Unless of very stocky varieties they will droop in every direction, giving the appearance of a collar about the plant and leaving the centre open. Staking, on the other hand, must be strong, and is liable to be conspicuous. Where the peonies are in a border by themselves a permanent rack of wood may be built over the border and the shoots trained up inside this rack. One side of the rack may be removed, when the peonies are well grown, and replaced when the peonies have been arranged. For individual specimens, a barrel hoop supported on three uprights may be used or one of the adjustable wire hoop supports on the market. Care should be exercised to adjust the support at the right height to give a graceful appearance or the cure will be worse than the original trouble.

The dahlia is a plant that requires careful staking and attention. Ordinarily it is grown to one shoot, and this should be tied regularly at necessary intervals or it will readily twist and break. Use stout stakes well driven into the ground and of the height you are accustomed to grow your plants, usually measuring four to five feet above ground.

Larkspurs, Golden Glow, the New England and other asters, the Sneeze weed and many of the taller growing perennials will be whipped around and beaten down badly by the wind and rain unless they are staked. The taller annuals, as Cosmos, will also need attention. Use inconspicuous stakes of wire or wood painted a good green, and endeavor to so arrange and tie them that little of the support will show. Prevention in staking is better than cure.

The pegging down of verbenas, annual phlox and petunias will result in a much greater amount of bloom. Simply insert hooks of wire at intervals to peg the stems to the earth. A dense mat of flowering growth will result and the straggly appearance so often seen will be avoided.

Keep dead blooms and leaves off the plants at all times, especially of the bedding varieties, as a neat appearance is most desirable. The tips of bedding plants may be pinched out occasionally to encourage sturdier growth.

The foliage of the hardy bulbs should be cut off as soon as they have thoroughly ripened and dried somewhat.

FEW PERSONS WALK CHALK LINE

Straight Course Rarely Held By Pedestrians, Science Shows.

Have you ever tried to walk a chalk line? If you have, you probably found it difficult. The reason is obvious—your supporting base was narrowed, and you had to support your body almost on a point.

But can you walk in a straight line employing your usual gait, with feet at a normal distance apart? Without hesitation you will say "Yes." However, unless yours is an unusual case you are wrong. You can't do it. This has been proved definitely by interesting scientific tests recently completed, writes Robert E. Martin in Popular Science Monthly.

Try it yourself. Walk across a wide plaza or through an open meadow toward on object on the other side. Unless you make a concentrated effort, not permitting your vigilance to relax even for a second, you will probably find yourself veering off sharply to the right or left.

At the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., Dr. J. Q. Holsopple of the Department of Psychology, is investigating equilibrium and orientation, which means your ability to keep your balance and your direction. The straightest of all walkers—virtually the only straight walker among mankind—Doctor Holsopple says, is a blind man, for the blind man has learned to walk by ear. That does not mean by listening, but through understanding of the messages transmitted to the brain by the semicircular canals in the ear that govern our ability to maintain our balance and our equilibrium.

These canals contain a fluid that moves in the direction in which we move. When we whirl rapidly about, the fluid is disturbed and we become dizzy. When we move forward, the fluid moves forward, and we receive the sensation of forward motion. When we stop, the motion of the fluid stops and transmits to the brain a sensation of moving in the opposite direction. Close your eyes in a railroad train, an automobile or an elevator as it stops. Without your eyes to tell you whether you are at rest or in motion for a few seconds after you stop the semicircular canals in your ears will cause you to believe you are traveling in a direction opposite to that in which you have been moving. You can test this strange effect by permitting some one to whirl you about on a piano stool or swivel chair. You can also test the odd propensity of humankind to move in circles by walking blindfolded across level ground.

CROPS ARE GOOD AROUND DUNSFORD

Rain Helped to Provide Setting For Bumper Yield of Grain.

DUNSFORD, June 12.—In spite of all the heavy rain showers last week more rain would be a benefit to the farmers now.

The crops are progressing most rapidly. At present there is a better look out for a bumper crop in this community than there has been for several years.

The garden crops are extra good too. Most people are using their onions, lettuce, etc. for the last few days or a week. Then in the flower garden are masses of early roses, lillies, poppies, and pansies

Countyroad work is in full swing now. The gang working at the Star Cheese factory on the road to Bobcaygeon, under E. Mitchell expects to complete the job in about a up to J. P. Kennedy's corner, about up to J. P. Kenedy's Corner, about two miles south of this village.

The township road work is going on too. L. Bell of Lindsay has charge of the stone crusher. At present they are working on the road north of here, which leads to Thurstonia but expect to move eastward.

Last Sunday, being the last Sunday before Church Union and the closing of the Presbyterian church here, there was a very large turnout to service conducted by Rev. Mr. Drum.

Rain recently fell in parts of South America for the first time in more than 100 years.

DARING HOLD-UP IN HULL STORE

Two Men Attack Clerk and Steal Cash in Broad Daylight.

TOOK $30

HULL, Que., June 12.— (Canadian Press.) — A daring daylight hold-up was staged in a chain grocery store here Wednesday afternoon, when two men choked and slashed Alphonse Gravelle, the clerk, and cleaned the till of $30 in cash. The two men entered the store and as Gravelle turned his back to serve them, one of the men jumped on the clerk, crushing him to the floor. During the scuffle one of the robbers reached out and seized a bread knife and lunged at the clerk with it. Gravelle's wrist was slightly injured and he was considerably shaken up by the shock. The men escaped before passers-by could stop them.

MASONS SEVERED FRENCH RELATIONS

Manitoba Lodge Disapproves of Action Taken By French Brethren.

WINNIPEG, June 12. —(Canadian Press.)—Severing of foreign relations with the Grand Orient of France was decided upon by the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons at the first business session of the fiftieth annual communication here yesterday. This action was taken owing to the invasion by the French craft of the United States' jurisdiction, with which the Manitoba Grand Lodge has friendly relations.

Various committee reports were dealt with at the morning session, which was attended by more than 400 delegates, and James A. Ovas, Grand Secretary, reported the craft to be in a flourishing condition in this province.

Delegates attended a complimentary luncheon yesterday given by the Past Masters' Association of Winnipeg, at which Rt. Rev. S. P. Matheson, Archbishop of Rupert's Land, and the oldest Past Grand Master of the craft in the jurisdiction, his term of office having been in 1879, was a speaker.

HOLDING BOY AT CHILDREN'S SHELTER

Lad Found With Italian Vagrant Is Ward of Ontario.

REGINA, Sask., June 12.—(Canadian Press.)— Oscar Chartres, a boy of 15, and said to be a ward of the Ontario Government, is now in the Children's Shelter here, having been taken into custody by the police with Jim Giscomo, an adult Italian, who was beating his way on a freight train to Vancouver. The two met at an employment office here and apparently agreed to make the journey together. Charters said he ran away from Carleton Place, Ont., having been brought out from England by some organization. Giscomo was fined $5 and Charters will be held pending advice from Ontario.

"USE BRITISH GOODS."

British Federation Wishes Finances to Start Empire Publicity.

LONDON, June 12.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—The Federation of British Industries has lodged a detailed scheme with the Board of Trade to conduct on a broad basis an Empire publicity scheme "to use British goods." It will be coordinated with other measures to which the Government's fund of £1,000,000 may be applied. The Federation asks from the Government financial and other assistance and contends that experience has shown that national campaigns along these lines have had substantial results when they were sufficiently prolonged and intensive.

HEAT IN IRELAND IS OPPRESSIVE

But Visiting Doctors Are Not Bothered—Delightful Time.

COSGRAVE RECEIVES

DUBLIN, June 12. (Canadian Press).—The prevailing heat wave, an unusual occurrence in Ireland, and which the natives find oppressive, is causing no trouble to the Canadian and United States doctors who are visiting Ireland. All of them express delight over the arrangements that have been made for their entertainment.

Last night President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State gave the visitors a reception which was attended by Senators, Deputies, leaders in the Irish medical profession and a brilliant company of persons connected with learned, artistic and literary societies.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

HANDY IN THIS UN CHIVALROUS AGE

The woman who carries this type of handbag can be assured of a seat at any time and any place. To the unsuspecting mind there is nothing unusual about the bag except that it may be a little overgrown, but that is nothing as bags go. Inside, however, it contains a framework that is capable of being erected to form a comfortable seat for the not too heavy. For races, sports, sketching—and even in street cars when the men sit pat, it is highly recommended.

ARE YOU TO BLAME FOR MONEY LACK?

Straight Talk to Women About Money—and Husbands.

By MAE ELIZABETH ALLEN

Is your husband inefficient because he is poor— or efficient because he is rich?

Many rich men are like little Jack Horner. "They put in their thumb and pull out a plum and say 'What a big boy am I!"

Men, after they are wealthy, are naturally very likely to ascribe their success to their own efforts, their thrift, their saving capacity, their hard work. When they relate their biographies they stress these points, thereby giving the impression that men who are poor lack those qualities which led to their success. But many poor men have worked just as hard, and have been as thrifty as is at all possible under their circumstances, and yet they are poor, and the other men are rich. Why? This is a question that troubles many people.

There are other factors involved in success besides thrift and hard work. Any of us can recall knowing two men with about the same qualities of character and education, starting out together with different firms. In one case the firm succeeds and the individual rides up with it; in the other the firm is a failure and the second individual must get another job and begin all over again. In these days of large scale industry surely neither of the two men can be considered responsible entirely for his success or failure, unless it be for the failure of one in picking the wrong boss.

Take another example: Two men start small business establishments in different parts of town. One neighborhood develops and grows, the other deteriorates. Can either of these men be held as entirely responsible for such developments? Two men have saved enough money and invest it in property or in bonds One makes a good investment, the other a bad one. This, too, is in a large measure beyond their control Upon closer analysis it is seen that other beside personal qualities enter into men's success, and women whos e husbands have not "made good" to the degree that many of their friends have, will do well to realize this.

But under any circumstances men and women are able to learn a great deal by their neighbors' successes and failures, if they observe carefully. They will learn how to choose their investments more cautiously: they will study the development of the neighborhood in which they buy property, as to its trend, instead of purchasing impulsively. Before setting up in businessa thorough analysis of all factors is seen to be necessary, in this way one directs success in a large measure. Men and women who study never lose thereby.

Before a wife makes up her mind that her husband is a "failure" and nags him into a sense of incompetency in his dealings with other men, thereby inviting upon herself and family the doom which she fears, it is just as well for her to consider these other factors which enter into failure or success. Her husband may have greater natural capacities and maybe a finer conscience, than many a man who has more to show for his years in the trade. And did the wife only know all, she might be prouder of him than ever.

RHUBARB FINE AS STRETCHER OF PRESERVES

Can be Added to Delicate Fruits Without Changing Flavor.

SOME EXAMPLES

Combinations Increase Quality and Help to Spin Out Supply.

Rhubarb is invaluable as a fruit stretcher, so to speak. This common garden plant can be added to delicate fruits, increasing the quantity without changing the quality or flavor of the finished product.

These recipes may suggest other combinations to suit your particular needs.

RHUBARB AND PINEAPPLE MARMALAADE

Two cups finely chopped rhubarb, 2 cups shredded pineapple, 3 cups sugar, ½ cup of water.

Cook pineapple in the water for twenty minutes, Add rhubarb and cook until rhubarb is very soft Sift in sugar and cook one hour. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin when cold.

SPICED RHUBARB

Two and one-half pounds rhubarb, 2 pounds granulated sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon cloves ½ teaspoon ginger,1 scant cup vinegar.

Wash and skin rhubarb and cut in inch lengths. Put a little water in preserving kettle, add rhubarb, cover and bring to the boiling point. Mix and sift sugar and spices over rhubarb. Add vinegar and simmer until thick, when a spoonful is tried on a cold saucer. Pour into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin when cold.

RHUBARB AND STRAWBERRY JAM

One pound rhubarb, 2 pounds strawberries, 2 pounds granulated sugar.

Wash and skin rhubarb . Wash and hull berries. Cut rhubarb into small pieces or put through the food chopper. Catch the juice from the rhubarb that drips from the crank case. Combine rhubarb, juice and sugar, Add berries and let stand until sugar is dissolved. Put over a low fire and bring to the boiling point. Stir frequently to prevent sticking and crush the fruit. Cook until a spoonful tried on a cold saucer jellies. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin when cold.

RHUBARB AND STRAWBERRY CONSERVE

Two cups finely chopped rhubarb, 2 cups chopped pineapple, 2 cups hulled strawberries, ½cup blanched and shredded almonds, 4½ cups sugar.

Pare and remove eyes from pineapple. Cut out core and put through the coarse knife of food chopper, catching the juice that runs from the crank. Combine fruit and juice and bring to the boiling point. Simmer ten minutes. Add strawberries cut in small pieces and rhubarb finely chopped. Bring to the boiling point and sift in sugar. Cook, stirring to prevent sticking for about 1 hour or until as thick as desired. Add almonds and pour into sterilized jelly glasses. Cover with paraffin when cold.

RHUBARB RELISH

Two pounds rhubarb, ¼ pound seeded and chopped raisins, ½ pound stoned and chopped dates, 3 cups vinegar, 2 pounds light brown sugar, 1 tablespoon chili peppers, 1 1-2 tablespoons salt, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1-2 cup chopped English walnut meats.

Combine raisins and dates and let stand in vinegar for 1 hour. Skin rhubarb and cut in half-inch pieces Add to first mixture with all the remaining ingredients except the nuts. Cook slowly, stirring frequently for two hours. Add nuts and cook ten minutes longes. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin when cold.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

FRIDAY, JUNE 12.—If to-day is your birthday, you have a strong religious nature, due to the influence of the zodiacal sign of Gemini, the twins, undr which you are born. You are a Fundamentalist and vigorously oppose those who doubt the Bible story of the Virgin birth. In a controversy over evolution, you probably will line up with those who oppose its teaching. But you will not be narrow in your every day dealings with your fellow-men and your life will have more happiness than sorrow. The chances are that you will not marry until after a long courtship and engagement.

Cynthia Grey Says

WHEN YOU GO TO A MOVIE.

Perhaps tonight, when the dishes are done, you're going with your family to the movies.

But you're not wildly excited about it, are you? Of course not.

And yet, if you stop to think about it, it's the most royal entertainment this world has ever seen.....the motion picture.

For there's everything in it that has amused kings and queens for centuries ....races, bull fights, ballets, as well as more serious things.

It shows the whole world to us .....from New York City to the unprofitable but romantic isles of the sea. And it takes us back into history, to watch Madame Pompadour persuade Louis XV of France to do as she wished him to do, or watch Moses explain the Ten Commandments to those who followed him.

"Let's go to see Pola Negri tonight," the children of the family suggest.

But "Pola Negri" or "Blanche Sweet" arent the stars of the picture. The picture, itself, with its throw-back into past centuries is the thing worth seeing!

The person who goes to the movies to be amused or to see a great star flicker her lashes or drop a tear into her handkerchief isn't getting one-tenth of the interest from the silver sheet that is there, waiting to be found.

Teach your children that one of the most instructive things in the world is the common everyday "movie." For it is. It's art and poetry, history and drama.

It gives us, even at its worst, a cross-section of life as it is being lived .....or has been lived ..... somewhere. And as George Meredith wrote:

"Life is worthy of the Muse."

Fashion Fads

NEW YORK, June 12 (United Press)—Small felt hats have their flat and brimless backs adorned with novelty pins and buckles. The wearing of the hat ornament in the rear is a new millinery note.

* * *

Colorful scarfs are more numerous than fur neckpieces in New York. Plaids are perhaps the smartest scarfs at present, although batiks and printed silks are still popular. Very few plain colored scarfs are noted.

Designed for sports wear are the crepe de chene frocks with matching jacquettes of velveteen. Colors most popular are jade, shrimp pink, golden brown, burnt orange, and yellow.

The barrel-shaped silhouette is shown on some of the advance frocks. It is doubtful, however, whether this will become a widely worn silhouette.

For the girl who wants to be kittenish are little silk gingham romper suits which are worn as undergarments. This idea started on Broadway when several gown houses designed gingham rompers for practice suits for the girls of the Follies. A few housewives bought them to wear during the laborious hours and found them so becoming that they demanded lingerie in romper style. Tiny pink and white checked gingham is the popular shade. A pattern of a child's romper suit will give one the idea.

Bows at the back of the neck with ends extending to the waist are a popular neck finish to the summer gown.

DAINTY DRESS ISN'T ALWAYS A LIABILITY

Business Men's Fads Queered This Girl's Career, for a While.

WOMEN'S BUSINESS

Falderalls Do Not Hurt Chances of Success—Sometimes Help.

A girl started out as a commercial traveller. Her employer warned her to dress plainly. "There is no time for falderalls in business," she was told. "Concentrate on selling goods and leave the fancy frocks and hats for Sunday and holidays."

Anxious to succeed, she did as she was told, following her employers' advice to the letter. She was really a very pretty girl, but in spite of the fact that she wore severely plain tweeds, low-heeled shoes, and unobstrusive hats, she found business very hard to get. In the first place, she seldom saw the buyers. When she gave her card and asked to see the buyer, it was generally returned to her with the words, "Nothing in your line required today, Miss. Glad to see you some other time."

Of all the jobs in the world, that of trying to get orders, and not succeeding, is the very worst. Our friend got very downcast and low-hearted, and she felt she would have to throw the whole thing up. "She was a failure, and it wasn't a bit of use going on." One day she was going to a wedding, and as she surveyed herself in the mirror, she thought, "I wonder what effect this frock would have on those supercilious youths who take in my card to the buyers. I'll try it before I finally hand in my resignation."

She was really the last word in smartness in that wedding guest outfit, but not a bit like a girl who required to work for a living. There was a distinct jauntiness to the angle of her hat, while her gown and cloak were or black velvet and distinctly theatrical. Also, she wore dangling ear-rings, and no one could possibly have thought this fashionably-dressed young lady and the demure little commercial were one and the same person.

At her first call in her smart clothes, she was quite distinctly flattered over the attention paid to her. All the young men in the office moved to the counter to see what she required. Her card was taken in, and word came out immediately that the buyer wished to see her. She went in, and the great man was courtesy itself. He certainly seemed surprised at the vision talking business, but the important thing was that he gave her quite a good order, and also paid her a little compliment about the courage of young ladies taking up the hard life of the road.

All that day her experience was the same. She found that many of the places where she had been in the habit of calling didn't even remember her before. Needless to say, the days of the plain tweed suit were over. She might not seem suitably dresesd in her smart clothes, but they brought her business.

Now, business girls are always reading or being told the correct way to dress for business, and to leave powder-puffs at home along with all pretty clothes. Many men make the mistake of thinking that dowdily-cut, ugly clothes, in drab colours, and suitable business clothes, are one and the same thing, and that only those should be worn to offices and shops. But you may rest assured that it isn't the dowdily-dressed girl who gets on in life. She may keep her mind closely centred on her work; her only interests maybe those of her employer; she, it may be, is considered the backbone of the business, but, alas, for poor human nature, you will find that it is the girl who pays most attention to her clothes, her face, and her figure, who achieves the greatest success in life, in business, and in matrimony.

She may not be able to add up columns of figures quite so quickly or type her letters so perfectly as her plainer neighbour, but there is a joyousness and a brightness about her that has a very high value apart from her business capacity.

And the moral of all this is, if you have to face the world, do it in the very best clothes you can afford. Don't be afraid of not looking like your work. Who wants to do that, anyway. The thing is to make work appear as beautiful as you are. Then everyone will be grateful to you. You will throw light on grey places; men will look for your coming, and think, when you are hovering about in their dingy old offices and dusty warehouses, that life isn't such a colourless thing after all.

EARLY DOURO DAYS

P. J. TOWNS

Douro being organized into a Township, an election took place in January, 1850. Great enthusiasm was shown in the election, which was a close one. The members elected for the first council of Douro Township were Messrs. George Clark, Sam Strickland, David Porter, Francis F. Stewart, James Moher, and Denis Leahy. The first Township meeting took place January 21, 1850 at the home of Jim Leahy which stood on the south-west corner of lot 6, in the 7th concession of Douro. All members were present and a very interesting meeting ensued. Mr. Clark, receiving the majority of votes, was appointed reeve, and took the chair. After the oath of office had been administered the council proceeded to appoint officers for the year and frame by-laws for the welfare of the Township. The following were the first officers of the Township: Daniel Sullivan, clerk; David Porter, assessor; John Leahy, collector; James Hogan, superintendent of schools; Michiel O'Brien, treasurer and James Lynch and Timothy Leahy were joint auditors. It was passed in council that cattle be allowed to run at large, while turkeys and geese were not allowed that privilege. The poundage fees on turkeys and geese, after the first 24 hours, was a penny a day per head. Recommendation was made at the meeting of March 18, 1850, to build a school on the boundary between Douro and Otonabee, now known as S.S. No. 9, Douro, also one on lot 8, concession 5, north side of Dummer road and repairs in school No. 7.

The first meeting of the council was attended by a great number of local visitors including Adam King, Harry Sheehan, Patsy Horan, Peter Dalton, John Richardson, Thos. Buckley, Loughlin Nolan, Chris. Couch and Roger Fahy, who sat leisurely smoking clay pipes, listening to the funny yerns which were told by Peter Fitz and Mathew KillCauly, while Mick. Mahoney passed around the snuff box. At a meeting on June 3, Francis Stewart resigned and his seat was filled by S. Reid. In January 1851, Sam Strickland received the most votes and was appointed Reeve, but he resigned July 5 the same year and David Porter took the chair, and held it for the remainder of the year. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Strickland for his able services as Reeve of Douro Council. Daniel Sheehan was appointed clerk for 1851.

The following members wwre elected to the council for 1852; David Porter, Jas. Moher, Michael Torpey, James Hogan, Mr Porter being elected Reeve by the council. The officers were: Michael O'Brien, treasurer; Kim Tighe, assessor, John Leahy, collector. It was moved that the appointment of Edward Cady to the office of pound-keeper be cancelled and the clerk to notify him of the same. Patrick Walsh was appointed overseer of highways in the place of Robert Walsh. John Leahy, Jr. was appointed township constable on September 20, 1852. The poundage fees placed on stock were: Young cattle, six-pence per day; Pigs, four-pence per day; Sheep, two-pence per day. Advertising two shillings and six-pence; Damages 2 shillings.

In those days doctors were scarce, also money, and in every locality there was one of the pioneers who would take the place of the professional man. A very noteworthy accident is told by William J. Moher, one of the most highly esteemed and respected residents of Douro. When Mr. Moher was a boy he was riding in an ox-cart belonging to the late Denis O'Brien, lot 4, concession 5 of Douro. The oxen ran away, coming down a hill on the Fifth Line and the pin which held the box came out and dumped the cart, throwing Mr. Moher on the ground with such force that it broke his leg. He tried to get up but could not. He was carried home by the late David Hamilton, father of George Hamilton, who still resides in Douro. On his arrival the boy's father went for Maurice Clancy, an old blacksmith who came out with Robinson. Mr. Clancy made a box and set the leg and though the boy was laid up for the winter he is now hail and hearty, and drives a team and plows, at the ripe age of 83 years.

Edward Beatty was elected Reeve January 1853. The following had been elected councillors, David Porter, James Moher, John Delaney and John Carnagie. Mr. Beatty resigned the reeveship on November 15 and Mr. Porter took his place for the balance of the year. During those years much trouble was incurred in enforcing the poundage laws, and up to date there had been over twenty appeals on which fines had been refunded. A resolution was passed that the poundkeepers with which the pigs belonging to John Leahy and Patrick Farley and the horses belonging to Denis Leahy, were lodged, return the said fines. The councillors allowance in 1853 was five shillings a day. The council was beset with innumerable petitions for extra work to improve the roads. Money being very scarce, and though the taxes were low many of the ratepayers had to straighten up their obligations to the township on paper or notes payable six months hence. A petition to the council was presented by David Gorman and others asking for a sum of money to build a bridge over the creek, crossing road, which runs between concession 3 and 4 in front of lot 6. After discussing the proposition thoroughly the council decided to give Mr. Gorman the sum of three pounds to assist in making the bridge and Mr. Gorman left, singing cheerfully.

A by-law was passed on Monday, October 3, 1855, to levy the sum of sixty pounds to be collected on the taxable property of the township as taxes for the said year.

Struggles of the people of Douro in those days were very great, in fact it would be impossible for the present generation to comprehend just how great. It would be well to relate a story of Mrs. Denny McCarty, whose maiden name was Mary Delaney. She, with her husband, was carrying a hundred pounds of flour in turn, with other provisions from Peterborough, when, near a creek, which runs through lot 6 concession 2, Mr. McCarty slipped and sprained his ankle. The only way they had to cross the creek was on a log flattened on the top side. Lest he should fall in the creek, Mrs. McCarthy, who was a strong woman, took him under one arm and the bag of flour, to balance her under the other and carried him across the water safely. As many of the roads were only trails it was common when some one died that two men would carry the coffin on their shoulders from Peterborough. A man by the name of John Barry died on a farm in the neigh bourhood of Buckleys Lake, so two men set out to Peterborough for the coffin, having to wait until the coffin was made, and the weather being warm, the friends were forced to bury the corpse with a hollow log as a coffin. They sent a messenger to tell the men who were bringing the coffin that he was buried. The messenger met them near the spot where the filtration plant now stands, and they left the coffin on the roadside. As the twilight drew near, a young man, fond of playing tricks, go into this coffin to await the arrival of some chums who were to pass that way. As the chums came up he gently raised the top of the coffin, and the crowd ran away in terror. This young man was placed again in the same casket, as he was drowned in the Otonabee river near Lakefield, and was buried in the coffin with which he had frightened his companions only ten days previous.

In the election for 1854 Messrs. Jas. Hogan, Sam Strickland, D. Porter, Jas. Moher and John Delaney were elected, Mr. Hogan being elected Reeve by vote of council. The first meeting of the council was held at Tim Leahy's house. The officers appointed were Robert Casement, clerk, John Leahy, collector; Michael O'Brien, treasurer; Chas. Tighe, assessor; John Leahy, Jr., constable. Mr. Leahy resigned and John Sullivan, Jr. was appointed. M. Mahoney resigned and Tim Leahy was appointed poundkeeper in his stead. Sam Strickland was appointed to carry a resolution of congratulations to the president and directors of the Cobourg and Peterborough railroad and had dinner with them in Peterborough.

The following were appointed returning officers for the election of 1855. R. Casement, returning officer ward No. 1; Edward Brown, ward No. 2; Daniel Sheehan, ward No. 3; Patrick Heron, ward No. 4 and Mathew Scully, ward No. 5. After a warm election in 1855, the following members were returned, James Hogan, James Moher, M. Torpey, H. Walley and Mr. Reid. Council met at Patrick Costello's home on the 16th of January. Mr. Costello provided a room for the council to meet in during 1855, and Peter Fitzpatrick for 1856. The officers appointed for 1855 were: Henry Sheehan, collector; Michael O'Brien, treasurer; Chas. Tighe, assessor; John Richardson and Patrick Costello, auditors. It was then moved that the next meeting be held in School house No. 7, but Mr. Costello offered his room which was accepted.

The election of 1856 resulted in the following council being elected. Messrs. Sam Strickland, David Hogan, on the vote of the council Mr. Hogan was elected Reeve. The council met in P. Costello's house on Jan. 21, 1855, and the officers for the year were appointed —R. Casement, clerk; Henry Sheehan, collector; Dan Sullivan and Henry Carveth, auditors. The next meetingon Monday March 3rd was held in the house of Peter Fitzpatrick. In order to keep down expenses for the ratepayers, the council had been holding meetings at different places in the township, but in the year 1856 the council decided to build a town hall at either Mahoney's Corner or Timothy Leahy's Corner, amended by the words "or elsewhere." The North Douro post-office, now Lakefield, was opened January 1, in this year while the South post-office, now Douro, was opened September 1 the same year, Daniel Sulivan being the first postmaster of South Douro. In this year a weekly mail was established between Peterborough and Warsaw, also serving the South Douro post-office on the route. While pulling steadily against the tide of privation and difficulties, against which the early pioneers were forced to contend, those brave people cast their anchor in the hope that there was a brighter sky beyond the darkest cloud. While the early settlers of Douro were industrious and worked hard to make homes for themselves and their families they esteemed sociability more than prosperity. There is on record a story of Dennis Sullivan, a flute player, who in the early days, carried a plow from Peterborough on his back, and, when he laid it down to take a rest, he would fill the air with the glorious strains of his immortal flute. In those days there also lived a man by the name of Daniel Sheehan whom the early settlers called "Gladdy" because he was always in a good humor, no matter what were his troubles or reverses. Previous to 1855 there were no dances other than step dancing and reels, but in that year John Torpey Jr., having been visiting in the States, introduced calling in to the sets. Robert Stewart, pioneer settler of Douro died in March, 1856, aged eighty-four years.

Nominations for the year 1857 passed very quietly. James Moher who had faithfully served the township for the past six years resigned and his seat was taken by John Allen, Mr. Strickland then being the only one of the first Douro council to sit at the table. After the nomination which took place inthe house of Peter Fitzpatrick, many congratulations were extended to the new council. Mr. Tom Torpey sang a solo entitled "Our Bonny, Bonny Old Trainer" followed by a song entitled "The Black Water Side" by Mr. Dick Dwyer. John Quinlan entertained the gathering with violin selections for an hour. In response to the music, Mathew Scully and Thos. Hanrahan gave an exhibition of step-dancing.

The new council met on Thursday, January 22, 1857. The following members were present—Sam Strickland, Stephen Benson, John Allen, John Leahy, and James Hogan. On a vote by the council James Hogan was elected Reeve. The officers appointed were: Michael Torpey, assessor; Henry Coweth and Thomas Cassidy were appointed auditor for the esuing year. Early in the year John Leahy gave a piece of ground on the north side of the Warsaw road on the line between concessions 6 and 7. At the second meeting of the council a resolution was passed authorizing the clerk to accept tenders for the building of the township hall on the ground given by Mr. Leahy. Tenders were to be accepted until March 1, and then to be opened by him in his office. Michael Leahy, lot 9 and concession 8 was appointed constable at the meeting of the council, March 19, 1857.

A meeting of the council was called on May 4, and Phillip Mahoney was appointed tax collector for the year. Small-pox was prevalent in the township that year and Mr. Mahoney was taken ill and died December 2, 1857. The town hall was built during the summer. On the day of September 20 the first meeting was held in it. Thos. Crowley built an approach to it and received the sum of fifteen shillings for the same. On the death of Philip Mahoney, his father, Michael, was appointed collector. At the meeting held on Monday, May 5, Michael Mahoney was appointed pound keeper upon the resignation of Timothy Leahy.

The town hall which had been completed under great difficulties, was completely destroyed in December 1857, after only a few months use.

Owing to the destroying of the Town Hall the first meeting of 1858 was held in Michael Mahoney's house on Monday, January 18. The following members were present: Messrs. Sam Strickland, Stephen Benson, John Allen, John Torpey and George Clark, who was elected Reeve. The officers appointed were John Lucas, auditor; Michael Torpey, assessor and Michael Mahoney, collector. The sum of five dollars was voted to Michael Leahy for his services as constable for the year 1857. Daniel Driscol was appointed road overseer in the place of Cornelius Holland who left the towne ship. Lumbering and taking out squartimbers had become a boon to the settlers, Mr. Gilchrist having started many camps throughout the township. The man with a team of horses or oxen could get steady work at one dollar per day. This continued for several years and helped the settlers considerably. In those days the Warsaw road running by John Leason's was arched over by a green canopy of elm trees. The best method the farmer had to cut his crop was the cradle. Here he worked from early in the morning until after dark at night and, while he wielded the cradle, his wife and usually two or three children also, followed him, binding. Often the baby was laid in a hammock made of a shawl and tied to the branches of a tree while the mother worked in the fields. Very often the weary settler cut his grain by starlight, then he would rake and bind it in the morning.

The first meeting of the Council for 1859 was held in Michael Mahoney's home on Monday January 17. All members were present—Messrs. John Torpey, George Clark, Charles Vigard, John Carnegie, Jr. and John Allen. It was moved by Mr. Carnegie seconded by Mr. Vizard that Mr. Clark be appointed Reeve. There was no opposition. Robert Casement resigned the clerkship, having held the post for seven years. The second meeting took place January 31. A by-law was passed separating the offices of clerk and treasurer, which had been united during the past two years. It was moved by Mr. Allen, seconded by Mr. Torpey that Michael Torpey be appointed assessor for the present year. Moved by Mr. Carnegie, seconded by Mr. Allen that John Wood be appointed clerk for 1859. Moved by Mr. Allen, seconded by Mr. Torpey that John Leahy, Jr. be appointed treasurer. Michael Leahy, lot 8 concession 5 was appointed auditor by the council and Henry Carveth was appointed by the reeve.

At the Court of Revision, May 2, the following alterations were made on the roll—assessed value pt. East half lot 1, con. 1, owned by E. Sanpson, reduced to $120; assessed value part east half lot 2, con. 12, owned by Wm. Steward, reduced to $200; assessed value part B.F. lot 15-1, con. 8, owned by Geo. Cunningham, reduced to $40; assessed value part east lot 1, con. 12, owned by R. Co., reduced to $44; west half of lot 5, con. 7, John Leahy raised to $300; west half of lot 11, con. 7, Michael Leahy raised to $600; mill property, Lakefield, Shaw and Wait, raised to $2,000; Moved by Mr. Torpy, seconded by Mr. Allen and resolved—that James Boulton give up the notes held by him against John Leahy, Dennis Dywer and Wm. Moher for fines on horses impounded by Mr. Carnagie.

Moved by Mr. Allen seconded by Mr. Torpey and resolved that Thos. Hanrahan be remitted the fine imposed upon him for allowing his horse to run at large in April last and that Michael O'Brien return him the note for the said fine.

At the meeting December 5, all members were present, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. It was moved by Mr. Allen, seconded by Mr. Torpey that the following persons who have had their horse impounded be remitted their fines: John R. Benson $5, John McMurray $8, John Conroy $1, Denis Dwyer $1, and that the various pound keepers with whom the horses were impounded, be instructed to refund the same. It was moved by Mr. Vizard, seconded by Mr. Torpey that the council adjourn and meet again the third Monday in January, 1860. Just as the meeting adjourned, Joe Delaire and Mick Burk "the fiddler" arrived on a large hand sleigh drawn by a large Newfoundland dog. In a very short time the musician was landed on the top of the table in the centre of the room. Immediatly he had the gathering enchanted by his jigs and reels. Denis Carney in the excitement sprang to his feet and knocked over the brass candle-stick with his claw hammer coat, leaving the room in darkness. The candles being relighted, several step-dancers including George Whibbs, Thos. Hanrahan and Thomas Whibbs and Michael Sullivan in true and steady time kept pace to the glorious strains of music. John Torpey sang his favorite song "Waterloo," while Don McMurray sang "The Little House under the Hill." As the clock struck 8 p.m. all left for their respective homes, much invigorated and refreshed by two hours recreaton.

The first council meeting for 1860 was held Jan. 16, when the following members were elected: Messrs. Charles Vizard, John Carnagie, John Allen, Wm. Moher and George Clark. It was proposed by Mr. Carnagie, seconded by Mr. Moher that Mr. Clark be elected Reeve and was unanimously carried. Officers for the year were John Leahy, treasurer, Daniel Sullivan, clerk, C. W. Nichols and Michael Leahy, auditors, Michael Torey, assessor.

It was moved by Mr. Carnagie, seconded by Mr. Moher that Mr. Carnagie procure a desk for the use of the clerk at a cost not exceeding three dollars.

The court of revision was held on Monday, May 14, 1860. The following alterations were made: Michael Walsh was taken off the N. R. Roll and placed on the resident roll, for the east half of lot 5 in the five valued at three hundred dollars; Patrick Cleary's assesment on Lot 6, concession 4 was reduced to $550. George Young's on lot 9 in the third concession was reduced to $1080 and Patrick Heffernon was assessed for thirty-four acresjin addition thereby raising his assessment five hundred dollars; That James Reid's assessment be lowered to $1046. That the Cobourg Rail road Co. be assessed for three acres in twelfth concession or one acre lot five, concession 11. Mr. Sundy 1 acre, lot five concession 4, assessment reduced to ten dollars. Robert Casement's personal property be raised $200; John Sherin's to $300.

Since the town hall had been burned the council had leased a room from M. Mahoney at a rent of nine dollars per year, while Mr. Mahoney was appointed constable at a salary of ten dollars per year. At the meeting held October 1, a by-law was passed to levy the following amounts on taxable property for school purposes for the year 1860.—S.S. No. 1, $120; S.S. No. 3, $228; S.S. No. 4, $100; S. S. No. 5, $60; S. S. No. 6, $110.60; S.S. No. 7, $184; S.S. No. 8, $132; S.S. No. 10, $175.

At the meeting October 29, the following were appointed for returning officers for the year 1861. John Wood, Michael Torpey, Robert Casement, Daniel Sheehan, and John Cotter. At the second meeting of the council which took place February 11, John Leahy was appointed clerk, pro. tem. in the place of Daniel Sullivan who had resigned. Mr. Leahy resigned and the appointment was passed to E. P. Ford who held that office for the rest of the year, also for '62 and '63.

It was moved by Mr. Moher seconded by Mr. Allen that James Casey be paid fifteen dollars, he being entitled to that sum for having the most persons fined for selling spiritous liquors, without a license, and in gratitude of his services he was appointed license inspector for the ensuing year.

Michael Torpey was appointed assessor in the township and Robert Casement for the village of Lakefield. The latter was to receive the salary of five dollars. Michael Mahoney was appointed collector.

It was moved by Mr. Vizard, seconded by Mr. Carnegie that lot No. 3, east of Queen St., now assessed at three hundred dollars be reduced to two hundred dollars and lots No 3, west of Queen and Nos. 6 and 7 east of Queen be reduced to eighty each, all in the village of Lakefield.

There was much snow during the winter of 1860-61 and the thaw came suddenly which did a lot of damage to the roads and bridges. During the year of 1861 Douro received five hundred dollars from the Clergy Reserves which was divided equally one hundred dollars to each councillor to be expended on roads as the respective councillors thought fit. In the year of 1861, Mr. Clementi presented the council with a map of the village of Lakefield.

The roads were very bad through the township and the council levied one-half cent on the dollar on all taxable property, the same to be expended for the improvement of the roads and a grant of one hundred and eighty two dollars was voted for opening up a portion of the boundary between Douro and Otonabee.

The year of 1862 witnessed no election, the council being returned by acclamation. Mr. Clark was again elected Reeve by the council. At the first meeting which took place January 20, a by-law was passed authorizing the destruction of all dogs found running at large after February 1. The officers appointed were Wm. Torpey and Daniel Sullivan, auditors; but as Mr. Sullivan decined, Henry Carveth was appointed. Michael Torpey was appointed assessor.

The fences were not up to the standard, and animals were often breaking into the neighbours crops. Disputes often occurred and sometimes the beasts were pounded for their misdemeanor. Money being scarce, the fines were generally paid by notes, and very often the man to whom the damage had been done would petition the council to refund the notes, which was done readily. Disputes were at all times settled amicably.

Many pleasant evenings were spent by the old residents, telling yarns by the home fire place. Many old pioneers had that ready wit and the Irish brogue which marks the native of the Emerald Isle. A pleasant discussion took place on the door step of Peter FitzPatrick between himself and Thomas Crowe regarding the strangest things they had ever seen.

"Well, Tom" said Peter, what is the strangest things you have ever seen in Ireland?"

"Well," said Thomas "when I was at home in Ireland I trained a cat to sleep in a cage with a parrot, and he would never touch her.

"Well," said Peter, "before I left Kerry the most wonderful thing I ever saw was a doctor and a clergyman riding together in a jaunting cart on their road to a sick man."

"What was strange about that, Peter?"

"One was going to save his life and the other to prepare him for death."

The first meeting of the Douro council for the year of 1863 took place in Mr. Mahoney's home, January 19. The clerk, E. P. Ford called the members who were as follows. Robert Casement, Wm. Moher, John Smith, John Carnegie, and George Clark, Mr. Clarke being again unanimously elected Reeve. After a long discussion and a large amount of business had been disposed of, the Reeve appointed Wm. Torpey, and the council appointed Henry Carveth as auditors for the year. Michael Torpey was appointed assessor and Michael Mahoney collector for 1863. It was moved by Mr. Casement, seconded by Mr. Moher that the assessor return the roll to the clerk before the first day of April next. It was moved and seconded at the third meeting of the year that for the purpose of giving an opportunity to parties in need, to earn money, the treasurer be required to give each councillor the amount of statute labor or road monies due his ward to be expended as he thought necessary.

At the meeting of November 23, the following were appointed returning officers for the year 1864, Simon Mahoney, Michael Walsh, John Cotter, W. C. Nichols.

In those days the threshing flail which had done good service to the early settlers, retired from active life, being succeeded by the open threshing machine, which had no carriers. These were run by horse-power. One man stood at the tail of the mill and shoved the straw up to another who likewise passed it on to another. Owing to the dust and smut this made threshing a very disagreeable job. However, in the year 1863, Pat Moher was over in Michign and saw a mill working with carriers. When he came back he placed his plans before Mr. Mowry who at the time was building threshing machines at the end of the Hunter Street Bridge, Peterborough. Mr. Mowry worked upon the plans and supplied him with a mill with carriers, which proved a great boon to the threshing interest of the township. The first place this was used was on the farm of Patrick McKaiver, lot 12, concession 4. Patrick was an Irishman late from the county of West Meath. He stood for a half-hour looking at the straw as it was curled and rolled up the carriers to the top of the stook, then proceeding to the house he was asked by the good housewife how the mill was doing. Pat described the mill as follows: "There is baters and elevators and the straw goes mountains high; Pat Moher is driving Maurice Hynes is feeding, Delaney is oiling. Mary, the whate is coming down like haws."

While we look back over the past let us not forget the future, and let us look forward to the coming event, the celebration of the Hundredth Anniversary of Douro—which takes place during the week of June 21, every week day until June 27 of 1925.

NON-CONCURRING CHURCHES DISCUSS SUPPLY OF PULPITS

Some Members Say Committee Control Wrecked Old Church.

REACH COMPROMISE.

Urge For Selection of Ministers in Time Honored Way.

TORONTO, June 12. Canadian Press. — The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church discussed at length this morning the manner and methods to be adopted in manning their pulpits in continuing congregations and minority groups.

A large proportion of the Assembly were opposed to a special commission dealing with the qualifications of applying ministers, claiming that applicants should be considered through the time honored Presbyterian course of Presbyteries.

Some of them claimed that it had been committee control that had brought the crisis in the old church.

Those favoring a commission said that it would be necessary to have a central control if scores of vacant congregations were to have pulpit supply and the people held for the church.

Finally, a compromise motion was passed "that a commission be appointed to deal with supply for congregations and minorities, and also for the reception of ministers in co-operation with Presbyteries, all requirements of the church to be observed and the commission to exist for one year only."

SECOND RECITAL PRINCESS RAHME

Presentation of Beautiful Story of Ruth and Naomi.

George Street Church was the scene of a large gathering last night, when the gifted Syrian artist, Princess Rahme, of an old Biblical house, presented her own drama of the greatest love story of all ages—the story of Ruth and Naomi," the Princess playing the parts of Naomi and Orpah, and Miss Burgess the part of Ruth.

Princess Rahme prefaced her drama by a description of the entrance of General Allenby into the Holy City in a most graphic manner, and showed the spirit of that day still lives within her. "In part," she said, "her people had long had a deep love and admiration for England, which perhaps dates back to the time of the Crusaders and even while under Turkish oppression, she had seen rabbis on the streets of Jerusalem, their hands raised in prayer that England would take control of the sacred land. General Allenby was much loved by the Syrians. Many of them believing him to be a prophet, for Allenby in the Arabic language means "Prophet of God."

She also dwelt upon some of the strange manners and customs, so unlike ours in this Western world. She told of the women of her country with painted finger nails, but not painted cheeks, of the women in bloomers but not over-abbreviated skirts, of love and courtship following marriage, not preceding it, of the call from the minaret to prayer in place of church bell in the Occident. And of the strange wedding customs, which is not simply a wedding day but a wedding festival lasting for two weeks and of the ten days' feast given for the bridegroom to which all may come.

But is was in the story of Ruth, that Phincess Rahme was truly great and proved she wa spast mistress in the art of dramatic interpretation in her tense and artistic unfolding of this old story of Naomi—the sad, patient, strong. Into this character she poured all the demonstrative grief of a sorely afflicted Oriental woman. In her lamentations for her dead husband and sons—her decision to return to her native land and her parting with her daughters-in-law, many an eye was wet with tears of sympathy. Miss Burgess, as Ruth, portrayed with simple fidelity the unswerving love and complete self-abnegation of that sweetest of all Biblical characters.

Gives Another Drama Tonight.

The Princess is remaining over in Peterborough tonight, and will present at George Street Church, another of her famous entertainments—the story of Naaman, the Syrian," depicting in a most vivid manner that sotry when Naaman, captain of the Syrian armies, was pronounced a leper by the Syrian priest and condemned to a life of anguish and despair. Princess Rahme, in most capable manner will portray each character in the drama with Miss Burgess, as the Hebrew captive maid, who, through her entreaties, prevails Naaman to go into the land of Israel to be healed by the Prophet Elisha. She will preface the entertainment tonight by an intimate glimpse of Damascus, the oldest city in the world.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE OTHER SIDE.

Editor, Examiner :

Sir,—As resident of this city for some years, may I enquire if the dog wags the tail ,or does the tail wag the dog. In other words, is the City Council elected to carry out the wishes of the people, or are the members holding office in order to carry out their own wishes irrespective of the people.

I fail to see the reason for the apologetic tone embodied in Mr. Crane's proposal to hold Sunday concerts in a park not under control of the council. In regard to Sunday bathing, I see from your editorial in Monday's issue, that the question seems to be a moral one. "Cleanliness is next to Godliness," but perhaps our respected council does not think so. If the morals of the people are really in question, let us go the whole way and shut down all the Sunday trading that is being done. Close all the garages and filling stations and so compel the motorist who naturally seeks a change on the Sunday to buy his gasoline and oil on the Saturday night; then we, who from necessity, are stay at homes, would feel that justice was a little more even handed and that the sun roasts rich and poor alike.

Let us look at some of the things the Council has done. They turned down daylight saving against the wishes of a clear majority. They bought a car for the Fire Chief at $1700 when one at $800 or $900 would have been just as efficient and probably as long lived. They bought a dustless sweeper at $15,000, but when it comes to paying a caretaker for eight or nine extra days they lose all their pot valiancy and suddenly become timorous, hesitate to take responsibility, and finally draw the moral red herring across the trail.

Meanwhile we have one consolation. We are furnishing amusement for the other towns and cities of the province, but unfortunately we are also conveying an impression that Peterborough is a good place to keep out of. The same may be said of a jail.

Yours truly,
90 Deg. in the Shade.

FALL FIXTURE.

Murray Street and Royals Should Put Up Real Game.

Murray Street Baracas and Royals should make a real game of their East Peterborough League fixture at Exhibition Park this evening. The teams have many well known players on their lineups, the Baptists' roster including Johnny Ward, Howard Kirn, Alex, Butcher, Harry Cheu, "Red" Whitlow, all of whom are capable of playing good baseball. The Royals have the youngest infield in the league and with Don Cameron at short should put up a smart defensive game.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

Stop Loss Orders Throw Wheat On Falling Market

CHICAGO, June 12 (Canadian Press)—Wheat underwent a decided set back in price today, after a hesitating start. Persistent selling on the part of houses with eastern connections forced the market down, and dislodged numerous standing orders to let go of holdings at definite fixed limits in order to stop losses. Lack of any aggressive buying support was a depressing factor. Initial quotations unchanged to ⅜c off, July 161¾; to 162 and September 159½ to 159¾ were followed by something of a rally and then by declines to 159½ for july and 156½ for September.

Corn and oats came tumbling down with wheat. After opening at ¼c to ⅝c advance, September 117¾ to 118, the corn market gained a little more but then suffered a sharp decline Sepetember falling to 116.

Oats started at ¼c off to ¼c up September 54 to 54⅝. Later all months showed a material drop.

Provisions were responsive to an upturn in the value of hogs.

United States' Wheat Crop 200,000,000 Bushels Short

WINNIPEG, June 12 (Canadian Press)—A. L. Searle, Minneapolis, President of the Saskatchewan Elevator Company and one of the largest grain operators in the United States, said here last night that during his tour of the world which terminated last week, he had discovered that importing countries will not require so much outside wheat this year.

"Such a condition, however," he added, "should not depreciate prices as it is unlikely this year that United States will harvest much more than 600,000,000 bushels which is at least 200,000,000 less than normal.

Trade Barometer Moves Up With Good Effect On Oils

NEW YORK, June 12 (Canadian Press)—Operators on the long side derived encouragement from the rise in the New York Federal reserve ratio indicating no strain on the credit situation. Reports of trade improvement come from steel, oil and other leading industries and declaration of several increased and extra dividends during the last week. After several false starts, the upward movement in the oils appeared to have begun in earnest in Wall stret with early gains of one to three points being recorded by the majority of active shares in that group.

General railway signal, whose current earnings have been estimated at the annual rate of $24 a share, soared 8 points to 160 before noon. The limited floating supply of high priced issued led to urgent short covering, commercial solvent B swiftly extending its gain to nine points, Maxwell motors B certificates to 5, and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe to 4½. Havana electric one of the recent strong spots was heavy, falling back five points from its early high. Call money renewed at 3¾ per cent.

NATHAN MERSON BREAKS DOWN

at Peterboro? Why did he send his son instead? he was asked. His son was not working for him. He did not know whether his son was working for Charard. His liabilities on November 3 consisted of the money he owned on the note to Charard, the money involved in his purchases from the farmers while his account was overdrawn at the bank to the extent of $420.11. He was able to meet some of these obligations but not all of them. He was a native of Russian and a naturalized Canadian citizen. He was no relation to Merson. He did not tell Merson that his daughter had made out the cheques and had written in the words payable on November 3. The cheques were all written out at Peterboro. He was unable to write and usually got someone else to write out the checks for him.

Answering Mr. Huycke(he said at 1 o'clock he was at Cavan Station where he gave cheques to two farmers. At 3 o'clock he was at Omemee. He thought the men who received the cheques could have read them all right, as it was then quite light. He arrived at the C.P.R. Station at Peterboro before dark.

He came to Indian River after six. It was dark then. The only place where the cheques could not be easily read was at Indian River.

When he commenced business with Merson they had sufficient assets to meet all their liabilities. He did not get any part of the $1,707.75 which was given to Charard. Merson went with him to Montreal. He thought that in buying and selling two heads were better than one.

Answering Crown Attorney Hatton, he said he believed that the money he had borrowed from Charard was in turn borrowed by Charard from his brother. He did not know whether Charard had any property in Montreal.

Fred McIntyre.

Fred McIntyre, Otonabee, sold one cow and three calves. He had sold Sherman and Merson quite a lot of stuff previously and had always been paid until the last deal. He had seventy lambs, he would have sold them, but failed to reach an agreement as to the price. He sold the lambs to another dealer within an hour of seeing Sherman and Merson. The defendants were like ordinary cattle dealer, always doing a lot of chewing." He had always been willing to sell to them and knew nobody in Otonabee who would not do so. They had a good reputation. He knew nothing against them until the present proceedings. He heard that money had been paid to Mr. Hall to effect a settlement of 45 cents to the dollar. His son delivered the cattle and came home thinking the cheque had been already handed over. Had witness been there, there would have been no misunderstanding and he would have got the cheque. He expected a cheque which would have been paid on demand. He got a note which had never been paid.

Merson on Stand.

Merson then took the witness stand; he stated that he had lived in Peterboro for over three years. He had been a British bject for over 18 years. He had worked for Sherman for about six months in buying cattle before entering into partnership. He became Sherman's partner beause Sherman wanted him to take part of the risk of loss as well as sharing in the profits. Sherman said he could raise $1650 if Merson could get a similar sum .He went to his brother-in-law, I Spegil who gave him the money on a note at 7 per cent., payable in six months time. Spegil insisted that Sherman back the note. Business was good at the start. They decided to take stock every three months. They found they were falling behind, but Sherman told him he thought that if they kept on in business they would pull through all right. He and Sherman each took out $35 per week. All the rest of the expenditure was taken up with the costs of shipments. The business of November 1 was transacted in the usual way. The reason they gave checks payable on Nov. 3 was that they were afraid the credit extended them by the Dominion Bank was hardly sufficient to put them through and they hoped to get the cattle sold in time to have the money ready by November 6. He met his brother-in-law Spegil who pressed for payment of the note which had fallen due. After much discussion it was agreed that Spegil would get paid out of the money resulting from the sale of the cattle. Sherman then asked him to go to the farmers and get them to agree to a delay while Sherman endeavored to borrow the money in Montreal. They were doing their best to raise money when they were arrested and were not able to take any further steps towards clearing their creditors. At the station on November 1 he told the farmers they had not the money but would give checks. At this the farmers seems satisfied. He could not write. If he wanted to make out a check he got someone to write it out for him. He stated that he had got $1100 towards a settlement.

Witness Broke Down.

Witness, who had shown evidences of emotion, completely broke down at this stage, and was given a few moments' respite before undergoing examination by Crown Attorney Hatton.

At the time he gave the notes he knew that the money would not be forthcoming immediately for the cattle. He told the farmers they had experienced bad luck and a bad market. He also told some of the farmers they had been compelled to pay some debts and had got into low water financially. He gave Spegil the $1,707 at the same time as Sherman paid his debt to Charard. He and Sherman's son took the money they got from the sale of cattle to Peterboro, while Sherman remained in Montreal. He did not know that Sherman, Junior, had brought with him the cheques that had been given to Charard and Spegil. He did not know beforehand that it was intended to withdraw the money from the bank at Peterboro immediately after the deposit was made.

German Foreign Office Gives Publicity to the Pact Proposal.

BERLIN, June 12 (Canadian Press)—The German Foreign office last night published the official text of its memorandum of February 9, proposing the security pact, which has been the subject of discussion during the past weeks. The official memorandum says that the suggestion of a pact was not in the nature of an unexpected demarche on the part of Germany but a logical sequence to the truce proposal launched by the Cuno Government in December 1922 and subsequently renewed during the occupation of the Ruhr. In addition to suggesting United States as custodian or trustees of such a pact, the German proposal also provided for the recognition of the present Rhineland political frontiers.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

WHEAT OUTLOOK IS BETTER THAN EVER HAS BEEN

Large Amount of Winter Killing in States Will Help Canada.

NO OTHER SURPLUS

Canada Should Have Large Crop While Others Are Short.

With the beginning of June, wheat takes the centre of the stage. While to many it may seem utterly futile to speculate on the grain outlook for 1925, at this early stage, it must not be overlooked that the current price of wheat is based on just this outlook, and that such factors as the surplus left over from last year's crop, and the acreage sown to wheat here and abroad, are important determininant factors in the price of wheat for the next two months. The increase in this year's wheat acreage, in Canada, and the decline in acreage in the 'United States, and the almost unprecedented amount of winter-killing in the north-western States, making an exportable surplus from that country impossible, are dominant factors in the present situation.

While statistics representing the wheat carry-over from last year's crop are not yet complete from all countries, it is evident that the surplus is very materially smaller than was the case last year, at least in so far as the North American Continent is concerned. Canada's crop was 261,000,000 bushels against 472,000,000 last year. The requirements of European countries increased materially with the gradual increase in buying power. Notwithstanding this our total wheat exports for the twelve months ending April 30 amounted to only 190,631,784 bushels against 257,812,398 bushels during the previous year. This means that our customers are short nearly 70,000,000 bushels, in so far as Canadian wheat is concerned.

United States Surplus Improbable.

Turning to the situation in the United States there has been an organized attempt for some years, backed by government support, to prevent wheat prices from falling unduly low as a consequence of large crops either in the United States in Canada, or elsewhere. Every effort short of actual valorization was put forth and a thousand suggestions were urged upon the government. It was felt that the exportable surplus of wheat was responsible for the whea prices falling to those of world levels, despite the 42½ cent protection. The truth of the matter was that the United States needed Canadian hard wheat, and the artificial barrier naturally failed to contravert economic laws. Nevertheless, political influence succeeded in introducing into Congress something like 800 bills, during its last session, to legislate the American farmer into good health. Political activity is never discouraged, and despite previous failures, it is hinted that such measures as price-fixing, an embargo against imports, or even a valorization scheme, are not improbable in the near future.

Under the political setting outlined, The Department of Agriculture has just published a crop report, the import of which is that winter wheat, or fall wheat as it is usually called in this country, will be a short crop, and that a large acreage had to be abandoned. As this type of wheat constitutes nearly 70 per cent. of the United States total, it is evident that the crop has not started under particularly favorable conditions. From a careful analysis of the report, one is convinced that there is little probability that the United States will have any wheat for export this year, and that heavy importations of soft as well as of hard wheat are not improbable.

Contrasting this situation with the start that the Canadian crop has made, the outlook for the Canadian wheat farmer is most encouraging. The seeding was completed much earlier than usual, escaped almost entirely from late frosts, and in most sections of the West, now has abundance of moisture. The acreage is greater than last year and the preparation of the land was much more carefully attended to than normally. While it is admitted that conditions may become reversed several times before the crop is actually harvested, the present outlook, taking prices and all other factors into account, was never better.

Agricultural prospects in the east are also unusually satisfactory. The rains of the past week have been worth millions to the farmers of Ontario. They came at a time when they were urgently needed, and were followed by a spell of warm weather, which was exactly what was most needed. When analyses of the Canadian farm situation and outlook are made it is often overlooked that Ontario is the leading agricultural province. Last year's revenue from Ontario farms was $444,208,000 against $241,842,000 for Quebec, $161,913,000 for Manitoba, $281,992,000 for Saskatchewan and $200,672,000 for Alberta.

FARMERS LOOKING FOR BUMPER CROPS

Fields and Trees Give Promise of Abundant Harvest at Bailieboro.

BAILIEBORO, June 12.—During the past few days the grain and hay has grown wonderfully. The fields are so prosperous looking so far, that the farmers of this district are hopefully looking ahead to having a good old time crop. The grain is a dark green color and, since the weather has come in damp and warm, the wheat and hay is getting rank in most fields.

In many years such a bloom has not been known on the fruit trees. The orchards were loaded with heavy bloom which has now started to drop off, leaving the orchards a dark green in place of the white and pink.

Put a salt box in the pasture, as soon as the stock is turned out, and then keep it filled.

BACON HOG FAIR BEING PLANNED

Hastings County Clubs Met at Stirling to Make Arrangements.

PLACE UNKNOWN

STIRLING, June 12.—An enthusiastic and representative meeting was held in the agricultural rooms on Thursday night last to consider the time and place to hold a Bacon Hog Fair in Hastings County. The Federal and Provincial Governments are giving a grant of $100 each, and the organization under whose auspices the fair is held, has to contribute a like sum of $100 towards the prizes that will be awarded at the fair wherever held. Addresses were given by Messrs. Martin Pearsol and McGreer, each of whom gave valuable information regarding the producing, marketing and other details concerning bacon hogs.

The first of these fairs was held in 1923 in Wentworth County, and wherever held since each succeeding fair has proved to be better than the previous one.

It was decided by the Department of Agriculture to hold fairs in the eastern part of the Province so one is to be held in Lanark County and one in Hastings County. There was a large representation from Belleville Agricultural Society present, as well as from the local Agricultural Society, and after listening to the three Government speakers, Mr. Atkins, district representative for Hastings, who presided at the meeting, called for motions as to where this fair should be held in the county. A motion was presented that it will be held in Belleville another that Stirling be the place. After considerable discussion, these motions were withdrawn, and another presented that the President and Secretary of each Bacon Hog Club in the county, of which there are 20 meet at some convenient place, and decide when and where the fair shall be held. They are to meet in Belleville this week to decide the matter.

MILK.

It Is the Best All Round Food For Human Consumption.

Milk is our best all-round food. It is the most perfect food we have for human diet. Milk tastes good, it is easily digested and is very nourishing. It makes bone, brawn and blood. The vigor and success of the people depend largely upon the amount of milk used. In Ontario we use bout 2,000,000 quarts per annum, enough to float a fleet of battleships. Only about one-quarter of this is used as raw milk, the rest as butter and cheese.

A glass of milk contains a mixture of all the important things that make up a mixed and complete meal as obtained from meat, eggs, sugar, cereals, oils and fat. Children must have milk, adults ought to, as it repairs waste, builds flesh and bone, helps growth, and keeps the body warm.

Milk contains all the vitamines essential to life. These promote growth and favor utilization of food. Fat soluble A is found in milk-fat as it prevents rickets in young animals and children. Water soluble B is found in milk; it is essential in preventing neuritic diseases. Water Soluble C is also found in milk; it is the antiscorbutic vitamin which is interesting because it prevents scurvy, a common ailment among children.

Milk contains a great deal of lime. Children need lime and plenty of it, especially for growing bones and teeth. This liquid food contains all the necessary elements of a good mixed diet, and which at the same time can be used without special preparation and is available to all Ontario people at a price that should stimulate more extensive use.

Milk is the most difficult of all our foodstuffs to collect, handle and transport. It requires the greatest care from the green pasture to the pail and from the pail to the table. It spoils quicker than any other food. Keep it clean and cold.

Pure raw milk is better than purified milk, but it is so difficult to get pure milk that safety lies in pasteurization and low temperatures.—L. Stevenson, Dept. of Extension, O. A. College.

Farm Reports

WINNIPEG, Man., June 12 (By Canadian Press)—Not in many years have the crop prospects in the Canadian west appeared so promising as at the present time, and with abundant moisture in the ground, coupled with ideal growing weather, all grain is making excellent progress, states the weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Agricultural Department.

In Manitoba, many district reports that wheat is from nine to twelve inches above the groud. Recent rains have promoted growth on spring plowing, the grain generally showing good color and a strong root system.

Cut worms and wireworms have caused slight damage in parts of Saskatchewan, but, taking the whole acreage into consideration, this is negligible. In the Wolseley district, caterpillars are playing havoc with garden stuff. The cutworm menace in Alberta has almost completely negatived by the steady rains.

By Provinces the crop situation is summarized as follows:—

Manitoba—Ideal growing weather prevails with all grains showing satisfactory development. Winter rye is reported heading out at a number of points. The hay crop looks promising.

Saskatchewan—With the exception of barley, seeding is completed. Wheat and oats are well advanced and have an even stand and rich color. Fall rye and spring wheat materially ahead of last year.

Alberta—Approximately eighty-five per cent of the grain is up, and recent rains have encouraged germination. Some fields that were cleaned out by the ravages of cutworms are being re-seeded.

Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway—Conditions at all points are reported as satisfactory and with copious moisture, growing has been rapid.

British Columbia—Indications point to a light fruit crop, severe frosts of last winter being responsible. Despite ravages of cutworm, maggots and grasshoppers in some districts, garden crops generally, are making splendid headway.

TEST CHICKENS FOR WHITE DIARRHOEA

Disease Has Played Great Havoc in Many Poultry Yards.

This disease has played havoc in many poultry yards during the past few years, and, like tuberculosis, it has been spread around largely through the exchange of breeding stock. Chicks and eggs for hatching, from infected breeding stock, have carried the bacillus pullorum from one end of the country to the other; so the disease is now widespread and causes large financial loss to many poultry owners.

The bacteria responsible for the trouble (bacillus pulorum) centralize in the ovary of the mature hen, causing lesions in that organ; and its inability to properly function and produce normal eggs. The bacteria pass with the ova and are contained within the shell of the egg. When the egg hatches the chick is already infected.

Chicks less than a week old have the following post mortem lesions:—

(1) Enlarged liver with red spots or streaks.

(2) Congested lungs.

Chicks over one week old show:—

(1) Enlarged liver with greyish spots.

(2) Friable nodules in the lungs occasionally in the heart and lungs.

Diarrhoea does not always have time to develop, so if the chicks die look for the lesions.

The only really successful way to combat white diarrhoea is to eliminate the breeding stock infected with bacillus pullorum. These trouble producers may be found out by applying the agglutination test to every bird on the premises. Eliminate all reactors to this blood test and be careful in your purchases of eggs, chicks, or breeding stock. The disease will stay with you as long as you harbor infested hens on your farm.—L. Stevenson, Dept. of Extension, O. A. C.

VITAMINES.

Growth and development in animals are dependent upon a diet containing vitamines and correctly balanced chemically. Vitamines are widespread, and sufficient quantities of them occur in animal oils, green feeds, and yellow corn to properly develop young animals.

HANDLING BEES' NATURAL SWARM

Beekeeper Should Have Hives and Smoker Ready for Them.

USE OPEN BROOD

"There is a swarm of bees clustering in one of my trees—what shall I do?" comes the telephone message.

If you have no beekeeping equipment, invert a box over the cluster and smoke or crowd the bees up into it; then place them where they will be undisturbed and secure a hive as soon as possible.

A beekeeper would use a complete hive containing frames of full sheets of foundation or drawn comb and would have a smoker going in case of need.

To prevent the swarm from deserting, open brood is often used, if procurable, or an excluder is placed between bottom board and hive body.

If the branch on which the swarm is clustered is unimportant, it should be cut without disturbing the bees, carried to the hive and the bees shaken from it in front of the entrance. Direct bees into hive by a few puffs of smoke.

Should the cluster support be immovable, brush, jar, crowd or smoke into a box from which they are dumped in front of the hive entrance.

In case of a queen with clipped wings, procedure is more simple. While the swarm is in air, the clipped queen should be found on grass a few feet from the hive entrance, and caged. Next, move the old hive to a new location, substituting in its place a complete hive, already described, and stack the partly-filled supers, removed from the old hive, above. The caged queen is placed in the entrance and all is ready for the swarm which soon returns and enters the hive in search of the queen. When a goodly number of bees have entered the hive, the queen is released and enters too; then all again start work with renewed vigour.

DUB ROOSTERS FOR FERTILITY

New Benefit Found in Practice of Cutting Combs and Wattles.

MATE OFTENER

Dubbing, or cutting off the combs and wattles of chickens, has long been practiced in cold climates to prevent freezing, but as an aid in increasing fertility it is something new in the poultry field.

E. R. Wells, a Washington poultry authority, during the past five year or six has been dubbing his breeding cockerels for this latter purpose. He says that the cockerels, having no combs or wattles to protect (these being their most vulnerable points in battle), soon lose all signs of fear, and in mating pay no attention to interference from other cockerels. The result is that the males will mate often, insuring better all around fertility in the yield of hatching eggs.

It was estimated that fertility of hatching eggs was as low as 75 per cent on the entire Pacific coast last season. Wells believes that he increases fertility at least 10 per cent in his flock by this plan. If the method would work generally, he points out, its value would be manifest.

The dubbing is done when the cockerels are from 8 to 12 weeks old. A sharp pair of heavy shears is used, and both the combs and wattles cut close to the head. A little flour is sprinkled on the wound to hold the blood until it coagulates. No further special attention is given to the birds except to keep the dubbed cockerels away from the other birds until the wound heals.

The operation does not seem to affect the cockerels in any way, Wells says. When they are turned loose they hop to the ground and frequently crow or show fight, he declares, and within a week are able to look after themselves even when turned loose with males that have not been dubbed. In fact, he says, it is a poor policy to allow the dubbed cockerels to run with the males that have combs and wattles, as the dubbed birds with nothing to protect, invariably get best of any fight.

BUCKWHEAT IS VALUABLE CROP IN MANY WAYS

It Is One of Best Poor-Land Crops That Can Be Grown.

RAPID GROWTH

Excellent for Checking Weed—Is Real Money Crop for Beekeeper.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Buckwheat is a valuable addition to the general run of farm crops. It often serves as a means of making extra money, by rounding out the farm business rather than replacing some other important crop. Undoubtedly more buckwheat would be grown if its advantages were better known and understood.

Buckwheat has sturdy traits which make it valuable in many ways. It is one of the most successful poor-land crops that can be grown. It has the added advantage of generally being sown in early summer when the usual rush of spring seeding is over, and at the same time requires as little labour to handle as any crop worth growing. It is practically immune to insect and plant-disease pests.

On account of its rapid growing habits, buckwheat makes an excellent green manure and for the same reason is valuable in checking the growth of weeds. The Cereal Division has found that by growing two crops of buckwheat in succession and ploughing each under as soon as the first flowers bloom, we can control couchgrass almost invariably.

Buckwheat is a real money crop to the bee-keeper and a few acres of this crop will mean a considerable source of nectar for the bees.

The average yield of buckwheat runs from fifteen to twenty bushels per acre but yields of thirty-five and fifty bushels have been recorded under very favourable conditions. The prices paid for seed do not vary much and the demand is usually quite steady.

Buckwheat requires a cool moist climate and under average weather conditions a crop will mature in from eight to eleven weeks.

As far as soil is concerned, buckwheat does well on almost any soil, as long as it is well drained, but it does its best on sandy or light loams. While the seed will germinate and grow on light, dry soil, the yields will be reduced, especially during periods of drought. On heavy, rich soils, it is inclined to lodge, and this tendency makes the crop difficult to handle at harvest. The yield is not lowered, however, if the crop is grown on good land.

There are three main varieties generally grown, but the ones most commonly found are Silver-Hull and Japanese. The amount of seed to sow varies from two to five pecks depending on the type of soil it is sown on. The lighter soils require more, and the better land less, seed. The crop is generally sown any time from the middle of June till the middle of July, the earlier seeding is more apt to be blasted if a drought occurs when the blossoms appear.

The crop is harvested as soon as the first seeds are fully mature, the remaining seed maturing in the stock. The crop can be cut either by cradle or self-reaper and the sheaves put in long stooks until dry enough to thresh.

It has been found that sweet clover seed may be sown quite safely with buckwheat and usually will add very considerably to the feeding value of the straw. In fact, these crops go very well together, both thriving under essentially similar conditions.

GOOD WEATHER THROUGH WEST

Warmth and General Rains Have Been Beneficial to Crops.

CUT-WORMS GONE

By E. CORA HIND.

WINNIPEG.—Warm weather and general rains have characterized the conditions of the Canadian West during the past week and it would be difficult to think of anything which would improve the growth of crops at the moment. Complaints of cut worm damage had been received from quite a number of points before the rains came, but vigorous measures were being adopted to deal with the situation and the heavy rains of the past few days are expected to prove the best remedy, not only because cut worms do not like wet weather, but also because, under present conditions, growth is so very rapid that the crop quickly gets beyond the danger stage.

The field of oats and barley, reported severely injured by frost, have been reseeded.

Saskatchewan with its enormous acreage in wheat will know what to do the next time June is too dry for th ecrop, all that will be necessary will be stage an election. Such a wetting down as the province got election day has not been known for years, apparently it had a favorable aspect for the government as the Hon. Chas. Dunning was sustained by a much larger majority than was expected even by himself, if all tales be true. At the moment the only people peeved at the weather are the racing circuit fans. Practically all coarse grains are seeded, there may be a little flax still to go in and there will be considerable seeding of oats for green feed and hay.

The big increase in corn acreage is getting away to a fine start and hay land and pastures are in good condition. Taken by and large, for a grain country over 800 miles long and from five to six hundred miles wide general conditions are very satisfactory for this time of year.

Wood ashes are a good fertilizer to apply in small quantities to fruit plants.

RENEW PLANTS IN STRAWBERRY PATCH SHORTLY

Work Should be Done as Soon as Fruiting Season is Over.

BURN LEAVES

After Thinning Rows Cultivate Soil Between Remaining Plants With Care.

The number of crops to be taken from the strawberry bed depends upon the variety grown and the condition of the bed at the end of the first picking season as regards soil fertility and the presence of weeds. In some strawberry sections it is good practice to secure but one crop of fruit from a patch. If a variety like the Dunlap is grown and good care has been given the bed during the first season, it will usually pay to renovate it. Less vigorous growing varieties like the Aroma often produce higher yields after renovation than before.

The chief purpose of this renewal is to thin out the older, unproductive plants in the rows and give those that remain an opportunity to produce new matted rows of vigorous, healthy plants.

Necessary Steps in the Renewal Process.

The best time for renewal is in the early summer, as soon as possible after the bed is through fruiting. If the mulch is heavy, a portion of it should be removed. The tops of the plants are then clipped off with a sickle or mowing machine. If the mulch is light and somewhat matted down in the middles of the rows, it may be left there. The leaves, after drying, may be raked into the middles also. The bed is then burned over on a windy day, preferably after a rain, when the ground is moist. If there is no wind and the plant crowns are dry, a slow fire may injure them. These operations eliminate many diseases and insect pests, such as leaf spot and leaf roller. Without these sanitary aids, it would be almost impossible to control strawberry pests, even if spraying were thoroughly done.

The next step is to thin out surplus plants. This is done with a hoe, plow, or disk cultivator, depending upon the size of the bed. If a hoe is used, the surplus plants are cut away, leaving vigorous young plants about 10 inches apart in narrow rows.

On a large plantation, either a disk or a turning plow should be used to narrow down the original matted row. If a plow is used, the land on both sides of every row should be turned away from the row, leaving a narrow row. A careful plowman is a necessity in this work. The middle space between the rows is then cultivated with a spike-toothed cultivator, the ridges smoothed down with a narrow planker, and fresh soil worked in around the narrow strip of plants. Sometimes a spike-toothed harrow is then run across the patch with the teeth set at a back slant so as not to tear out too many plants. If it seems inadvisable to use this tool, it will be necessary to go over each row with a hand hoe and cut out the surplusl in the row. It is highly essential that fresh, friable soil be placed in contact with the plants remaining.

Care of the Patch After Renovation.

A coat of well rotted manure, spread on and cultivated in with the soil around the remaining plants, will soon induce new runners to start. With good cultural methods continuing throughout the season, a new matted row should be formed by the end of this time, which will usually be capable of producing a good crop the next season.

Extensive experiments carried on in Wisconsin and Michigan indicate that artificial watering, applied either by the overhead system or in the furrow, is a valuable aid in assuring a good cropcof fruit during a dry season. One should bear in mind that the beneficial effects of irrigation are distributed throughout the life of the plant. Sufficient water supply during the late summer after renovation insures the production of heavier crowns and more vigorous fruit buds for the crop of the next year. The lack of necessary moisture during the hot weather which often follows the renovation of a strawberry patch in summer is directly responsible for a comparatively small crop of fruit the ensuing year.

As was the case during the previous season, good cultivation must be practiced from the time of renewal to early fall. The treatment during the following winter and spring should be similar to that given the first two seasons; that is, mulching for winter protection and removal of the mulch at the correct time in the spring. It is seldom advisable to fruit a bed more than two years.

TAIL WOOL POOR.

Tail wool sometimes is as much as half hair and lots of it is so coarse that the sorter at the mill has to look closely to keep it out of wool tops and yarns. Tail wool isn't normal wool. It reduces the value of better wool if mixed with it.

CUCUMBER BEETLE.

A mixture of powdered lead arsenate and hydrated lime in the proportion of one to ten by weight is an effective dust for controlling the common striped cucumber beetle. The dust can be placed in a gunnysack and shaken over the plants three or four times daily until vining begins.

APIARIES UNDER QUARANTINE FOR FOUL BROODS, WHICH IS CAUSING ALARM BY ITS SPREAD

Peterboro, Northumberland and Hastings County Bees Under Ban.

DRASTIC STEPS

Combs Burned and Hives Disinfected by Gasoline, Which Kills Bees.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 12. Mr. Moore of Bancroft, Government inspector of apiaries, has been working in this district recently, inspecting the bee colonies for foul brood which, he says, prevail here to an alarming extent. Mr. Moore stated to The Examiner that the apiaries in the counties of Peterboro', Northumberland and Hastings are under quarantine on account of this disease, and will remain so until the inspector gives them a clean bill of health. Another official who has worked in this district with [illegible] Thomas Shields of Peterboro'.

Mr. Moore says that the disease in question originated in Germany, spread to England, crossed the ocean to the United States and finally reached Canada. The ailment among bees is similar to tuberculosis in the human family. The stricken bees transmit the spores and germs to the honey which they store, but Mr. Moore says that strange as it may appear, their infected honey is not harmful to the consumer. Another remarkable scientific fact is that the impure water that gives humans typhoid fever can be used by bees without injury.

Drastic Treatment.

The apiary branch of the Department of Agriculture takes drastic measures to stamp out the disease. When it is found that a colony is infected the inspectors dig a trench in which they bury what remains of the combs after these have been burned and the hives are thoroughly disinfected with gasoline, the fumes of which kill the bees.

When the apiarist who loses his colony in this way he is not permitted to resume business again unless he purchases bees in packages that have been approved by the Department.

FEEDING THE BOAR.

Should Never Be Given Food to Lie in Troughs.

The quantity of meal to feed a boar will vary with circumstances. During the season when he is used most, he will require liberal treatment, but at no time should he be fed more than he will eat up clean before leaving the trough. During comparatively idle seasons a very light meal ration will be sufficient, and if on good pasture he will require but little feed in addition. It is entirely a matter of judgment, and the feeder must be guided by the condition of the boar. It is never wise to make sudden changes in the ration—that is, to change suddenly from a light ration to a heavy one, or from a heavy ration to a light one. Changes should be made gradually, and the feeder, knowing about when the heaviest season commences should start in plenty of time to prepare the boar for it.

PRUNE BUSHES DURING SUMMER

Growers Agree That Some Form of Pruning or Tipping is Needed.

SEVERAL OBJECTS

Experienced growers of blackberries and raspberries are generally agreed that some form of summer pruning or, more correctly stated, "tipping" is good practice. By "tipping" is meant the heading back of the growing shoot by simply breaking it off between the thumb and finger when it is soft and brittle.

Objects of Summer Pruning.

With blackberries and raspberries, except the red varieties, the practice of "tipping" forces the growing cane to send out side shoots or laterals instead of making one long cane. The more vigorous growing brambles will respond by making long, strong laterals well down on the cane. This insures shorter, stockier, more "bushy" plants, which are less inclined to winter injury from drying winds and which are easier to spray and handle in harvesting.

Red raspberries, on the other hand, are not usually headed back but are allowed to grow unchecked. If tipped back, they have a tendency to send out a few rather weak lateral branches and many small, weak canes from the crown of the plant. This results in the production of a number of poorly developed side shoots and canes, with weak fruiting buds. Some varieties growing in fertile soil appear to be exceptions to this rule.

When to Summer Prune.

The most important point to remember, if the work is to be successful, is to head back the canes at the right time with reference to their height. The usual height is when the cane is from 18 to 30 inches tall. Do not wait until MORE THIS the cane is 40 inches long and then head it back. This operation will result in a loss of time and energy on the part of the plant. The side shoots, instead of starting vigorously, will be slow in starting and weak in their manner of growth if the main cane becomes too long.

The writer usually goes over his plantations twice each season at about two-week intervals, in early summer, tipping the plants which have reached the proper height at those dates. The young canes which grow after this time will usually be small and superfluous and should be removed at the time dormant pruning is done later in the season.

BY-PRODUCTS HAVE HIGH FOOD VALUE

Meat and Bone Foods Are Valuable Bone Making Materials.

Analyses of samples of meat and bone by-products including meat and blood meals, tankage, bone meal, and fish meals, have been made by the Chemistry Division of the Experimental Farms, and the results detailed in bulletin No. 49 of the Department of Agriculture. The analyses show that these feeding-stuffs are highly nitrogenous concentrates and that they constitute a valuable source of protein and bone making material. The bulletin, which is distributed by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, gives the details of the composition of a number of these materials at present on the market in Canada.

HORSE SHORTAGE IN SCOTLAND

There is a demand for horses in Scotland which can be satisfied only by importation. So writes the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner in Glasgow. The demand is likely to continue permanently, as the scarcity is not of a temporary character, and Canadian dealers are invited to seize the opportunity to go into this trade and ship such animals as will satisfy the buyers in Scotland, and make this business a steady, lucrative one.

At the foot of the cellar stairway lay the poor old farmer, bleeding from his fall, groaning as the partner of his joys and sorrows appeared in the doorway. In an anxious voice came a query. Plainly the woman feared the worst "Did you break the brown jug?" she asked. "No," came the savage answer, "but I'm going to." And he did.

LOSSES CAUSED BY FAULTY CARE

Raising Chickens Requires Proper Conditions and Close Attention.

WARM BROODERS

Much of the so-called white diarrhea among little chickens is not due to the germs of the disease, but to overheating, chilling, or overfeeding, states G. L. Stevenson. There is a tendency, he says, to call all bowel troubles white diarrhea, when in fact many of them are due to poor management and are preventable.

The prime factor in brooding chicks successfully is to keep them comfortably warm. They should be kept in light, well ventilated quarters that are sanitary and free from vermin. At first, a temperature around 95 to 100 degrees should be maintained in the brooder; but, as the chicks feather out and as the weather moderates, this may be gradually reduced though not entirely discontinued, as the chicks would then be apt to pile up on cool nights, and heavy losses result. Lath roosts six inches from the floor help to prevent the chicks from piling up.

Coal Burner Best.

Where several hundred chicks are being raised, a coal burner brooder stove will prove satisfactory, Stevenson claims. Chicks should not be transferred to a brooder until it is fully regulated and running steadily. The brooder should have a floor covered with sand and the sand covered with alfalfa chaff.

Warmth is all the chicks need for the first 36 hours; but after that period of time, they may be given sour milk to drink. This should not be placed in copper, tin or galvanized dishes. Milk should be given them as long as it is available. After they get milk a day or two, water may also be given them to drink.

When chicks are two days old, they should be fed oatmeal, bread crumbs, or johnnycake in small amounts five or six times each day, according to Stevenson. A feed made by mixing one pint of finely chopped, hard boiled, infertile eggs with three or four pints of oatmeal or cornmeal, can be fed to four-day-old chicks in place of two of the above six feedings given daily after the second day. A little fine cracked corn or wheat should be fed with the oatmeal, the bread crumbs, or the johnnycake, the amount of these being gradually decreased and the grain increased, until after the tenth day, when the oatmeal may be eliminated. This corn and wheat combined with other grains, makes the ultimate scratch ration.

After six or seven days, chicks may be given bran, or a regular mash made up of two parts corn meal, bran, middlings, and ground oats and one part of fine wheat scrap—or one-half part of milk powder or clabbered milk is used. Once the chicks are established on a scratch feed and the meat mash, the times of feeding may be reduced to three and a little later two times per day.

FIND RUSTLESS WHEAT

OTTAWA, Ont., (United Press).—Garnet wheat, a new variety developed at the Dominion experimental farm here, said to be rust-resisting, may push the wheat frontier 100 miles further north and supplant the famous Marquis wheat, L. H. Newman, cerealist of the Canadian government told the Agricultural committee of the House of Commons. "The new wheat, a hard spring variety, under the Dominion-wide tests has been found to yield twice the quantity of Marquis under dry conditions," said Newman.

To-night's the night! The City Council meets in special general To-night's Night session. That is, it is called for a certain purpose — plus general business. Anything is likely to come up, or nothing. Many citizens are in expectation that the question of bathing beaches will be re-opened, and others think the schedule of band concerts should be looked over by the Council as a whole.

Most people think a mistake has been made in the course pursued by the Council. And talking about mistakes, here are some words of wisdom from other ages:

Cicero: Any man may make a mistake, but none but a fool will continue in it.

Hugh White: Mistakes are lessons of wisdom. The past cannot be changed. The future is yet in your power.

Bovee: It is only an error in judgment to make a mistake, but it shows infirmity of character to adhere to it when discovered.

J. Pye Smith: Exemption from mistake is not the privilege of mortals; but when our mistakes are involuntary, we owe each other every candid consideration; and the man who, on discovering his errors, acknowledges and corrects them, is scarcely less entitled to our esteem than if he had not erred.

Pope: A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

And that's that.

Maybe So; Maybe Not That's pretty far-fetched, if the photo man will allow us to say so. Mr. Roy and Mr. Mathias are both clear of blame, for it wasn't in this city the statement was made. You never see a picture in either studio window of a man in the throes of playing a jewsharp. Watch the prima donna's face at the next parlor social you attend. Many singers seem to strive for a "This hurts me more than it does you" expression.

This announcement may help business for the music stores, but a lot of our women will keep right on placing their faith in the drug store. Yet it can't be denied that young ladies will get beautiful effects by shaping the lips as in playing on a piccolo.

Maybe studios of photographers in the future will have a bunch of musicians to choose from. The Marine Band will be there if you want it in water colors. And can you imagine the overworked violinist playing to the physog of a fat man?

The photographer has to put his head under a shawl while taking the picture. Then he hustles off to the dark room and has a good laugh all by himself.

Let's go too.

Among the other scents of spring and early summer there is now noticed in city streets the delicate perfume of newly-laid road oil.

F. H. Alfred Assails St. Lawrence Navigation Project in Address.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn, June 12 (Canadian Press).—F. H. Alfred, of Detroit, president and general manager of the Pere Marquette Railway, assailed the Great Lakes to the ocean waterway yesterday in an address before the Minneapolis Traffic Club, declaring that the backers of the project were trying to "stampede the country."

He explained that navigation on the Great lakes is open only seven months a year and asserted it would be unfair for the Government to spend millions on a project which would deprive the railroads of much income during the summer months and which would throw the burden upon them of moving the freight of the Middle West and the Northwest in the Winter time

"THE LONDON THREE" IN "MELODY AND MIRTH"

One of the snappiest and best musical acts heard here in many moons is at the Capitol for the last three days of this week, and anyone who misses hearing the trio of splendid musicians who make up its personnel will have missed something really good. "The Great London Three" is the name of the group, which is composed of three principals with the far famous "London Eight Company," Dorothy Alwynne, Richard Alexander and Joan Duff.

Mr. Alexander is the possessor of an exceptionally fine baritone voice, used in a fashion that shows a high degree of training. His rich resonant tones were applauded vigorously at both performanees yesterday when he sang "Sunrise and You," "All Alone," the latter with violin obligato, and a charming little bit about the clock. Miss Alwynne is one of those rare violinistes whose music is perfectly satisfying. Playing the king of instruments, she produces some lovely harmonies, with a full soft tone and a real mastery of her art. The "Gypsy airs" by Sarasate, and several brief selections were applauded to the echo last evening. The same degree of enthusiasm was manifested for the music of the third member of this talented trio, Joan Duff, who played Mendelssohn's "Andante and Rondo Capriciosso" with artistic finish. The three musicians were compelled to respond to numerous encores, their hearers being apparently unsatisfied after a generous programme had been rendered.

"Recompense," the feature picture, from Robert Keable's book of the same name, written as a sequel to the noted "Simon' Called "eter,' is an interesting screen dramatization of the intricacies of human relationships. Something rarely attempted on the silver sheet is a production that deals in subtlety, and the real meaning of "Recompense" has its illusive moments.

It is a story of war times. The music of those days echoes through the unfolding scenes, and the horrors and trials of war are lightly touched, just as a background to the love story of Julie and Peter Graham, the former a vivacious war nurse, played by Marie Prevost, the latter a young English clergyman going to was as a chaplain and ending up in the fighting ranks. Monte Blue takes this part and plays to perfection the role of the man who is strong, but not quite strong enough. It is irritating to see him succumb to circumstances at critical moments, but the tale winds to a satisfactory ending. Enmeshed between fidelity to one woman and desire for another, the man who yearns to do what is right finanally cuts the tie between himself and his former fiancee, who unknown to him, has fallen madly in love with another suitor. Then his little sweetheart of war days, the gay nurse, refuses to marry him, on temperamental grounds, and the bewildered hero retires to conduct an East End haven for outcasts as a medicine for a wounded heart.

With one of those peculiar twists of the screen, to him and his refuge comes Angelica, his former fiancee, now a bedraggled woman of the streets, and he decides to marry her. The atmosphere is a deep blue at this point and the spectator begins to wonder how it is all going to end, when Julie, who in the meantime has turned also to that life of service that she formerly scorned, appeared one more on the scene changed in heart. Just how the producer and the hero finish up this story wound about the eternal triangle, is vague but satisfactory.—Jeannette.

AT THE GRAND

"EXTRAORDINARY" BEST DESCRIBES BIG GAME FILM.

When "Hunting Big Game in Africa," was starting it's exceptional Broadway run in New York City, Mr. Quinn Martin, the noted photoplay critic of the New York World, wrote the following. Because it covers the picture which is now at the Grand, so thoroughly, we are reproducing it.

This is one of the most exciting educational motion pictures that have been made aside from the fact that H. A. Snow poked his camera right up under the noses of the wildest animals of the African jungles and came away with pictures of the whites of the beast's eyes. Universal's "Hunting Big Game in Africa," is constructed dramatically. It is an evening's entertainment that will be enjoyed by every one.

"There have been motion pictures before showing scenes of the home life and habits of the rhinocerous, the hyena and the leopard, but Mr. Snow and his son, Sidney, who headed the expedition which is now pictured, evidently decided that in order to thrill their audiences they would have to take a chance on losing their lives every time they snapped a scene. Angry elephants and uneducated lions come rushing in upon the party with such fury that they seem to be leaping over the orchestra pit. In other views, however, Mr. Snow's exhibition of marksmanship explains the principal reasons why there were no casualties. He seems always willing to allow the enraged animals to get close enough to the lens to see their reflections before he pulls the trigger. This is an extraordinary film."

A special matinee has been arranged with the producers to allow the children to see this wonderful thriller at a reduced admission fee to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 sharp, when the entire theatre will be thrown open to the kiddies at 15c.

AT THE ROYAL

RICHARD TALMADGE'S LATEST OFFERS LAUGHS AND THRILLS GALORE.

"On Time!" which is playing an engagement at the Royal Theatre, presents an unusual combination of swiftly-moving melodramatic action and highly colored farce. The result is one of the most laugh-filled and enjoyable hours of entertainment which has come to the Royal for many weeks.

Richard Talmadge, who performs death-defying stunts with the nonchalance the ordinary person displays while combing his hair, is the star of this unusual attraction. The story deals with the highly-imaginative adventures of an ambitious young man seeking success. Behind him—and always too far behind to be of any help until the scene is over—is his ebony-hued valet, Casanova Clay, played in a distinctly humorous tone by Tom Wilson.

Through a very unusual twist in the story it is not until the very last scenes in the play, after having gone through many thrilling adventures, that the hero finally reaches the goal of success. Among the sterling players who assist the stunt king in making "On Time!" as keenly enjoyable as it is, are Stuart Holmes, Billie Dove, Charles Clary, George Siegman and Douglas Gerard. The picture was directed by Henry Lehrman.

"On Time!" has a surprise finish, which is the "key" to the whole production. Patrons are asked not to tell the secret.

'THE BEDROOM WINDOW' DUE

"The Bedroom Window," a William de Mille Paramount production, opens at the Royal Theatre next Monday for a run of three days. May McAvoy, Malcolm MacGregor, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Edeson, George Fawcett and Ethel Wales are all featured in leading roles.

The story, written especially for the screen by Clara Beranger, is a mystery-melodrama-murder - comedy love-story on the order of "The Acquittal" and "Grumpy," but even more novel and startling than either of those successes.

BENEFIT GAME IS ARRANGED

Mercantile All-Stars Will Play Central Leaguers to Aid Player.

HURT IN GAME

On Tuesday evening the pick of the Mercantile League will battle with Shiner Johnston's Central Ontario outfit at Riverside Park for the benefit of Bill Duggan, who received severe injuries in a recent Mercantile League game. The Petes will be at full strength, and they will need to be as the mercantilers can trot out a pretty aggregation of ball players from their four teams. Many budding stars are to be found in the ranks of the factory league and they will be out there anxious to put one over on the Central Leaguers. Naturally the big fellows will fight back to defend their prestige so that the fans will see a pretty game and help along a good cause.

Puzzle Plays in Baseball

THE PLAY

For 10 innings two teams play runless ball. When the 11th inning started it was quite dark, also apparent that only about one more inning was possible.

In the last half of the 11th, with the bases filled and two out, the batsman hits the ball to the third baseman, who juggled it several times. He did not touch third base but managed to touch the runner coming from second on the hit.

The runner from third had crossed the plate before the fielder had touched the runner coming from second, which made the third out and retired the side.

The play caused a long protest, the team at bat contending the run counted, winning the game, while the team in the field argued the play was just a plain force third out and the score was still 0-0.

When the play was finally straightened out to the satisfaction of all, it was too dark to continue. What was the score and the proper ruling on the play?

THE ANSWER

It was a tie game, 0-0. The run scored while the third baseman juggled the ball and before he made the third out, did not count.

The play was a force-out and no runs can score on a force-out that is the third out.

A force-out is the result of the batsman hitting a ball on the ground which compels the runners to advance. The bases being filled at the time, therefore all runners must advance.

It is not necessary that the base be touched to complete a force-out. It can be made by touching the runner with the ball.

Peterboro ball fans can look forward to a lively game tomorrow when Walter Gerow will lead his rebuilt Belleville Railroaders into action against the Petes. INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER THORON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The mashie niblick and the niblick is swung back with the fullest upright back swing, like the mashie, with the blade kept shut, or at right angles to the ball, the only difference being that the back swing is usually shorter unless a long mashie niblick approach is essayed. With the niblick, when an explosion shot is required, bear in mind that the niblick head is very heavy and henceforth it requires slightly slower timing—that is, give it longer at the turn when it starts back toward the ball. If you fail to give it this added time the down stroke will be a jab, without rhythm. The most important factor of iron swings is rhythm and to accomplish this be careful with all irons at the turn from the top. Give them time—and always hit directly against the left leg.

HOLY CROSS BOASTS GREAT QUARTER-MILER

Holy Cross has a great quarter-miler in Joe Tirney, who won the event at recent eastern inter-collegiates in the fast time of 47 9-10 second. He was but a step or two behind the record set up by Ted Meredith years ago. He looks like a comer.

In determining an interference play, is the umpire ever guided by whether he regarded the mixup intentional or accidental?a

Interference plays are always questions of judgment. What one umpire would regard as an interference play might possibly be overlooked by any other official.

Interference plays are always trouble-makers. As a result umpires hew strictly to the rules in their interpretation.

No consideration can be given the intent. If the interference is created, a penalty must be inflicted. It cannot be overlooked because in the judgment of the umpire the player who committed the fault did not intend to do so.

In a great many cases the penalty for interference may seem rather severe, since the team that seemed to be responsible for the condition gets the benefit. What is apparently a purely accident mixup often causes the supposedly innocent player to be penalized.

If umpires gave thought to the intent in interference plays they would constantly be in hot water. For that reason the play alone is judged. If there is interference it must be penalized regardless of the basis for the interference.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

BREAKING RECORDS

With Ty Cobb in his 21st season of major league baseball, hardly a week passes without him smashing some batting record.

If he continues to set new marks, it will probably be necessary for him to employ a personal statistician if his deeds are to be properly preserved in the archives of baseball.

Cobb this year is hitting the ball harder and more consistently than for the last five years. While he doesn't feel that he will be able to play more than 100 games at top speed, he has set a batting mark of .350 or better.

As a matter of fact he recently told me that he would like to hit .400 in his 21st season in the big show. Said if he accomplished such a feat he would almost be willing to retire.

Recently I worked a series of four games in St. Louis in which Cobb pulled some remarkable feats of swat. In two consecutive games he hit five home runs.

FEATS OF SWAT

Cobb jumped into the St. Louis series in an effort to break the club's losing streak. He was under a doctor's care at the time.

After Cobb had made his fifth home run, I remarked to him that his stance and swing reminded me of the old days when he was the terror of all American League pitchers.

For several years, Cobb, realizing that he was losing some of his speed, sought to get more power back of his swing. Instead of being content with bunting the ball, beating out hits to the infield or trying to place his swats, he took ahealthier cut for distace——

Cobb tried to make up for the loss of speed by getting more power into his drives. He has met with varying success in his new role of slugger rather than brain-hitter.

He smiled broadly at my compliment that he was cutting at the ball like the olden days and trotted to his position in the outfield.

COBB EXPLAINS

At the close of the inning he stopped at the coacher's box and made this comment to me.

"It pleases me to hear you say that I look like the Ty of old, because after several years of experimenting I have gone back to the style that got or me most of my base hits.

"During the first 15 years of my career I always used a spread grip at the bat, my hands about six inches apart.

"Aside from being my natural style, I early learned that such a grip enabled the batsman to effectively combat most any style of pitching by also shifting the stance at the same time.

For a time I rather ridiculed the slugging style made famous by Babe Ruth. However, the great popularity of the system caused me to fall for it.

"It is a well known fact that all sluggers grab the bat at the very end with the hands close together. This enables them to get a long free swing at the ball.

"While I had fairly good success taking a cut at every ball, the style always seemed awkward to me and this spring I decided to go back to the old grip."

There you have from Ty himself the real reason for the remarkable batting performances he has already turned in this year.

HONOR MANGIN.

French Academy Makes Posthumous Award For Literary Works.

PARIS, June 12. (Canadian Press).—The French Academy has awarded to the family of the late General Charles Mangin, French hero of Verdun, who died May 12, its yearly grand prize of ten thousand francs for literature.

The announcement says the Academy "desires to posthumously crown the literary work of the deceased General." General Mangin wrote numerous volumes about the Senagelese and other African troops as well as other books on Africa.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

The Belleville team, heartened by their fighting victory over their Oshawa rivals on Wednesday, will sail into the Petes at Riverside Park tomorrow, and Manager Johnston's crew will have to play snappier ball than they did at Kingston the other day to take the Railroaders into camp. Belleville almost beat the Petes here two weeks ago, and they claim that now their losing streak has been broken they will turn the trick here tomorrow. Goyer is the most likely Belleville pitching choice, with Whitehouse expected to do the gunning for the home talent. Belleville have livened up their team with the addition of a couple of young players, and they will be full of fight tomorrow. The Petes must win to keep up near the top, and all in all it shapes up as a good Saturday afternoon card. George Sullivan of Kingston will be the umpire-in-chief, with Si Dell of Oshawa as his accomplice on the bases.

* * * * * * * * *

You've often heard of a pitcher being knocked out of the box, but Herb. Wolfe almost gave a literal example of it in Kingston the other night when he slammed the ball back at Cairns so fast that the Ponies' twirler had no time to protect himself with his hands or get out of the way. The ball struck him in the chest, almost knocking him out, and then rolled to Purvis, Wolfe being retired and cut out of a hit on one of the hardest smashes the Peterboro outfielder has ever delivered. It was fortunate that the ball did not hit Cairns in the face or the results might have been serious.

* * * * * * * * *

A benefit game for the assistance of Bill Duggan, Examiner pitcher, who had his jaw broken in a Mercantile League game this week, will be played at Riverside Park at 5.45 o'clock next Tuesday evening, the Peterboro Central Ontario League team clashing with a picked team from the Mercantile League. It should be an interesting exhibition of baseball, and the merit of the cause should result in a ready sale of tickets among the fans. The admission price has been fixed at 25c and the proceeds will all go to the injured player. The Petes will use their regular line-up, it is expected, while the Mercantilers will pick three players from each of the league teams, and will be able to select a line-up that will keep Manager Johnston's team busy to earn the verdict. The twilight game should attract a big crowd.

* * * * * * * * *

Don Nickle, the Pony outfielder, who has been attending college in the United States, is back in Kingston and will be with the Daleyites for the rest of the season.

* * * * * * * * *

One of the most improved ball players with the Ponies this season is Herb. Teepel, the right fielder. When he was with Port Hope a few seasons ago his hitting against the Petes was very light, but this year he is doing much execution with the wagon-tongue. In the last two games against the local crew he has had four hits and three of them were triples

* * * * * * * * *

In one department at least the Petes' pitchers lead the Central twirlers by a good margin; they don't give much away. In the six games so far Heckman and Whitehouse have only passed or hit seven batters. In the first game at Kingston Whitehouse hit one man and did not give a base or balls. Against Belleville on May 25 Heckman passed two. In the home game with Belleville on May 27 Whitehouse issued one pass. In Oshawa on May 30 Heckman did not have a charity. Whitehouse hit one batter and passed one in the June 6th game against Kingston, while on Wednesday night Heckman's generosity was limited to one pass. A total of five walks and two hit batsmen in six games is not showing much of a Santa Claus spirit.

PETERBOROUGH C. O. B. L. AVERAGES.

Herb. Wolfe and Red Legon, Peterboro outfielders, are setting the pace for their teammates in hitting, according to the Central Ontario League averages for the first six games. Wolfe has connected safely seven times in 15 appearances at the plate for an average of .467 for four games, while Legon has come through 10 times in 22 times up for .455 in six games. Legon leads in the total number of hits with ten and in run-getting with nine. Six of the Petes are hitting better than .300, Al. Heckman and Ray Rose having batted their way up since the last averages were published. Max Swanston is still in front in batting in runs having supplied the punch for 11 counters, besides scoring six himself, while Hap Harrison has driven in nine runs. The first baseman is the only member of the squad to hit safely in every game this season, and his average is now .364, which puts him in third place.

ABOUT BOTTOM FISH.

A carp isn't much to look at or eat, but he's a tough baby.

Here's a doughball recipe that will make his mouth water:

Mix equal parts of cornmeal and wheat flour. Grate in some stale cheese. Add sufficient water to make a stiff dough. Put in cotton enough to make the whole cohesive. Roll into little balls a bit bigger than a pea.

Then boil the doughballs in water in which sliced onions have been placed—a three-minute boil. Dry and sprinkle with cornmeal to keep from sticking.

While not considered "game," yet a five-pound carp will give you a stiff argument. He's not the easiest fish in the world to hook, either. You need a strong line, a small hook and plenty of patience for this bottom feeder.

Then there are the bullhead and catfish. Surely not much to look at, but lots of folks like them fried, stewed or boiled.

Give a catfish quiet water that's warm enough and most any kind of bait is welcome. He's a bear for eatin' worms.

The mullet and the redhorse come into the streams on swollen waters. You'll find them in the eddies and quiet places. They'll be interested in a small snelled-hook and a gob of angle worms. When the "game fish" are suffering from sunstroke the bullhead, catfish, mullet and eel are in their glory. Mud, muck and mid-summer—that's the life.

We rave about battling bass and smashing trout. Did you ever hook a four-pound eel? A 20-pound cat? A 10-pound dogfish? The books don't call 'em game fish, but before you get any one of them in the boat you'll know you've done something.

Catfish and eel fishing is made for the man who works days. The eel burrows down in the mud or hides under rocks during the day. He comes from cover at night and anything that looks like eats to him is as good as gone.

Summer brings on a fever to fishermen that only lake and stream can cure.

There are some kinds of fish in most ponds, lakes, creeks and rivers. These may be cats, carps, mullet and eels. And more often than not it takes skilled labor to get 'em.

BACK IN GOOD STANDING

Leon Trotzky, permitted to return to Moscow, is once more in good standing with the Communist leaders. He is shown riding to the Grand Theater with Ioffe to attend a meeting of the Soviet Federal Congress.

Puzzle Plays in Baseball

There are runners on first and third and one out. The batsman hits a long fly to deep center field. The runner on third feels that he can easily beat a throw to the plate if the ball is caught and holds his base.

The runner on first is certain the fielder will not make the catch and runs wild. The fielder catches the ball. The runner on third dashes for the plate the moment the ball strikes the fielder's hands. The runner, originally on first, is almost to third base when the ball is caught.

The center fielder throws the ball to the second baseman, who touches that base. The runner, originally on first, trying to regain that base after the catch, is still several yards from second on his way back when the ball is held on that base.

The second baseman then rolls the ball in the direction of the pitcher and the team in the field starts for the bench, believing the side has been retired. The baserunner continues back to first base.

Did the run count and was the side retired?

THE ANSWER.

The side was not retired when the second baseman held the ball on that base in advance of the runner who was trying to return to first.

In order to retire the runner he must be touched with the ball or have the ball thrown to the base he occupied at the time of the hit, which in this case was first base.

The runner had a right to continue on to first after the ball had been rolled into the infield. He was safe at that base. The run, of course, counted.

DID QUEEN VICTORIA MAKE THE RIVIERA?

The recent health excursion of King George of England to the Riviera has reminded me of the curious picture which the great American writer, Herman Melville, left of this coast sixty years ago. At that day the railway ended at Marseilles, and an old fashioned coach carried him to Cannes, which except for the residence of Lord Brougham was a fishermen's village. At Nice, the famous Promenade des Anglais was a hardly finished country road and Monaco and Menton could not be reached by either rail or road, while Monte Carlo wsa a name undreamed of. It was Queen Victoria's visits that first made a difference to the coast and members of her family, such as the Duke of Albany who died at Cannes and the Duke of Cambridge. King Edward was a frequent visitor to Biarritz and at Cimiez, the Queen received visits from Gladstone and Lord Salisbury. Since then the fashionable of the entire world have gathered there.

The Methodist Missionary Society met in the basement of the church. Nearly all the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid accepted the invitation to be present at this meeting. The president, Mrs. R. G. Moore, was in the chair. In the course of the regular business it came out that the W. M. S. had raised one hundred dollars for missionary giving, over their expenses. Until a few days before the year was up they were afraid they would not have it. This does not include money that the church gives to the mission fund.

IN MEMORIAM.

SHORT: In loving memory of the late Richard Short, who departed this life June 12th, 1924:

Life's evening shadows fast were falling,
The allotted span of life was long past,
With feeble voice and faltering footsteps,
He journeyed on to reach the goal,
There to meet his Saviour and loved ones gone before.

The pathway may be somewhat weary,
Along life's rugged way,
Still by faith he will reach the golden gate,
Where pain and suffering cease to be.
And where the weary soul is at rest.

While I sad, lonely and bereft,
Journey on life's way alone,
Waiting for the messenger,
To bear my spirit home.

Y.W.C.A. WEEKLY ACTIVITIES.

The swimming pool committee of the Young Women's Christian Association have made preparations for the Association annual Garden Party. This year the party will be held on the lawn of the Association the afternoon and evening of June 26.

One of the biggest attractions of the Garden Party in the past years has been the high tea. The committee in charge of the tea this year is composed of Mrs. W. R. Cormack (convenor), Mrs. H. F. Foote, Mrs. Moir, Mrs. Denne, Mrs. D. N. Carmichael, Mrs. T. Barrie, Mrs. N. D. Buchannan and Mrs. Gerald Wood. Mrs. H. Beal and the following committee are in charge of the table arrangements: Mrs. J. McIntosh, Mrs. A. L. Killaley, Mrs. J. W. Fraser, Mrs. W. M. Cruthers, Mrs. Rolly Hunter, Mrs. R. A. Carmen, Mrs. R. Harkness, Mrs. D. Walker, Miss Cora Mowry, Mrs. G. S. Cameron, Mrs. H. B. Morphet, Mrs. J. D. Patterson, Mrs. W. J. Oke, Miss A. Doris, Mrs. J. K. Hughes, Mrs. N. D. Seaton.

There will be an ice cream booth in charge of Mrs. Widdess and Mrs. Drummond, and a treasure trove with Mrs. LeClaire and Mrs. A. J. Robinson in charge. The Peter Robinson Chapter have kindly consented to be responsible for the candy booth and there will also be a group who will amuse the crowd with fortune-telling.

The decorations of the lawn and the gymnasium, where high tea will be served, are in charge of Mrs. R. Turner and Mrs. Seels, and a car committee, composed of Mrs. W. J. Oke, Miss M. Hamilton and Miss M. Jory, will save the various committees many steps.

During the afternoon and evening there will be several short swimming exhibitions, aesthetic dances on the lawn and musical numbers.

The Garden Party plans were passed at the meeting of the Y.W.C.A. Board of Directors, and all the workers are looking forward to a busy but happy time as they further plan to provide a garden party which they hope will be enjoyed by every citizen and visitor of Peterboro.

The Y.W.C.A. swimming pool each year costs a great deal for upkeep and repairs, and the committee take this means of supplementing the income so that the children and girls of Peterboro may all have the advantage of learning to swim or enjoying a daily swim during the summer weather. 1d-138-1038

WEDDING BELLS

RUSSELL—RUSSELL

The marriage was solemnized last evening at the Park Street Baptist Parsonage by Rev. N. McLeod of Ada Russell of Peterboro to L. C. Russell of Millbrook where they will reside.

KING—AVERY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. Mr. Manning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Avery, 175 Park Street, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Olive Irene, their eldest daughter, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to John F. King, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson King, 351 Chamberlain Street.

The bride, who looked very charming in a dress of fawn corded silk, and carried a large bouquet of Ophelia roses, entered the parlor under an arch of red and white roses to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Lily Hiscox Campbellford.

The bridesmaid, Lillian, youngest sister of the bride, looked very pretty in a gown of mauve canton crepe, carrying a bouquet of ophelia roses. The groom was attended by his brother William.

After a sumptuous repast, the happy couple motored to Lindsay, from thence by train to Toronto and Hamilton. The bride's travelling costume was a suit of fawn, with hat and gloves to match.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a fitch choker, to the bridesmaid a silver wrist watch band, to the pianist a silver eversharp pencil, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. King will reside at 540 Chamberlain Street.

Among numerous beautiful and useful gifts was a dinner service from the Grafton Co., by whom Mrs. King was employed, and a cut glass water set, salad bowl and jelly tray from the staff.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. Clark from Midland, cousin of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Clark and Miss Russel from Lindsay.

OBITUARY.

J. P. SCHENCK.

J. P. Schenck, who was operated on on Monday, passed away on Thursday morning, May 28, at the age of 63 years. He is survived by his wife, Mary, two sisters, Mrs. F. B. Sellmyer and Sister Hortense, and two brothers, Eugene and Philip, all living in Rochester, New York, except Philip, who is in the U. S. navy, besides a host of friends, to mourn his loss. The funeral was held at the St. Augustine church at Spokane, Rev. John Cronin officiating. Interment was at the Fairmount cemetery on Saturday, May 30.

Mrs. Schenck, widow of the deceased, is a sister of Mrs. M. M. McFadden and Mrs. J. Clancy, Peterborough.

JOHN KYLIE.

The death took place on Thursday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, at St. Joseph's Hospital, of John Kylie, one of Peterboro's pioneer citizens, after a long illness.

Although not actively in business for the past two years, Mr. Kylie will be remembered as one of the best known shoe merchants of the city, having been in business on Hunter Street for the past quarter of a century. For many years Mr. Kylie conducted a shoe shop in Ashburnham, where he made many friends, and is one of the last of the old residents of the East Ward to pass away. Previous to this he was employed with Mr. White of Lindsay in the shoe business.

He was a most genial and kindly man, and his pleasant smile and ever ready witticisms made for him a host of friends.

Mr. Kylie was in his 79th year, his wife having predeceased him 13 years ago.

He leaves to mourn his loss three sons, John and Frank of this city, who carry on the business on Hunter Street; James of Toronto, and one daughter, Mrs. Walter Killingbeck, of Peterboro.

Mr. Kylie is one of the very few surviving veterans of the Fenian Raid and when in his health celebrated the anniversary with other survivors.

The funeral will be held Saturday morning, at 8.45, from his family residence, 580 Downie Street, and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY IN CONSPIRACY CHARGE AGAINST SHERMAN AND MERSON

Two Cattle Dealers Were Acquitted of First of Two Charges.

FALSE RETURNS.

Trial on Charge of Obtaining Goods Commenced This Morning.

Nathan Merson and Reuben Sherman were last night pronounced "not guilty" of conspiracy to defraud creditors, when the jury returned at 9.10 after three hours' deliberation. The trial opened on Wednesday, when true bills on two counts were brought against the two men by the Grand Jury. The hearing on the second charge, that of obtaining by false pretences, opened today.

His Honor Judge Huycke is presiding at the trials, which are the only two criminal cases to come before the jury at the mid-summer sitting of the General Sessions of the Peace. Crown Attorney G. W. Haton, K.C., is conducting the prosecution, and the accused are represented by Joseph Wearing and W. F. Huycke.

During the examination of Merson yesterday afternoon he stated that he did not tell the farmers that the words "payable on November 3" were written on the checks, but he "yelled out" that they had not got the money, but would have it soon; none of the farmers mentioned anything about the fact of the checks being marked payable 2 days later. After he was arrested the police made enquiries of him concerning the whereabouts of Sherman, but he was unable to render any assistance. He saw the checks being written out at Peterboro on November 1 but he could not remember who was the writer. He did not tell Provincial Constable Maker that Sherman's daughter had written out the checks.

W. F. Huycke.

Addressing the jury Mr. Huycke pointed out that the accused were charged with conspiracy to defraud certain persons who had given evidence. He stressed the fact that conspiracy to defraud, implied intent and agreement of two or more to carry out fraudulent transactions. He would attempt to show from the evidence that the elements of conspiracy were not present in the case before the court. Conspiracy was something usually hatched in secret, as for instance the recent conspiracy in Sofia. There was no evidence brought forward by the crown to justify the belief that the men had conspired. Counsel quoted the testimony of the Crown witnesses who had on previous occasions transacted business with Sherman and Merson and had been paid for goods sold. These witnesses had stated that the last transaction had been carried out in the same way as the former deals, the only difference being that in this case the checks were not paid on presentation. The mere failure of a man to meet his obligations was not in itself a criminal offence unless it could be proved that a deliberate and preconceived scheme had been devised to evade payment, the prosecution must fail. The practice of making checks payable some days later began in the history of the firm on October 9, 1924, when checks were tendered farmers marked payable October 11. These checks were paid the very day on which they fell due. The details of the marking of the checks payable on November 3 would have become quite insignificant had the money been available on that date.

No Intention of Cheating.

He maintained that the fact that several deals were not consummated because accused were unable to agree as to the price to be paid was an evidence that they were not out to engage in any corrupt transactions. Had such been the case they would have agreed to almost any sum mentioned by the seller. It was evident that Merson and Sherman received no consideration whatever in the quarter they might well have expected most — in Montreal from their relatives Spegil and Charard, whose pressure for payment of the money loaned forced defendants to part with the money he had intended to use in paying the farmers.

The jury had to decide whether Sherman and Merson had plotted together to defraud the farmers, or whether finding themselves confronted by the demands of their relatives, paid with the money they had just received, while Merson came back to the farmers in an honest endeavor to make an arrangement satisfactory to all. Certain payments had been made since by the accused. He mentioned this merely as an evidence of their desire to meet their obligations as far as possible.

Was there any Evidence?

The whole case, said Mr. Huycke, could be boiled down into the question "Was there any evidence of an agreement between the accused with the object of defrauding creditors?" He submitted that if the jury believed that the Crown had failed to establish proof of conspiracy it was their duty to give accused the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. Wearing.

Mr. Wearing said accused were brought before the court charged with an offence that was certainly not a minor misdemeanor. The usual kind of conspiracy was that of forming a bogus company, getting investors' money and hurrying out of the country. Another form of conspiracy was that of inducing people to enter into a game in which by a preconcerted design the were robbed. Looking up the records he had failed to find a similar case where men engaged in cattle buying had been brought up on a charge of conspiracy. Both intent and agreement must be proved before the charge of conspiracy could be sustained.

Consider Circumstances.

He asked the jury to consider the circumstances. Here were two men who were carrying on business at first with Sherman as master and Merson as servant. Sherman, finding it difficult to pay his employee, suggests a partnership. Neither had capital. Having no security, to raise money they did the natural and ordinary thing—they appealed to relatives. All the evidence goes to show they were of the average type of cattle dealers, a little hard in driving a bargain perhaps like all other Jews. Nothing whatever as is shown by the evidence was known against them until the last moment. Not a single witness had come forward to say that he believed these men were criminals. Counsel asked the jury to picture to themselves the spectacle of one Jew importuning another for money owing. Each beset by a clamoring creditor, they took what has undoubtedly proved a foolish step. They paid away the money they had got and determined to find some other way of satisfying the farmers. As a further proof of their integrity, counsel mentioned that yesterday, at the last moment, accused had succeeded in raising money, one as a result of borrowing, the other by selling his home, with which to satisfy in part at least the demands of their creditors.

Crown Attorney Hatton.

Crown Attorney Hatton laid special emphasis on the methods of payment adopted by defendants in the deal in question. In payment of the

Trapper Has Blackleg; Doctors Are Puzzled

FORT WILLIAM, June 13. (Canadian Press).—Physicians at Sioux Lookout Hospital are confronted with the strangest case that ever has come to their attention, according to word brought to this city by H. O. Morrison.

The doctors, after careful examination, diagnosed a trapper's ailment as black leg, exactly similar in most respects to the disease which attacks cattle and which is feared so much by breeders.

Gang of Burglars Surrounded in Swamp Still Free.

CAR CAPTURED.

CARGILL, June 13. (Canadian Press). — A force of C. N. Railway detectives, Provincial and local police, have, during the past 48 hours, been chasing a gang of burglars who have been operating in Bruce for almost a week. The men have been travelling in a high-powered motor car, which is said to have been stolen from a Wingham man. The police got the car late yesterday afternoon, but the men are evading capture by hiding in a swamp west of here. The officers have surrounded the swamp, and they expect to be able to round up the gang within a short time.

Bathing Cannot Be Stopped By Council—Only Made Uncomfortable.

An interesting feature is injected into the dispute on Sunday bathing by the assurance given The Examiner to-day that the City Council has no juridiction whatever over the bathing beaches. The Examiner is assured by two legal men who have examined the question that Inverlea Park is controlled solely by the Nicholls' Park Trust, and the Lake street bathing beach is simply a strip of shore line that is water-reserve. The water rights are in the Dominion Government at both points.

This settles the impression that has arisen in some people's minds, without cause, that bathing is prohibited at these beaches. The Council has made no attempt to stop bathing, but has simply made it practically impossible for respectable people to bathe because of the lack of dressing room facilities. Anyone who desires a way of getting into and out of his bathing suit in the open is at perfect liberty to take the plunge on Sunday.

Provide Accommodation.

Another interesting proposition is opened up to-day by G. N. Gordon, K. C., M. P., when he suggests that public spirited citizens might get together and hire a tent to be placed at each beach for the accommodation of bathers. The Council, last night, refused to hand over the keys of the bathing houses, but could have nothing to say about the hiring and placing of tents there for the convenience of bathers.

This was the idea Mr. Gordon had in making his offer last week, when he gave $10 as the nucleus of a fund to provide accommodation. He is not trying to cross the City Council, he said but in face of the representations made to him as a citizen, and in view of the strong opposition almost amounting to unanimity that is brought to bear on the new law, he is willing to make an effort to give the people the accommodation they need.

J. H. Burnham.

J. H. Burnham, ex-M. P., makes the suggestion that the citizens take upon themselves the crime, if there be any, of hiring a man to save and protect life on Sundays, and that there be a tent procured for dressing accommodation at each beach. Mr. Burnham also points out that in the Globe to-day Inverlea Park is advertised as a tourist camping site. 'Bathing" is advertised as one of the attractions, and if this is taken away the city is gravely to blame for misrepresentation in attracting tourists.

The suggestion of these two citizens is in brief that the citizens who are interested in protecting their rights subscribe sufficient to hire tents and to pay a life-guard on Sundays for the summer. It is believed that Nicholls' Park Trust will have no objection to the pitching of a tent at Inverlea provided there is a supervisor present. Mr. Gordon said he would be willing to place another $25 at the head of the list for what he considers a worthy object.

FOR POSTERITY.

PHILLIPSBURG, Me., June 11.—Seventy-five years ago S. H. Rogers spelled his name on a grassy hillside by sprinkling wood ashes. His name is still there and it is said only twice since then have ashes been placed over the letters.

SUNDAY BATHING AUTHORIZED BY KINGSTON CITY COUNCIL

Beach Has Not Hitherto Been Available To Citizens—Forward Step.

NO ARGUMENT.

Dangers and Snares of "Old Swimming Hole" Recognized in Debate.

KINGSTON, June 13. (Canadian Press).—The City Council, at a meeting held last night, decided to open the Richardson bathing house at MacDonald Park on Sundays from 8 a.m. till 12 o'clock noon. Alderman Joseph Nash brought the matter before the Council, stating that the citizens, and especially the children, should have the opportunity of taking a "dip" on Sunday if they wanted to. Ald. Nash wanted the bathing house open from 9 to 12 in the forenoon, from 2 till 5 p.m., and from 6 to 8 p.m. on Sunday, but the general feeling of the Council was that the four hours in the forenoon would be sufficient time. It was felt that if the bathing house was kept open all day long it might have a tendency to keep the children away from Sunday School. As the result of the warm spell, there has been quite an agitation to have the bathing house open.

The matter was considered for several years, but until this summer, no action was taken. Every Sunday during the summer, the various "swimming holes" along the waterfront have been well patronized, and the Council felt that in view of this fact, the bathing house might just as well be opened for a few hours in the forenoon on Sundays. Ald. Nash drew attention to the agitation in Peterboro recently to have Sunday bathing. "It is all right for people who have summer cottages to protest against the opening of the bathing house on Sunday," said Ald. Nash, "as they can get all the bathing they want, but it is the poor people who suffer and they should be given this privilege if they want it."

The City Council last night passed a by-law to authorize the issue of debentures to provide the sum of $120,000 for the erection of a new school to take the place of the present Rideau School, and to provide additional accommodation for the Collegiate Institute at Louise Public School. The Council at its session last night also presented an address to Major-General Sir Archibald, retiring commandant of the Royal Military College, in recognition of the service he has rendered the city during his term at the college as head of it. Mayor Thomas Angrove read the address.

Common Law Marriages Recognized By Soviet

MOSCOW, June 13 (Canadian Press).—Under the terms of the decree now under discussion by Soviet officials, common law marriages hereafter here will be recognized as legal and binding by Soviet courts. Men and women do not need to go through either civil or religious ceremony, or even register themselves to be considered husband and wife and enjoy the protection of civil law, but the period of their living together under the proposed decree, "must be a reasonably long one" if the couple desires that the union be legalized by the courts.

PETERSON DIED SHORTLY AFTER HEARING REPORT

Sudden Death of Ship Owner Was Caused By Angina Pectoris.

SUBSIDIZED LINE.

Was Entering Into Contact With Dominion to Operate Steamships.

OTTAWA, June 13. (Canadian Press). — The death of Sir William Petersen came without warning. He had visited the House of Commons at three o'clock yesterday, when the report of the special committee which sat on the Petersen ship subsidy contract, was presented to the House. Returning to his hotel, he conversed with friends for an hour and then set out, accompanied by W. T. R. Preston, to fulfil an engagement with the Prime Minister. While waiting for a taxicab at the hotel steps, he appeared to be so ill that Mr. Preston prevailed upon him to return to his rooms. There he chatted for a while about some cables he had received from his backers in England. These communications, he intimated, had been disturbing. His financial backers had been alarmed at the news despatches which had been sent from Ottawa concerning the probable fate of the ship subsidy contract. Sir William, however, was optimistic, and talked of getting his ships going between Canada and Britain and launching his competition with the established shipping companies.

He was bathed in a cold sweat, and agreed with his valet that he would have a shower and change his clothing. He stretched out on his bed and continued his talk for a few minutes. He was obviously so ill that Mr. Preston went in search of the hotel doctor. Dr. F. W. McKinnon arrived a few minutes later to find Sir William at the point of death. He tried vainly to revive him but within two minutes the shipowner was dead. Another physician

UNITED CHURCH ORIGINATED IN HOME MISSIONS

Speakers Representing 1500 Missionaries Bring Message to Council.

EXPECT EXPANSION.

Figures Show Great Strength of the Principal Uniting Churches.

TORONTO, June 13. (Canadian Press).—The origin of the United Church was in the Canadian home mission fields, members of the first General Council were told last night by speakers of the three uniting denominations who represented a force of more than 1,500 missionaries and assistants and an annual expenditure which in recent years has gone well beyond one million dollars. They emphasized the importance from a Christian and national viewpoint of extending, developing and consolidating their work in pioneer and non-Anglo-Saxon areas and made it plain that they expected great things in this direction from the co-ordination of activities in the United Church of Canada. It was home mission night with the General Council. Statistics produced gave the Methodists 500 missions in Canada, with 555 missionaries and paid agents, and an expenditure in the year which closed June 30, 1924, of $465,425. The Presbyterians at the end of 1924 had 991 mission charges in Canada, including 489 augmented charges, and 979 missionaries, and had spent in the year $548,538. Figures were not given for the Congregational Church.

Reports on the work of evangelism and social service were submitted to the General Council of the United Church this morning.

The social service report of the Methodist body paid special attention to activities in behalf of temperance legislation, and said plans had been made to dissiminate information concerning the meance of drink with any alcoholic content whatever.

Rev. E. M. McLaghlan, Presbyterian social service secretary, endorsed the Methodist views on prohibition by declaring, "This great church must stand behind a movement calculated to remove the drink traffic from Canada." He predicted Canada in time would be dry from ocean to ocean.

Other speakers including Rev. T. Albert Moore, General Secretary of the Methodist social service department, expressed similar views. The reports were referred to a committee.

MORE FREIGHT.

C. N. R. Report Shows Big Gain in Car Loadings For Week.

OTTAWA, June 13. — (Canadian Press).—Revenue car loadings on Canadian Railways are on the increase. In the week ended, June 6, a total of 49,719 cars were leaded, an increase of 3,617 compared with the same week last year. There was an increase in nearly very commodity, especially in grain, coal and lumber.

Cat Lost Nine Lives And Stopped 3 Mines

COBALT, June 13. Canadian Press. — A cat, whose nine lives expired at once, stopped all mines in three camps while committing suicide on a pole of the Northern Ontario Light and Power Company, at South Lorrain. The cat (the property of Tom May, operator), got his tail on one wire and paw on another, of a 44,000 volt line. Pussy "went west," and all mines here and at South Lorrain and Kirkland Lake, ceased operations for five minutes until power was restored.

ORCHESTRA OFF THE PROGRAMME

Salvation Army Band to Play in Parks Instead, Council Agrees.

KEEPS GRANT.

Internal disruption in the Symphony Orchestra received a great deal of attention at the City Councils' special meeting last night, when the Orchestra was relieved of its part in the park concerts and the Salvation Army band was assigned to fill the programs.

Mayor Turner explained that the Orchestra is a voluntary organization that has won several honors for the city. It expended about $600 on instruments and has this indebtedness reducedto $225 through concerts. It was expected to apply the Council's grant of $300 towards clearing this off.

Trouble has arisen, however, through claims of some members to remuneration for playing in public concerts in the parks. The members of the Orchestra do not wish to pay any, and rather than do so would disband.

It was suggested that the Salvation Army band might substitute for the Orchestra on the park programmes, still allowing the Orchestra to take the grant.

Alderman Crowe said he understood the trouble was caused by union men, who were prevented by their affiliation from playing in the park without pay.

Rangers' Band.

Alderman Greene enquired as to the Council's status in regard to instruments used by the Rangers' Band. In the case of the Orchestra, he said, all receipts go toward building up the equipment and organization, and the members receive no pay whatever. In the Rangers' Band, on the other hand, he understood the members took the grant as individual payment, and it was not expended on instruments. Some of the instruments are in bad condition. "If the instruments are city propery," Alderman Greene asked, "have the men th right to take that money?"

His Worship thought the present plan is alright. It is not the idea of the Council to buy concerts, but to encourage music.

After some further discussion, Alderman Phelan introduced a by-law, amending the by-law making grants. The amendment provides the Salvation Army band shall replace the Symphony Orchestra. The cheque for the $300 grant will be paid to the Salvation Army Band, which will in turn endorse it over to Symphony Orchestra, according to the present arrangement.

Street Signs.

Answering Alderman Greene, Mayor Turner said the city engineer had plans and samples of name plates for the streets of the city, and these will be produced and discussed at the next meeting of the board of works.

Thanks For Help.

Alderman Turner moved a vote of thanks to the President and Director of the Industrial Exhibition Board for the use of implements and ticket booths at James Stevenson park.

Fair Wage Discussed.

Alderman Phelan protested the paying of 30 cents an hour to workers at the sewage disposal plant when the city is paying 40 cents. Mayor Turner said the city's end must be considered at an early date with a view to allowing the City Engineer to pay what a man is worth.

There is no fair wage clause in the city's agreement with the contractors on the sewage disposal plant, he said.

Alderman Phelan characterized 30 cents an hour a wage "not enough to live on."

Nothing Doing.

The Ontario Tourists' Research Bureau asked for a supply of literature to distribute free and suggested a contribution of one cent per

DRESSING ROOMS STAY PADLOCKED ON SUNDAY BY FINAL DECREE AT CITY COUNCIL CONCLAVE WHERE SUNDAY CONCERT IS ALSO BLACKLISTED

Edict Given in Five to Three Vote at Special Meeting Last Night—Alderman Hancock Bows to Public Opinion Against Regulations.

MAYOR TURNER EXPLAINS THE DETAILS ON WHICH CITY FATHERS ARE WORKING

Alderman Phelan Puts Up Big Battle Against What He Termed "Class Legislation"—McDonald Lumber Company Protests Action.

Only one alderman heeded the voice of public opinion that rose to a crescendo in denouncing the taking away of the privilege of Sunday bathing, and the City Council again last night put its foot down determinedly on a suggestion that it reconsider its decision. Alderman Hancock it was who harkened to the demands of the people and changed his stand in accordance, voting for open beaches. His vote was not sufficient to win the day, and the key was turned in the padlocks of both dressing rooms by five unmovable members of the Council.

The debate was featured by several heated exchanges, although some of the members took the matter smilingly. Alderman Crowe resented the intrusion into his private affairs when Alderman Phelan asked whether he would take his car out on Sunday, and the latter did not mince words in telling his opponents they were discrediting Peterborough in the eyes of Ontario.

Then the climax came when Sunday band concerts were also blacklisted without a vote. At the previous meeting there was no debate, the announcement of Alderman Turner for the parks committee being simply received. Last night, however, the members of Council declared themselves on the question, and the opposition was so strong that Alderman Phelan did not press his suggestion to a vote.

A feature of the band concert debate was the slightly hopeful hint dropped by the Mayor that there may be an occasional Sunday concert—if rain falls on Wednesdays or Thursdays.

Bad Advertising.

As usual, it was Alderman Phelan who introduced the question of permitting Sunday bathing. Whether intentional or not he seems to be on the popular side of many questions. He referred to the unfavorable advertising the city has received throughout the country through its blue laws, and to the disfavor with which the regulations are viewed locally. "It seems to me," he said, "Peterborough is big enough to get away from this small town stuff." His motion to open the bathing beaches on Sunday was seconded by Alderman Denne.

"I think the view of the Council is," Mayor Turner remarked, "that it would be forcing a man to work on Sunday unnecessarily."

Alderman Phelan: "We're not running a Sunday school here. We're running a city of 25,000 people."

Mayor Turner: But we're trying to set an example, as I see it.

Alderman Hancock: We have no support. In meeting people on the street, there are ninety-five out of a hundred opposed to the closing of the beaches. I voted with the majority last time, but I am voting against it this time, because I know the feeling of the people now. We have absolutely no support in the city.

Alderman Phelan: We're making a joke out of Peterborough all over Ontario. People are talking about this city and its blue laws and how the people soon won't be able to sit on their verandahs or play the Victrolas. It's a joke.

Alderman Crowe: I want to tell you I don't believe anything of the kind.

Alderman McIntyre: Neither do I.

Alderman Greene: Neither do I.

Alderman Crowe: They tell us we are not to use our own convictions here in this way way, but are to represent the people. I say we are not to be dictated to in that way. We have no other way of getting to know. I sit here to be guided by my own convictions until I'm told by right authority. The only way for us to find out is put it at the municipal election.

Alderman Phelan: That won't help this year. Wouldn't you go for a ride in your car on Sunday

Alderman Phelan: Then why interfere in other people's business?

Alderman Crowe: That's my business.

Alderman Crowe: I'm not. How would you like to live alongside one of the bathing beaches with the people running around nearly naked?

Aldermna Phelan: That's why we want to put a caretaker there, so that he can keep them in order.

Company Protests.

The McDonald Lumber Company, whose premises adjoin Lake Street bathing beach, protested the removal of the caretaker on Sundays and the closing of the dressing rooms on Sunday. This will, the company says, cause much trouble through bathers interfering with its booms, trespassing on its land, and undesing behind lumber piles and in its sheds.

A request from the City Council for co-operation in keeping the bathing beach free of logs is practically shelved by this reply, no mention being made of assent, the company evidently awaiting a decision on the Sunday protection of its property. The letter was referred to the parks committee

Band Concerts

This closed the debate on Sunday bathing, and after a few items of minor business had been disposed of Alderman Phelan asked whether the Council could arrange some concerts on Sunday evenings. He did not ask that all the concerts be on Sundays, he said, but thought the most popular evening should not be passed over There was no doubt, he thought, that the Sunday concerts were more appreciated by citizens than any others

Mayor Turner said Council did not care to ask any musical organization to play on Sunday In case of wet weather on a Wednesday or Friday when a band concert was scheduled, the organization might wish to make up the number of concerts, and might ask Council to permit a Sunday concert In that event, he thought, Council would have no objections to granting the request. That put the suggestion in the

HOUSES OF PLASTER OF PARIS NOW

Gypsum, commonly called "plaster of Paris," which has been used for centuries for plastering walls, is the essential part of a new fireproof building material. Mixed with cinders, gravel, crushed stone or furnace slag, and poured in forms, it can be used in the construction of one and two-story houses at a cost that compares favorably with that of wooden buildings. In a recent laboratory test the outside of a six-inch gypsum concrete wall was subjected to a temperature of 1700 degress for an hour, and at no time did the interior surface become warm.

Did you read in the paper about that man who had his eye injured when he poked his head into an owl's nest? Nothing more was told about it, but it reminds me of another case: a boy went out into the woods, all on a Sunday morn, and he wishes now, that he had gone to church instead.

He was looking for bird's nests and putting his hand into every hole he found. He was just looking for birds in a general way but what he found, was in a very particular way, for he found a tree with a big hole, hanging but over the creek. He climbed out over the water, poked his arm into the hole and let out a scream.

Out came his arm, with an angry owl hanging into his finger by its cruel beak and that was bad enough, but when it struck at him with its wings and talons, that was something he had not figured on, and he let go of the limb and landed in the muddy water, and the owl went back into the hole, annoyed but satisfied.

There seems to be great interest in owls, lately, and a prominent magazine has pictured the great horned owl, on the front cover piece. The owl is just swooping down to catch a bunny hopping across the snow. Let us hope the poor little bunny got away, for very often they do not, and it is mainly fear, which catches them, for they are so fearful that the owl will get them, that it really does get them.

Folks are, as a rule, very curious about, but afraid of owls. The very tufts of feathers that they have on their heads, to scare little animals, are effective enough to scare human beings.

Sometimes, if you come on an owl suddenly, it will display its ear tufts in a most dramatic way. It depends on the particular kind of owl it happens to be, whether one sohuld be taking liberties.

My little lad, Joe, came running to me one day, on the prairie, having seen a short-eared owl. This is a more or less friendly owl and is common everywhere.

As we drew near, the bird, which was wounded in the left wing, raised its little feathery horns and looked like a cream puff nightmare. It was a bit savage at first, but took raw meat and seemed to accept the help we gave it, with a good will.

But that was a little owl. The Great Horned Owl, though, is a bad actor. If you think owls are not interesting, maybe you will want to do as a great sportsman friend of mine did.

This man had read in a bird book, that some other sportsmen had captured a partridge with eggs and had reared some young birds. So he thought he would try it. Owls were the last thing in his mind. He had heard that men who know about owls are considered very well up in birds, but partridge was more to his liking.

To tell you the story properly, it is necessary to tell you in advance, that the Great Horned Owl is a big and savage bird, almost a foot and a half long and built like a bird, but horned with feathers like a devil and armed like a battleship. He fears neither man nor beast.

Very well, we may proceed with our sporting friend. He hired a couple of French Canadian back-woodsmen and they set out to find a partridge nest.

They managed, by good luck, to come upon a nest with the eggs almost ready to hatch out, and the bird very anxious and sitting close, regardless of danger.

The place was a hollow, at the base of an old stump. It was carefully observed and the men went back home. The plan was to come in the night and steal up on the old bird, capture her by hand, take the eggs to a setting hen, and later return the young partridge to their real mother in captivity.

That night, in the deep dark forest, our friend and his French Canadian helper, slowly worked their way closer to the nest. It was almost pitch dark, so they stuck it out until the stump, just in front of them could be made out, for they didn't want to risk careless handling of the partridge.

There is only one way to learn nature of the sort these men were in, and that is, to be in it.

Unknown to them, a magnificent skunk had been scouting about. A skunk may be so polite at times, that nobody knows he is about. This was one of the most polite ones. He was either following the human trail out of curiosity or maybe he just happened by and smelled the partridge, for skunks are great destroyers of game birds, ground nests and eggs. What a pretty stage setting for a one act play! All it needed was a villain. And nature always provides the necessary.

Up on a nearby tree, sat a Great Horned Owl, just waiting for something to move in the faintest ray of dawn. Neither the men nor the skunk knew he was there, and the partridge slept on.

The first thing the men knew, they knew everything, and it was a plenty.

No skunk ever made can stop a great horned owl. Almost every one of these birds, when shot, has a skunk odor, from dining off that fare.

The owl, it seems, struck the skunk amidships, sinking its talons deep into the animal and making an end of him in short order, but what that polite skunk did to the surrounding landscape, partridge, men, eggs and stump, is a fright.

Fortunately, the stump was between the men and the animal, and they got off easy. They left without seeing whether the bird was there or not. She must have taken it all as a part of the danger of life, for she left parts of egg shells in a way that gives fairly certain evidence that she got her family away safely.

So there is an owl for you. The great horned owl is alright in the deep woods, where he does his part to keep the balance of nature and hold the skunks in check, maybe, so, though dangerous about the farm, he is of service in the woods. Nature Lore will speak of different owls, from time to time. They are not all so bad as they are painted.

Government Will Continue Efforts to Gain Control of Rates.

OTTAWA, June 13. (Canadian Press).—The Canadian Government will take steps to carry out the recommendations of the special committee of the House of Commons on ocean rates.

Questioned last night as to the probable effect of Sir Wm. Petersen's sudden death on the movement to control ocean rates, Premier King said that the Petersen contract in particular will have to be discussed in Cabinet Council before anything definite can be announced.

But, he added, the Government's efforts to achieve control of freight rates across the Atlantic out of Canadian ports will not be relaxed and that the committee's report will be acted on as soon as possible.

CAPITOL LEVY IS WORRYING FRANCE

Threatens To Wreck Government, Left Block, or Possibly Both.

PARIS, June 13 (Canadian Press) —The bugbear of capital levy invoked by the Socialists still threatened both the Painleve Cabinet and the Left block of Parliament to-day. It seemed probable that the firmness of Finance Minister Caillaux in opposing the capital levy demanded by the Socialists would mean the wrecking of either the Government or the Left bloc or possibly both.

HEALTHY CHILDREN ARE HAPPY CHILDREN

The well child is always a happy child—it is a baby's nature to be happy and contented. Mothers, if your little ones are cross and peevish and cry a great deal they are not well—they are in need of a medicine—something that will set their bowels and stomach in order, for nine-tenths of all childhood ailments arise from a disordered state of the bowels and stomach. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus drive out constipation and indigestion; banish colic; break up colds and simple fevers and make the baby healthy and happy. The Tablets are guaranteed to be absolutely free from opiates or other harmful drugs—they cannot possibly do harm—always good. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIBERAL CONVENTION CHOOSES FRED SLADE AFTER ATTEMPTING TO FORCE IN WILLIAM FRASER

Enthusiastic Gathering at Warkworth Yesterday Heard Leaders Speak.

REPEAT HASTINGS.

Meyers, of Campbellford, Was Just Nosed Out of Party's Nomination.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

With the stage all set for a practically unanimous nomination of one candidate, with his three opposing male companions politely agreed to withdraw in his favor, as being the strongest possible representative of the party, the Liberal convention held in Warkworth yesterday, and representing Northumberland County, was compelled to do a back flip later on and choose another candidate from the remaining trio of nominees.

William Fraser, of Trenton, president South Hastings Liberal Association, was the choice. His supporters admitted that Mr. Fraser had never given his consent to stand for the position, but they thought they could urge him to do so. They wanted him and the convention wanted him. Whenever his name was mentioned, they stamped and clapped, and his brief appearance on the platform was the signal for a perfect salvo of applause. Each of his three masculine opponents had come prepared, not with a speech of acceptance, but with a graceful message of withdrawal from the field. The one lady who braved the Northumberland convention yesterday, made a fighting speech for election to the position of its representative in the Federal House, got the most applause and the least votes, was not of the same mind. She asserted her intention to stand on her own feet, favor no one and fight the issue to a finish.

When Mr. Fraser signified his irrevocable determination to refuse the nomination, a vote was taken, and Fred. J. Slade, of Burnley, Haldimand Township, received the final election after three ballots had been cast, nosing out Mayor A. J. Meyers of Campbellford, who led the first two ballots, by a majority of five votes on the third ticket.

The convention in Warkworth yesterday was one of the most enthusiastic political gatherings in the history of this staid little village in the hills. From all over the riding, from Haldimand and Seymour, Campbellford, Grafton, Hastings, Colborne, Murray and Percy Townships, Cramahe and Brighton and Castleton, with a contingent of sixty from Cobourg alone, and half a hundred from Colborne, the Liberals came, for a gathering of the clans that was marked by wild enthusiasm. A backwash, probably, from the recent victory in West Hastings, the speeches yesterday breathed a strong desire to duplicate that success in Northumberland, and effaced from the memory of those present the half-hearted gloom of the meeting held last year, with about fifty present, and a final failure to name a candidate.

Nearly five hundred people, with possibly eighty or ninety women, filled the Warkworth hall for a four-hour session, listened to addresses by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Dominion Liberal organizer, and Mrs. A. H. Beaton, of Toronto, president of the Ontario Liberal Women's Association and to speeches by the various candidates, who were: Mayor A. J. Meyers of Campbellford, nominated by L. B. Glover of Campbellford, and seconded by Walter S. Wiggins of Campbellford; Dr. W. G. Robertson of Colborne, nominated by Jno. I. Collins of Hastings and seconded by Frank Wilson of Colborne; Mrs. Donald McDonald of Cobourg, nominated by Mrs. Jas. McCullough of Cobourg and seconded by Mrs. P. Howard of Hastings; Wm. Fraser of Trenton, nominated by E. Butler of Brighton and seconded by J. McCrudden of Murray Township, and Fred J. Slade of Haldimand, nominated by Wm. Maher of Cobourg and seconded by J. D. Hayden of Cobourg.

J. N. Stone Presided.

J. N. Stone of Campbellford, president of the Northumberland Liberal Association, presided over the meeting. On the platform with him were Mayor A. J. Meyers of Campbellford, secretary of the association; Hon. Duncan Marshall, Liberal organizer for the Dominion; Mrs. A. H. Beaton, of Toronto, president of the Ontario Liberal Women's Association; Dr. Ferris of Cobourg, ex-secretary of the association; Jno. D. Hayden of Cobourg, ex-president; F. L. Webb of Colborne, J. B. McColl of Cobourg, ex-M.P.; Dr. Watson of Cobourg, Harry Field of Cobourg, ex-mayor, F. M. Brentnall of Colborne, and Sam. Dudley of Colborne.

Three ballots were taken before a final decision was arrived at. Dr. Ferris of Cobourg, F. M. Brentnall of Colborne, Dr. Alvea of Colborne and J. P. Archer of Campbellford acted as returning officers. As the candidate elected required a majority over all opponents, the first two ballots were nullified. They stood as follows: First ballot: Meyers 130, Slade 90, Robertson 83, Mrs. McDonald 36. Second ballot: Meyers 155, Slade 106, Robertson 90. Third ballot: Slade 168, Meyers 163.

Mr. Meyers was the first to step forth and congratulate with evident sincerity the successful candidate, and was followed in turn by Mrs. McDonald and Dr. Robertson, the three sounding the note which seemed to be the keynote of the convention's activities yesterday, the desire to work co-operatively and gain the riding for the Liberal organization.

Three cheers and a tiger followed for Mr. Slade, who acknowledged his election in a few words, and reiterated his statement that it was the "common people" who had urged him to stand and who had supported him.

In his opening remarks Mr. Stone spoke of the necessity of gaining Northumberland for the Liberal cause, and of making unanimous a choice of a candidate. "Mackenzie King," he said, "has proven himself a leader, not only for every class, but for the whole Dominion. He is trying, and I believe is satisfying, all classes of people and if returned to power with a substantial majority, he can give us government that he has not been able to give up to now."

Resolutions Passed.

A resolution, presented by Jno. D. Hayden, of Cobourg, and seconded by John Miller, of Castleton, and Hugh Ross, of Grafton, and accorded a standing vote of accord by the meeting, expressed the pleasure of the Liberals of Northumberland county in the recovery from his recent serious illness of Mr Sam Clarke, M.P.P. of Cobourg.

A second resolution, presented by F. L. Webb, of Colborne, and seconded by J. B. McColl, of Cobourg and Samuel Dudley, of Colborne, which also met with the unanimous approval of the assemblage, affirmed the hearty appreciation of the Liberals of the county in the past record of the Mackenzie King government and their anticipation in the near future of redemption by this party of the country's condition and a return to the prosperity which a nation with its natural resources should enjoy.

Mr. Webb, moving the latter resolution, spoke of the tremendour handicap to the farmer in the prohibitory freight rates charged for ocean transportation of Dominion products and of the efforts being made by the King government to rectify these conditions.

"The manufacturers want tariffs that will bolster up their industries, but there is no industry that is more entitled to protection than agriculture. A Conservative administration will not help the agriculturists. We know their platform and we know their history in the past. They are backed up by the Red Chamber, by the Manufacturers' Association and by the moneyed interests."

Mr. J. B. McColl looked on recent Liberal victories in the west as a happy augury for similar successes in the coming Maritime elections, spoke of the increasing interest of women in politics as a benefit to the country and to the Liberal party, and urged on his audience the necessity for unity and co-operation.

Nominees' Addresses.

The nominees spoke in turn for brief addresses that were limited to ten minutes. With the exception of the lady nominee, they all spoke with regret of the withdrawal from candidature of Mr. Fraser, and expressed themselves as being severally willing to withdraw in his favor, believing him to be the strongest nominee. Mrs. McDonald, however, expressed herself as being determined to stay in the running until the last vote was cast, and did not seem to be in favor of a withdrawal, even on such good reasons.

Mr. Meyers, whose speech was interrupted by a message from the wings which resulted in his departure, along with the executive and remaining male candidates, for a private conference, filled in by the speech of Mrs. Beaton, spoke of his pleasure in seeing so many ladies in the audience, and went on to commend the tact and diplomacy displayed in the House by its present leader, Mackenzie King, who had done so much to bring together the Liberals and Progressives, "the two varieties of Liberalism." Mr. Meyers, whose expression in this regard were re-echoed by the other masculine nominees, spoke of his previous decision to withdraw in Mr. Fraser's favor. The latter's decision to withdraw from the list had caused him to remain in the running.

Dr. Robertson, in a brief speech, also expressed himself along the same line, and affirmed his decision to support in every possible way the candidate elected by the meeting.

Lady's Clever Speech.

Mrs. McDonald made a very favorable impression and received plenty of appreciative applause for a rapid-fire address that was delivered in witty, clever style. Referring to the shock which was doubtless caused by some of the older men by the spectacle of a woman running for such an office, she branded as "a baseless slander" the oft-repeated assertion that women would not vote for another woman. As an illustration of the attitude adopted by men for many years in refusing to allow women the privilege of a voice in public affairs, Mrs. McDonald related the tale of the South Sea Islands, where pork was esteemed as a great delicacy. Desirous of keeping the supply exclusively for themselves, the men told the women that pig-eating would be very harmful for them, consequently the women, "being uneducated, fell for this." Later, when they discovered the delicious nature of the food they were being deprived of they were allowed to chew the rind. "That's what we've been doing since 1917, chewing the rind, and we're getting tired of it."

A Dyed-in-the-Wool Liberal.

Asserting vigorously that she had been born a Liberal, lived a Liberal and hoped to die a Liberal, and that "there is no missing link in my Liberal allegiance," a statement which drew much applause from her hearers, Mrs. McDonald appealed to the chivalry of the men not to penalize her in her competition with the other candidates, just because she had suffered the misfortune of being born a woman.

Mrs. McDonald referred to her previous political experience and campaigning in the West, where she had been a nominee on one occasion for the Provincial House in Alberta, and had come second in the race at a later contest for a seat in the Dominion Legislature, in the fall of 1921.

The Liberal party, declared the speaker, was a party of hope for the country in the future, while the Conservative party was one of pessimism and mis-representation. Arthur Meighen was the apostle of pessimism.

Mrs. McDonald enjoined on her feminine hearers the necessity of accepting "with politeness and gratitude" the suggestions made to them by men," "who have been longer in politics than you ave," and sat down amid much applause.

F. J. Slade congratulated the president and secretary on the success of the convention. He alluded briefly to the handicap suffered by the King government by reason of their low majority in the House and the preponderance of a Conservative element in the Senate, and promised his faithful support to the candidate elected.

The Favorite.

William Fraser of Trenton whose brief appearance on platform was greeted with the applause that followed every mention of his name yesterday, said it was absolutely impossible for him to accept the nomination at the present time. He was sure however that combined support of the candidate chosen would enable Northumberland to duplicate the recent victory in West Hastings. (Applause.)

"The Liberal party," said Mr. Fraser, "is not the party of pessimism or gloom, nor is it a party bound by race or creed."

Mr. Fraser asked those present to get behind their candidate and repeat the success achieved by Liberal forces in West Hastings, "tainted for many years with the grossest kind of Conservatism.

Declaring it again to be "physically, financially and mentally impossible for him to run at this time," Mr. Fraser concluded his speech.

Mrs. A. H. Beaton, of Toronto, spoke of her pleasure in seeing so many women in the audience, and reminded them that the women of this generation are merely laying the political foundations for the younger generations of women who will follow in their footsteps.

"Now that we have the franchise and share an equal responsibility with men, we should forget our own personal likes and dislikes. These must be buried and the candidates chosen, whether our own personal choice or not, should have our loyal support. This is the only way in which Liberalism can be built up in Canada. The candidate is an incident. It is Liberalism and its privileges and politices that we must get behind."

"Women are too apt to be idealists in politics as in other things. They should try to remember the advice given by a man. "Whenever a Tory head pops up, give it a wallop." A certain old gentelman used to say that he had never in his lifetime recorded a party vote. He had always voted for the best man and strangely enough he had always voted Liberal."

"The recent election in Saskatchewan has singly shown that the Liberal government is what this country needs and is the only one equall to taking care of the great agricultural interests of the country.

"We are apt to feel that if things are legislated, the matter is ended. But women who are mothere know that too many rules in our own household only cause our children to try and evade them. A few single rules, well administered, one more efficient in the home, and the same thing applies to the country."

Mrs. Beaton concluded with an invitation to the ladies present to join in the Federaton of the Liberal Women of Canada.

Hon. Duncan Marshall.

At the end of a session which began at three and lasted until nearly seven o'clock, Hon. Duncan Marshall arriving from Fort William for the occasion, and on his way to Ottawa spoke. He congratulated the meeting on being able to put so many nominees in the field, and the different unsuccessful candidates on the manner in which they had accepted defeat.

"Arthur Meighen," declared Mr. Marshall, "can't get a vote out of Quebec as long as he is leader of the Tory party, nor can he get a vote on the Prairies as long as he stands for high protection. The man who can't get a vote in Quebec or in the West can't be Prime Minister of Canada."

The election in Saskatchewan was an indication of the trend of events in Liberal circles. For the Liberal victory there, the popularity of Premier Dunning was mainly responsible, the speaker comparing his success with a few years' time to the meteoric rise to popularity of Premier King.

"I think the time will come, within the next five or ten years, when the Liberals of Canada will look back with as much pride to the career of Mackenzie King as they do to the record of that matchless statesman, Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

That Arthur Meighen, who now asserted that a high tariff was the cure for the ills of the Dominion, had made no effort to raise it to any extent while in power, contenting himself with sending 'gallivanting' through the country a tariff commission which refused to take the advice of experts, himself included, which appeared before it, was declared by Mr. Marshall.

"The Tory party under Arthur Meighen rose to the peak of its incompetency in Canada, and added seventy-four millions to the national debt to build a merchant marine, and fifty millions for what they now characterize as a "frozen loan" to Greece and Roumania."

When the present government came into power, said Mr. Marshall, there were no Canadian National Railways, but four different roads running in all directions and lapping up the people's money. Premier King had chosen a man to lead the railways who had at once been attacked by Arthur Meighen as incompetent, but who, in the first full year of his leadership, had shown an operating surplus of twenty millions, and in the last year seventeen millions. "Mr. Meighen is constantly calling for a higher tariff, but you can't tax people into riches. What we want in this country is trade, not more taxes. And our second great need is for a market for our goods."

The Ocean Combine.

Referring to the ocean combine on freight rates, Mr. Marshall said, "What we want to do is to tear the guts out of these boats that the Tories loaded us up with at a cost of seventy-four million dollars, and make them into something more suitable for our trade needs."

In 1920 Mr. Marshall bought 90 head of Shorthorn cattle in England and shipped them to Quebec, paying to the Donaldson lines $75 a head for their carriage. He sent them West by rail for practically the same distance, about twenty-seven hundred miles, for $25 a head, with feeding and watering included.

"What we need here is a market, and the lowest possible freight rates on our goods to the market."

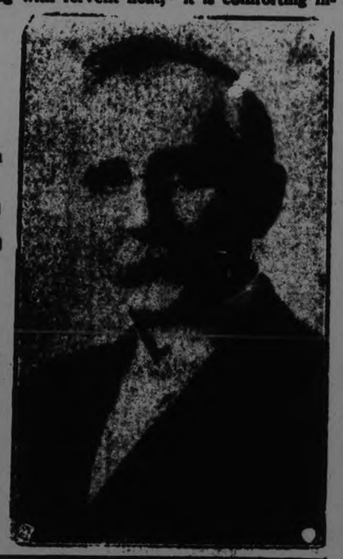
Alluding to the drop in taxes last year when the government collected fifty millions less than in the year before, Mr. Marshall said "The Tories think this is a great loss. They regard a drop in taxes, with less money squeezed out of the people as a distinct loss in revenue."

"East Lynne" has been translated into 80 languages. Mrs. Henry Wood, the author, had great difficulty in selling it just after she completed it.

THE WORLD ON FIRE---A BETTER DAY IS COMING

"MILLIONS NOW LIVING WILL NEVER DIE"

While the earth is "reeling to and fro like a drunkard," while the elements which compose the present order—the financial elements, the ecclesiastical elements, the social elements, the civil elements—are "melting with fervent heat," it is comforting indeed to be assured from God's Word that a new order—an order wherein dwelleth righteousness, an order with justice reigning supreme, an order of peace, joy and prosperity for all—is at hand, even at the door.



For the Scriptural evidence assuring you that this is true you are invited to hear:

REV. JAMES GRIER FOR CAMPBELLFORD

As Soon as Steps Taken By Montreal to Grant His Release.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 13.—Mrs. William Hume and J. A. Anderson, clerk of the session, represented St. Andrew's church at the meeting of the General Assembly in Toronto this week. Mrs. Hume was accompanied by her sister, Miss Lilly Govan, of Seymour. All three returned home last night.

While in Toronto they met Rev. James Grier, of Montreal, who a short time ago was given a unanimous call by the congregation of St. Andrew's church, a call which was held up by a division in the Montreal Presbytery which postponed action. Mr. Grier assured Mr. Anderson that it is his intention to accept the invitation to come to Campbellford as soon as the necessary steps have been taken by the Presbytery of Montreal to grant his release.

Mr. Grier will conduct the anniversary services in St. Andrew's one week from Sunday and it is expected he will be inducted before the end of June.

KEEP THE DATE OPEN.

The carnival which will be held on July 16th by the Peterboro Rotary Club to raise funds for its work among underprivileged boys and on behalf of crippled children will be greatly helped if this date is kept free for the big event.

Other organizations planning picnics or other similar affairs should see to it that July 16th will provide a clear right of way for the carnival, which will be a community effort on behalf of an organization that has already rendered a very important community service.

The Rotarians are early in the field with the announcement of July 16th as the date of their annual carnival, and their choice should be generally respected so that there will be no counter-attractions to interfere with the success of the affair.

The work that Rotary has been doing for crippled children is well known to the citizens generally; the activities of the organization on behalf of underprivileged boys is also appreciated, and the people of Peterboro will doubtless welcome the chance of a big day's fun, which they can enjoy all the better because they will be helping a cause that deserves general support.

Keep July 16th open for the Rotary carnival—a big event on behalf of a wide-awake organization.

THAT WINNIPEG CASE.

The incident in Winnipeg where a citizen refused to loan his boat for use in an attempt to rescue a man who was drowned in the Red River a few days ago not only condemns the offender as an undesirable but it serves to show that the people of the neighborhood where this miserable wretch lived have that respect for law and authority that fortunately marks most Canadian communities.

A coroner's jury had found Schroeder "negligently responsible" for the death of a fellow-citizen, and public opinion has resulted in his being forced to leave the city.

In some other countries he would have been strung up to a telegraph pole; the provocation to use lynch law must have been strong indeed, and it speaks well for the neighbors of this small-souled individual that they were able to exercise sufficient self-control to keep their hands off.

Schroeder will be punished enough by his exile from the place where he has lived for twenty years, and by the gnawing of his conscience, if he has one, and Canada has been spared an exhibition of mob law.

Hanging may have been too good for a man who was small enough to refuse the help of his boat to rescue a drowning man—but the Winnipeg way will prove to be better in the long run.

SEGREGATING DRUG ADDICTS.

Those who have paid any attention to the question will endorse the plan announced by Hon. Lincoln Goldie, the Provincial Secretary for the Segregation of Narcotic Drug Addicts.

It has long been plain that the confinement of addicts in the Provincial reformatories or prison farms has been utterly useless so far as the cure of the victims is concerned.

In fact, it is undoubtedly true that instead of curing those addicted to the habit the policy has resulted in other prisoners becoming addicts themselves because of their association with the users of narcotics in these institutions.

Smuggling of drugs among the prisoners has been impossible to stop completely, and the decision of the Government to segregate the addicts in a separate camp where the proper medical treatment can be provided and a much closer check put upon smuggling is a reform that will be heartily approved by people who understand the situation and realize the defects of the system by which drug users have been handled up to the present.

The seriousness of the narcotic drug problem is enhanced by the tendency of those who are victims themselves to lure others into the grip of the habit; the average addict seems to have a delight in leaving others in as bad a plight as he has gotten himself.

The segregation of the victims under the plan now announced should do much to improve the situation.

A BUSINESS-LIKE CHANGE.

The order-in-Council just passed at Ottawa affecting the Civil Service seems to be a business-like change by which the services of experienced employees in over-manned departments will be available for use in other departments, and new appointments will be reduced to those of a strictly technical nature that can be filled inside the service.

The new policy will make it possible to prevent overloading any particular department, and at the same time do away with the necessity of discharging efficient employees, which has been about the only possible way up to the present to reduce the overhead.

The old way left the door open to the continual overmanning of the service, inasmuch as a vacancy in any department was generally filled by the appointment of a new official instead of by transferring one from another department from which his services could be spared.

Conditions are continually changing, with the result that employees who have been added to some department during an emergency are no longer needed.

This has led to one of two policies—the surplus employees were retained in a department where there was little for them to do, or else were dismissed.

Usually the first course was followed.

Meanwhile in some other department help was needed and new positions were filled from outside.

The new plan would merely shift the unnecessary employees from department No. 1 to department No. 2—a much more business-like method that should result in greater efficiency and a reduced overhead.

PLEDGING THE CANDIDATES.

A movement that is making headway at present is that carried on by the temperance forces in seeking to secure signed pledges from voters to the effect that, regardless of party, they will pledge themselves to support temperance and prohibitory legislation and to vote for candidates at elections who will do the same. On the ledge card is the following clause under the heading of "Method": "The enactment and enforcement of every possible restriction on the liquor traffic; the nomination and election in every riding where possible of candidates for municipal, legislative or parliamentary positions who are known to be prohibitionists personally, and who will claim for themselves complete freedom from any party domination on all questions affecting prohibition."

It is in the latter part of this object that there will arise the question of whether the advocates of this method have placed theory as having greater weight than practical politics, for after all when any movement gets into the realm of political action it becomes a matter of party policy, or, in other words, plain politics.

To make a case that is not so suppositious as might be thought: There are three political parties in Ontario—Conservatives, Liberals and Progressives. In a riding there might very well be three candidates; it has happened before, and will happen again. Both the Progressive and Liberal candidates proved to be satisfactory to the temperance forces, but the Conservative candidate refused to commit himself. What would happen? It is not overstating the case to predict that the Conservative candidate would get the wet vote of his own party, and from the others he would get what support leaned in that direction; he would also receive the votes of others who were party men above all else. The Liberal and Progressive candidates would be left to split the dry vote between them, and the Conservative would be elected.

That is something that could very well take place. We are not seeking to discourage in any way the efforts of those who are trying to create an active temperance sentiment, but in justice to themselves and to the candidates they will seek to pledge, they should recognize that they are entering the field of practical politics, where party rule must still be reckoned with.—London Advertiser.

A EUROPEAN PACT.

The British Government has apparently come to some sort of an agreement with France regarding a proposition to be made to Germany for mutual acceptance by all three of certain fixed boundaries in Europe for France, Germany and Belgium. It is true that Premier Baldwin stated in London yesterday that no pact had been made with France; but this probably meant that any pact which was in view would be one not with France, but with France and Germany both. For the point of the present negotiations is that France and Germany are to voluntarily accept fixed frontiers for the future as regards each other and Belgium.

The participation of Great Britain in this matter is being criticized in some quarters in England as a bad policy, a policy of unnecessary and unwise entanglement in continental concerns, a policy likely to involve Great Britain in war, and so forth. These criticisms, some of them, come from very able and estimable men like Ramsay MacDonald; but they come, and he is not an exception, from the same quarters and the same temperaments that for the last ten years have been telling the world that if Britain had warned Germany plainly in 1914 that she would side with France if Germany attacked France, there would have been no war. In other words, the persons and newspapers who would blame Great Britain for what she is supposed to be doing now are in the main the sort of persons and the sort of newspapers who would likely blame a British Government for whatever it might do, the sort of people who always know better than anybody else what is the best thing to do in any international problem, and whose dictum it always is that what anybody else has done is the wrong thing.

If Great Britain can help to establish an agreement by which France and Germany will solemnly and publicly pledge each other that they will accept as satisfactory for all time an international boundary between themselves, Great Britain will, we conceive, have done a rather wonderful thing. And if the form of Great Britain's assistance is a guarantee to assist whichever power should be unprovokedly attacked by the other in violation of the latter's pledge, we do not see that the supposed present pact would involve Great Britain in any danger that she will not be involved in anyway. It is certain that France will never attack Germany if she is let alone; and if Germany in violation of agreement should attack France, Britain would in self-defence have to interfere anyway, whether pledged now or not.

The British course deserves, we think, the hearty support of Canadian opinion. Somebody in London presuming to speak for Canadian opinion doesn't seem to think so. There is often somebody in London presuming to speak for Canadian opinion with very little warrant. This time it is reported to be Lord Beaverbrook, or some newspaper speaking for him. Beaverbrook has his good points, but he is not in a position to know what many Canadians are thinking, and he would be safer to confine himself to interpreting public opinion closer to his own location. The idea seems to be that Canada does not want to run any chance of having to back up Great Britain in any trouble that can not be considered to directly affect Canada. We think we know Canadians as well as Lord Beaverbrook does, and we do not believe that the idea of selfish detachment from the interests of the Mother Country, or even from the affairs of the rest of the world is one that commands admiration among a majority of the Canadian people.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

They say they can't come back. And yet Harry K. Thaw seems to be able to command front page publicity.

The opening of the game fish season next week will bring the most enjoyment to the good sports who have been content to wait until bass and maskinonge could be legally caught.

Remembering the head lines on the stories of traffic casualities last Monday, motorists should resolve to make this week-end a safe one. Drive as you would like the other fellow to do.

A salmon shipped from New Brunswick was found to contain a bottle of Scotch whiskey. This was evidently a new variety of canned salmon.

The average Canadian's attitude toward the North Pole is that any one that wants it is welcome to it. We still have White River, and that is cold enough for anybody.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Following the excessive heat over last weekend there was almost a complete collapse and suspension of business in the cattle trade this week. The heat wave came on top of last week's record receipts for the season, when over 10,000 cattle were delivered here, including billed through cattle. As a result of the heavy buying by the local packers their coolers were already well filled with dressed beef when they were faced with further heavy receipts of cattle on Monday of this week and at the same time a complete breakdown in the consumption of beef by the public due to the terrific heat spell. This pyramiding of troubles for the packer and the shipper both was responsible for the most unfavorable marketing conditions this season. It was inevitable that prices would be affected, and a general decline all round took place. Choicest handy weight butchr stuff suffered the least at a decline of 25c butcher declined fully 50c from last week's average.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 13 (Canadian Press)—While the export business in Canadian wheat on the Montreal market yesterday was inactive, a very active trade was transacted in coarse grains, and especially so in oats, there being a good demand from continental buyers for supplies and this coupled with the demand from New York houses a large volume of business was accomplished It was estimated that sales of over 500,000 bushels were made, including No. 2 Canadian Western at fifteen cents per bushel over the July option, tough No. 2 Canadian Western at 9½ cents per bushel over, and No. 2 feed at 2⅝ to 2¾ cents per bushel over, C.I.F. Montreal.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for baled hay and prices were unchanged, but the volume of business showed no improvement and the market was quiet with car lots of good No. 2 Timothyf Hay quoted at $14 per ton, No. 3 Timothy Hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

There as no actual change in prices for eggs, but the undertone to the market was strong and the prospects were that a change in the upward direction will take place early next week. The volume of business in a wholesale jobbing way was fair, there being a steady demand from grocers and other dealers for supplies. The receipts were 2,267 cases, as compared with 4,190 for the same day last week, and 2,500 or the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of butter yesterday were 8,172 packages, as compared with 7,904 for the same day last week, and 2,500 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of butter yesterday were 8,172 packages, as compared with 7,904 or the same day last week, and 6,071 for the corresponding day a year ago. The feature of the trade was the demand that developed from English importers for supplies and as the prices bid were in line with exporters views a fairly large volume of business was accomplished it being estimated that sales of several thousand packages were made for shipment to London and Bristol, but it was stated that this demand would more than likely decrease owing to the fact that prices here now were on a level with New Zealand. Owing to the above there was a good demand on spot for all offerings and a much stronger feeling developed in the market and prices scored an advance of 1½c.

The receipts of cheese were 11,-270 boxes, as against 14,244 for the same day last week, and 10,313 for the corresponding day a year ago. Owing to the steady improvement in the demand for foreign buyers and the fact that cables were strong at a further advance of 38s 6d per cwt. quite an active business was done or export account with sale as high as 98s per cwt., and it was reported that some English houses who had bought here a few days ago re-sold here at 97c per cwt. This coupled with the increased demand for supplies on spot between houses created a much stronger feeling in the local market and prices were marked up ¾c to ¾c per lb. The markets in the country were excited and the offerings at Picton sold 1½c per lb. higher than a week ago at 19½c per lb.

Beans were quoted at $2.65 per bushel.

A THOUGHT.

A PRAYER

"If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness,
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning-face;
If dreams from happy human eyes
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books and my food ,and summer rain
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain;
Lord, Thy most pointed pleasure take
And stab my spirit broad awake;
Or, Lord, if too obdurate I,
Choose, then, before that spirit die,
A piercing pain, a killing sin,
And to my dead heart run them in."

W.M.S. MEETING.

Millbrook Ladies Have Enjoyable Session Outdoors—Mrs. Douglas Entertained.

MILLBROOK, June 13.— The Womans' Missionary Auxiliary in connection with what has been the Methodist church, but is now the United Church of Millbrook, held its June meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. Thos. Douglas, 7th Line, Cavan, over sixty being in attendance.

Although Union will not be formally consummated locally until the Inaugural services on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., yet some of those who were formerly members of the Presbyterian church, but whose sympathies are actively with this movement, were present on Thursday and were warmly welcomed as members of the missionary organiation.

The president, Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard, occupied the chair for the opening exercises, and the pastor, who is not often present at the women's meeting, led in prayer, the petitions having special reference to the momentous change which has just come about in the church life of Canada.

A report of the eight groups into which the membership of the Auxiliary is divided, was given, and the new lists of names read by the respective leaders. Ten names are on each group, Mrs. F. W. Smith taking the chair on behalf of the one responsible for Thursday's gathering.

Mr. T. H. Aiken asked permission to address the Auxiliary relative to this organization serving dinner on July Twelth, when the annual Orange walk is to be held in Millbrook for the first time in eighteen years.

Mrs. Offa Williamson, who represented the Auxiliary at the annual branch meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference held last week in Oshawa, gave a most comprehensive report of the three days' gathering, and sincerely thanked the members for giving her the privilege of attending so inspirational a congress of missionary workers.

The atmosphere of the convention was vividly brought to the home Auxiliary by the fact that Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. J. McKnight, who was the mission circle delegate gave some of the papers heard at Oshawa verbatim, instead of a condensed account from notes taken while listening to the speaker. One paper on "Leaking Valves," given by Mrs. (Rev.) Nichols, whose husband was at one time pastor of the Cavan South circuit, was particularly enjoyed, as was also the message from Mrs. Ashton, the Conference President.

Mrs. V. C. Lambert read Whittier's beautiful hymn, "Dear Lord, and Father, of mankind", Mr. G. McBain of Fairmount, led in prayer, and Mrs. W. West read the Scripture lesson from James 1:5—8.

On motion it was decided to cancel the meetings of the Auxiliary during July and August. Mrs. R. Lunn has invited the members to hold the September meeting at her home, Carmel. Mrs. J. Might extended an invitation for the October meeting. Miss Mary Widdis' group will be responsible for the program at the re-opening gathering in the fall.

Fortunately the weather was so favorable on Thursday it was possible to hold the meeting on the lawn, and Mrs. Douglas, assisted by a number of workers, served tea out of doors to the great enjoyment of the guests.

Among those present were: Mrs. Wilford Elson, Mrs. L.W. Smith, Mrs. J. Perrin, Mrs. Stanley Carveth, Mrs. John, and Mrs. Irwin Hatherly, Mrs. R. H. and Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. M. Weatherup, Mrs. Thos. Inxon, Mrs. L. Rea, Mrs. Murray McBain, Mrs. C. C. Garside, Mrs. J. Rowland, Mrs. W. Mullen, Mrs. Will Armstrong, Mrs. H. A. Earle, Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. W. E. Ball, Mrs. W. Lowes, Mrs. R. and Miss Martha Lunn, Mrs. W. West, Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Mrs. J. Spence, Mrs. R. H. Howard, Mrs. C. W. Richards, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. V. C. Lambert, Mrs. G.E. Burnham, Mrs. G. Locke, Mrs. G. McBain, Mrs. O. Williamson, Mrs. W. Larmer, Mrs. F. W. Smith, Mrs. Jas. Might, Mrs. Jas. Hutchison, Mrs. H. Lang, Mrs. Hamilton, Misses M. E. Hetherington, Estelle Hetherington, Stella Pethick, A. Hampton, Marie McBain, Gwen Hutchison, M. Widdis, E. Krieger, and others.

A number of the men who had kindly given us the use of their cars in conveying the members to the place of meeting, were also present and apaprently enjoyed the novelty of attending the women's missionary gathering.

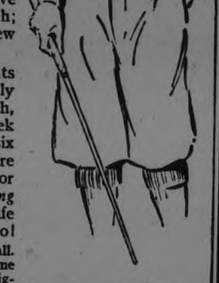
Play Given.

A fair audience assembled in the town hall to hear the play, "The Restful Hour Inn," which was given by the A.Y.P.A. of St. Paul's church, Perrytown, under the auspices of the St. Thomas' church young peoples' organization.

It was unfortunate that a number of other events in the vicinity conflicted with the entertainment, since the latter provided a most enjoyable evening, and those who were able to attend expressed their thorough appreciation of the manner in which the visiting young people carried out their respective characters.

The comedy was in three acts, was well staged and lasted for two hours. Mrs. (Canon) Allen, and Miss Mamie Collins contributed piano duets between the acts, to the pleasure of the listeners.

Among those taking part in the play was Rev. J. M. Crisal, the present incumbent of the Perrytown parish, the others being: Mrs. Seymour Taylor, Misses Victoria and Dorothy Wilson, Florence Corbett, Ada Wilson, Emma Noble. Messrs. Edwin and Percy Wilson and Jimmie Caldwell.



Does Golf Cost You More than Life Insurance?

Lost Ball!

"THAT'S the third ball I've lost to-day," says Smith; "and they were good, new balls, too!"

Good golf balls cost 75 cents to $1.00 or more. If you lost only one ball per game, at $1.00 each, playing but one game per week during the season of, say, six months, it would cost you more than what you would pay for $1000 worth of profit-participating life insurance in the Mutual Life of Canada, issued at the age of 30!

Perhaps you hardly ever lose a ball. Perhaps you lose life insurance in some other way. Now is a good time to figure out how you can stop some of the leaks and cover the risk you are running every day at the expense of your dependents.

Mutual insurance is insurance at net cost. The Mutual Book explains. Write for your copy to-day.

CANADA'S CLAIM TO NORTHLAND IS STILL CAUSING DISCUSSION

No New Claim is Being Made For Canadian Ownership, Says Stewart.

HISTORY GIVEN.

Canadian Officials Have Been Establishing Posts in Islands For Years.

OTTAWA, June 13 (Canadian Press). — Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, in a further statement issued last night, emphasized that no new claims are being made for Canadian ownership of Northern Archipelago. "The present policy," he said, "is simply a continuation of methods followed for many years past in administering the northern territories of the Dominion. For years," he adds, "the Canadian Government has been sending out expeditions, and at much expense has established posts at Ellesmere, Devon and other islands."

Mr. Stewart also states that in 1880, Great Britain, by Imperial Order-in-Council, transferred the Arctic Archipelago to Canada. The Order provided that "all British territories and possessions in North America and the islands adjacent to such territories and possessions, which are not already included in the Dominion of Canada, should (with the exception of the colony of Newfoundland and its dependencies) be annexed and form part of the said Dominion."

So far as discovery goes, Mr. Stewart says that the title of Great Britain, and thus of Canada, to the northern islands, is beyond question. With few exceptions, all the known insular areas in the Canadian Arctic were discovered and formally taken possession of by British commissioned navigators from a century to three quarters of a century ago, and such acts of possession were formally announced to the world in British Government blue books. A list of English navigators would include Bylot and Baffin, who discovered Ellesmere Island in 1616, Captain John Ross, R.N., Sir John Franklin, Commander Inglefield, R.N., Captain Nares, R.N., and many others.

"In 1670 King Charles II.," Mr. Stewart continues, "granted a charter to the Hudson's Bay Company, by virtue of which the company, for two centuries, exercised a proprietary government over the area covered by its charter and established posts throughout the Arctic drainage basin of the mainland. Since the sale of its rights and privileges to the British Crown and the transfer thereof to Canada, over a half century ago, the Hudson's Bay Company and other fur trading companies have extended their operations to the Arctic islands and have established posts therein, thus exercising a control over practically the whole of the native population.

"This was followed up by occupation and control on the part of Great Britain and Canada as regards the natives, both of the mainland and of the Arctic islands between Greenland and the 141st Meridian. The Canadian Government has sent many expeditions to the Archipelago, and formal proclamations have been made reaffirming British sovereignty. Police posts and Customs houses have been established at various points, detachments of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police make extensive patrols every year, and a general administration of the law and of the game regulations has been maintained. Duty has been collected on whalers' and traders' outfits entering the Archipelago. Game licenses have been issued and other acts of administration have been performed. The welfare of the natives is being looked after and an attempt is being made to have them adjust themselves to the white man's law as adapted to their special circumstances and conditions."

The area claimed by Canada is rounded on the east by a line passing midway between Greenland and Baffin, Devon and Ellesmere Islands on the 60th Meridian of longitude, following this meridian to the Pole; and on the west by 141st Meridian of longitude following this meridian to the Pole.

LINDSAY DOCTOR BROKE THE O.T.A.

Dr. Broad, V.S., Sentenced to Four Months in Jail For Selling Liquor.

FINED $500.

LINDSAY, June 13.—(Special).—Dr. Broad, V.S., of this town, was yesterday afternoon found guilty in Police Magistrate's Court of selling liquor, contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act. In view of recent amendments to the Act, and also in view of the fact that it was a second offence, Broad was given the minimum penalty, four months in jail. An additional fine of from $200 to $2,000 could be levied, but as the accused was fined $500 a couple of years ago for a similar offence, the Magistrate could not see how he could lessen the amount of the fine, which he placed at $500, and in default of payment an additional six months in jail.

On the night of the offence Officers Storey and Porter were watching suspicious characters leaving the premises of the accused, and after seeing two men depart from what appeared to be the laneway of the accused, they nabbed the third man before he had time to pull a cork or say "Jack Robson." He was told to take his hands out of his pocket, whereupon he was searched. A bottle, probably holding 14 ounces of "wet goods," was secured and confiscated. It was sampled by one of the officers and six ounces taken therefrom and sent to Toronto for analysis.

When placed on the stand the young man who had secured the bottle told a story to the effect that he had had conversation with the accused in the morning and asked him if he could fix him up a bit of alcohol (and anything else he wished to put in) as a liniment mixture to rub on his wife who was suffering from bronchial trouble. She had been to her own physician, but some person had recommended alcohol.

On calling at the house he had asked for the liniment, had paid over $2.00 and walked out with the bottle. A few minutes later he was nabbed by the officers and the bottle taken from him.

DOES EVERY MEAL CAUSE YOU DISTRESS?

If It Does You Should Take Burdock Blood Bitters

Mr. M. P. Eldrige, Beaver Harbor, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with my stomach for some time, and everything I ate seemed to distress me. I tried many different medicines, but without any results. Finally I was advised to try B.B.B., and after having taken several bottles I was completely relieved of my trouble. I can now eat anything I wish, thanks to B.B.B."

Burdock Blood Bitters puts the stomach into perfect shape by promoting proper digestion; and during the past 46 years it has been on the market has made a reputation, second to none, for relieving all stomach troubles.

WARNING GIVEN BY FUEL BOARD

Agreement Between Owners and Coal Miners Ends September 1.

MAY BE CESSATION.

OTTAWA, June 13. — (Canadian Press).— Dr. Charles Camsell, chairman of the Dominion Fuel Board, issues the warning that the wage agreement between the American Anthracite Operators and Miners will expire on September 1 of this year and that many well informed coal men fear a suspension of operations in the anthracite fields at that time.

Just at present, says Mr. Camsell Anthracite Coal is coming into Canada at a normal rate. There are also available other domestic fuels such as British Anthracite, coke and low volatile Bituminous coals and there will be shortly a certain amount of Alberta Domestic Coal, but should there be a suspension of operations in the Anthracite fields that would last for any considerable time. A very serious shortage of supply for domestic consumers in Central Canada might occur. This would result in high prices and possibly a recurrence of the distressing conditions of the winter of 1922-1923.

TO PERMIT SHELL AND DICE GAMES AT EXHIBITIONS

Amendment to the Criminal Code Legalizes Opertion of Games at Fairs.

"ROYAL" PROTECTED.

Penalty Provided for the Unauthorized Use of the Word.

OTTAWA, June 13. Canadian Press. — Consideration of a bill to amend the criminal code was again given in committee of the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. The amendments proposed permit the conduct of dice and shell games and the operation of punch boards or coin tables at agricultural fairs or exhibitions. Further provisions provide a penalty not exceeding $200 for the unauthorized use of the word "Royal" and constitutes an offence the carrying of forged revenue stamps in one's possession.

An additional amendment restores to the crown the right to appeal to the Court of Appeals on any ground of appeal, which involves a question of law alone.

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, supported the clause permitting the operation of dice and shell games in addition to punch boards or coin tables at agricultural fairs or exhibitions.

S. W. Jacobs (Liberal, George Etienne Cartier) thought this provision looked like "an attempt to legalize crime in the interests of Agricultural Associations."

R. H. Hanson (Conservative, York Sunbury) supported this section.

In reply to questions, Mr. Lapointe stated that the clause in question permitted the conduct of such games at all agricultural fairs whether in receipt of grants from Provincial or Federal governments, and also, to small fairs as well as A and B class ones.

Valuable Electric Apparatus Has Been Entirely Ruined By Hammers.

SYDNEY, N.S., June 13. (Canadian Press).—Quiet was reported throughout the colliery district of Cape Breton last evening, and the five hundred soldiers and police who arrived at noon from Halifax took up their quarters for the present in the lant of the steel company here.

At New Waterford, where the thirteen-week-old strike of the United Mine Workers of America against the wage rates of the British Empire Steel Corporation culminated Thursday in a bloody clash in which one miner was killed and two score wounded, all was quiet. The power plant, which the corporation police won by a surprise attack Thursday morning and lost in a counter-attack Thursday afternoon, when their forces were completely routed by the miners, presented a deserted aspect last night. There were no pickets and no company officials.

The power plant had been wrecked inside and out. Valuable electrical appliances and instruments had been torn from their emplacements and battered as though by sledge hammers, the windows smashed and two boilers were believed to have been burned beyond all usefulness through fires having been placed under them while they were empty of water. Two very essential and valuable pieces of electrical machinery will have to be ordered from an English firm which made the originals. Weeks must elapse, the authorities stated, before the plant can be again operated.

When the troop train arrived yesterday morning, it bore signs of having passed through difficulties. Windows were smashed and the cars scored by the stoning they received when passing through the northern colliery towns.

Walter P. Chrysler

Develops New and Finer Four-Cylinder Results

Walter P. Chrysler's long experience in the manufacture of automobiles convinced him there were possibilities in the four-cylinder principle that had never been realized.

This conviction was entirely justified and greater possibilities have been realized, as all Canada knows. There is no four-cylinder car on the market today that is in greater favor with Dominion motorists than the new good Maxwell—a Chrysler product.

Mr. Chrysler turned his genius as a master maker of motor cars to the development of these latent four-cylinder possibilities into actual performance qualities.

He was convinced that the same engineering skill that had created the revolutionary Chrysler Six was more than equal to the task and under his direction it was undertaken.

Mr. Chrysler had in mind a four of greater power and speed. He had in mind smoothness of power flow and an absence of vibration, heretofore unknown. He had in mind an alert engine, one that would respond as no four had ever responded before. He had in mind greater ease of riding and handling, greater comfort, greater economy.

Mr. Chrysler's devotion to the four-cylinder problem has resulted in a car that motorists the country over drive and endorse as the finest the industry has yet produced in its field.

Consequently, sales of the Chrysler-built Maxwell have mounted to unprecedented figures and are mounting higher every month.

To buy wisely one must know Walter P. Chrysler's contributions to finer four-cylinder motoring. We are always eager to give you the facts in the terms of actual performance.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan. Maxwell dealers and superior Maxwell service everywhere.

Through the Gates of Fairyland

By C. S. and A. G. HAMMOCK

The Sleeping Beauty in the Wood

Long, long ago, there lived in a great castle a wise King and his Queen. A little daughter was born to them, and they hoped she would grow up into a beautiful Princess, so when she was a year old, they gave a birthday party for her and invited all the fairies in the country. There were ten fairies altogether, but when the invitations were sent out, one of the fairies was far away on a visit, so only nine were asked to come to the party. It was to be a wonderful affair. There would be Kings and Queens, Princes and Princesses, Dukes and Duchesses. The minstrels would play music in the gallery—there would be dancing and feasting and every one would bring a present for the baby Princess.

On the day of the party the tenth fairy came home and she was very angry to find she had not been invited. So when they did ask her at the very last minute she made up her mind to do a very wicked thing.

At the birthday dinner of the little Princess the table was set for the nine fairies with wonderful plates and cups and goblets of gold set with sparkling jewels, which had been made especially for this party, but there was not time to make a set for the tenth fairy, and she had to eat from an earthen platter and drink from a pewter mug. This made her more angry than ever.

When the dinner was over, each of the nine fairies passed by the cradle where the baby Princess lay and gave her a birthday present, such as only fairies can bestow. One gave her Beauty, another gave her Charm, another Wisdom, and so on until all but two had passed the cradle.

The next in turn was the tenth fairy who had slipped in ahead of her turn.

"My wish," she cried, "is that on your seventeenth birthday you prick your finger with a bodkin and die!"

But the ninth fairy whom she had crowded out of her place had not yet given her wish, and she said to the tenth fairy, "And my wish is that she shall not die."

"But," said the tenth fairy, "you cannot undo my wish!"

"No, not entirely," said the other, "but instead of dying she shall sleep for a hundred years."

The Princess grew from babyhood to girlhood.

She became more and more beautiful every day, for the fairies had given her the gift of Beauty. She was wise; they had given her the gift of Wisdom, and she was in every way charming.

All the other birthday gifts were long since forgotten, for birthdays came every year with more gifts than she knew what to do with, but the gifts of the fairies she never lost—they were hers forever.

On the day she was seventeen, the Princess wandered into an old tower of the castle and found a spinning wheel that had lain there, forgotten, for many years. Seeing this, the Princess thought she would try to spin, but in doing so she pricked her finger with the spindle, and immediately fell to the floor.

There her parents found her sound asleep and they knew the fairy's wish had come true, so the best they could do was to make her comfortable and wish her pleasant dreams.

They dressed her in a silken robe and laid her on a bed of silken floss. Two men-at-arms stood at the door to guard her.

Then came the tenth fairy, sorry for what she had done, but unable to change her wish. So she touched with her magic wand all the servants and the household, so that they all fell asleep, and she took the King and Queen away to a distant castle.

Very quickly a thick forest grew around the castle where the Princess slept, a growth of tree and vines and thorny bushes so thick that none might penetrate.

There she lay on her soft and silken bed, and slept for a hundred years. A hundred years is a very long time, and before many years had passed the castle in the woods had been forgotten, for none took the trouble to cut a way through the dense forest, which grew denser and thicker to guard the sleeping Princess from prying eyes.

A new King and Queen reigned in the country, who knew nothing of the Princess in the silent castle among the sleeping servants. So even the story was lost. But the fairies remembered, for a hundred years is nothing among the fairies. They guarded the Princess day and night throughout all the years, counting the days that must pass before she would awaken. They all looked forward with joy to the time when her long sleep would end.

One day a great Prince was out with his men hunting in the forest when he spied the tower of a strange castle through the trees. He asked the huntsmen about it, but they only shook their heads. They knew of no castle in the wood and were as surprised as he.

Its towers rose above the trees and he wandered around the wood trying to get a better look at it, but every way he turned he found only vines and thorns and briers grown so thick they left no room for even a rabbit to pass through. Yet he felt that he must see that castle closer—so he told his men to cut away through the thorny bushes, but they could not. Determined to find a way to the castle, he walked toward the thicket and instantly a way opened before him and closed behind him so that none might follow. Thorns sheathed themselves, briers turned away and vines untangled themselves to make way for him as he advanced until he reached the gate of the castle.

There was not a sign of life about the place, no dogs to bark, no voice to challenge him.

Not a soul was there. He blew a blast on his hunting horn; no one answered. He called, but there was only the echo. Not a soul was there and the strangeness of the silent place almost made him turn back; but when he looked around he saw that the forest had closed again and he was a prisoner.

He crossed the drawbridge over the moat and entered the outer gate, then paused to blow a blast on his hunting horn, but no one answered. Slowly he entered the castle, and as he did so a strange sight met his eyes.

Along both walls stood silent rows of men-in-arms—motionless and with eyes closed and in sound sleep.

For the sleep-spell of the fairy had overpowered them just as they stood; so they had slept for a hundred years.

The servants slept singly and in groups all about the great hall and even on the stair. In the minstrels gallery the musicians slept just as they were when the spell was cast.

In the kitchen, cooks and helpers slept in the midst of preparations for a feast. In all the place there was no waking thing—not a sound to be heard.

Eager to find the secret of this great castle of sleep, he ascended the stairs, and in an upper room, on her silken bed, he found the Princess.

Never had he beheld so lovely a sight. And as he looked her cheeks became less pale, her bosom stirred, and slowly she opened her beautiful eyes and looked into those of the Prince. And presently all the castle awoke and everybody took up his task where he had stopped when sleep overcame him. And soon the cooks and butlers, none the worse for their hundred years' sleep, had a feast to prepare. And what a feast that was! No one present but the Prince had eaten in a hundred years!

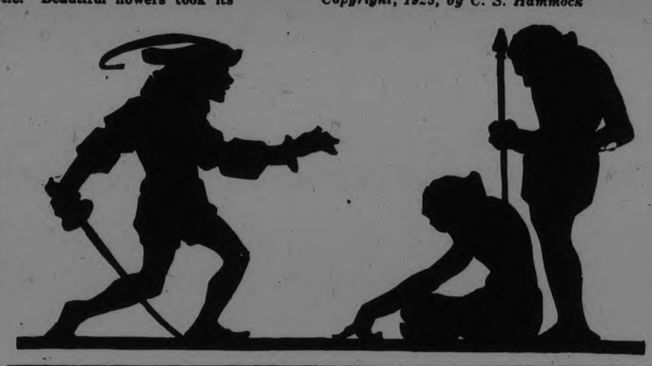
The Prince fell madly in love with the Princess and the Princess with him, for she had dreamed of him many times in her long sleep.

And the fairy caused the dense forest to vanish from around the castle. Beautiful flowers took its place and everything again looked as it did a hundred years before, when the long sleep began.

The Prince then bade the Princess adieu, promising to return often. He rejoined his horsemen who had been greatly troubled by his disappearance into the wood, and who were greatly surprised when the wood vanished and the castle and grounds came into view.

The Prince quickly told his men what had happened and then set off for home, where the news set all tongues awagging.

The Prince's hunting trips became more frequent and every one knew that a hunting trip simply meant another visit to the castle to see the beautiful Princess.



When the story spread about the kingdom, all the young knights who went hunting kept a sharp lookout for strange castles in the deep wood, thinking that they, too, might have an adventure; but no other castle was ever found.

It was no great surprise when the announcement went forth that the Prince and Princess were to wed.

The wedding was to take place in the castle of the Princess, that had been hidden from view so long. That may have been one reason why knights and ladies came from all parts of the kingdom to attend.

It was not long before there was another feast, and all the ten fairies were invited. They all came and gave them wonderful gifts—and the tenth fairy gave them the greatest gift of all.

She told them they would live happily ever after. And they did.

THE MAKING OF A UNITED CHURCH.

By J. Lewis Milligan.

After twenty-five years of negotiation and co-operation looking toward organic union, the Congregational, the Methodist, and the Presbyterian Churches of Canada have at last come to the hour of the consummation of their hopes and aspirations, in the establishment of the United Church of Canada. The appointed representatives of these three Canadian Churches [illegible] constitute the first General Council of the United Church of Canada. The occasion is of historic significance and of international as well as national interest. It will be an event far-reaching in its effects upon the future life and character of the people of the Dominion and the future relationship of the various Christian denominations throughout the world.

The United Church of Canada is unique in the history of Christendom, since it will be the first blending into one communion of three distinct types of Protestantism; it is Canada's contribution to that re-union of Christendom to which many are looking in fulfilment of the prayer of Christ that His followers may be one. The Church Unionists believe that the United Church will be an instrument for the unifying of the moral and spiritual forces, not only of Canada but of the whole Christian world. They believe that they are called upon to demonstrate the possibility of the union of these Chirstian communions of like principles and ideals which have for centuries been working in a state of separation, and oftentimes in competition, if not in opposition to one another.

From Newfoundland to Vancouver Island, the United Church of Canada will have a worshipping unit in every English-speaking community. The new Church will be truly Canadian in its scope and character, in that it will include French-Canadians within its fold, and also the Indian and probably the Eskimo.

While the United Church will be truly national, it will also be cosmopolitan in its make-up, since it will include in its membership and sphere of service many foreign races settled in Canada. Within the fold of the United Church there will be British, French, Indian, Italian, German, Jewish, Ruthenian, Ukrainian, Scandinavian, Russian, Polish, Finnish, Checko-Slovakian, Hindu, Chinese and Japanese. The Congregational Church will have the honour of introducing a little colour into the United Church by bringing with it the "Coloured" Congregational Church (Negro) of Montreal. The Methodist Church has a very live Italian Mission in Toronto, while the Presbyterian Church had the distinction of establishing in Toronto the first Christian Synagogue. In Western Canada intensive mission work is being carried on among the foreign settlements. Much of this work is of an educational and social, as well as evangelical character. The problem of "Canadianizing" this alien element is one of political as well as of religious importance. Several journals are published in foreign languages under the auspices of the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches.

One of the greatest incentives to Union in Canada has been the conditions in the West where the population is scattered and where the difficulties of maintaining denominationalism have been overwhelming. But even more serious is the problem of the foreign settlements. These people are for the most part good settlers on the land, but they live in segregated areas, isolated from the life of Canada as a whole. They are citizens of Canada and can sway elections by their votes, but their knowledge of Canadian ideals and citizenship is practically nil.

Anihilate Church.

The chief argument directed against union was that it was an attempt to anihilate the Presbyterian Church. It was derided as "One Big Union," and a "Religio-Political Machine," while the Methodists were accused of attempting to "gobble up the Presbyterians"—a rather risky business when one considers Scottish-Irish composition of Presbyterians in Canada! Along with this scoffing, appeals were made to Unionists to submit the question to "another vote of the people," with a view to delaying the Movement, and a scheme for Federation was put forward as an alternative to organic union.

The newspapers were flooded with letters attacking Union, and these were replied to with equal vigor by the Unionists. The controversy has been one of the most interesting ecclesisatical warfares of modern times. The Church Unionists were responsible for instituting a new tractarian Movement which has been of inestimable educational value in regard to Church history. Church government and theology,—not to mention literary training in the exercise of dialectics!

The Westminster Confesion of Faith, which was out of print, and which was little known and less used among Presbyterians, has found a new lease of life. The "reprobation" clauses of this ancient document have been revived and even laid down as essential to Presbyterianism and legally binding in regard to the holding of trust property. The leading opponents of Union issued a Writ against the members of the General Assembly's Committee on Church Union for the purpose of restraining them from applying to Parliament for enabling legislation. The Statement of Claim accompanying this Writ specifically cited the reprobatory passages from the Westminster Confession which states that "a fixed number of men and angels" are "decreed to death," and set these over against a clause in the Basis of Union which affirmed that "God freely offers His all-sufficient Salvation to all men." This Writ, however, has never been pressed in the courts, and is still in a state of suspense, like the sword of Damocles over the heads of the Unionists. The Antis based their hopes upon the precedent "Wee Free" case, in which the House of Lords gave judgment against the Scottish Unionists; but since that judgment was virtually quashed by the action of the British Parliament, the Canadian Unionists had a later precedent in their favor.

The Act of Incorporation of the United Church of Canada contains a section declaring the freedom of the United Church to change its form of Government and to interpret or recast its doctrinal standards. This is regarded by the Unionists as a charter of religious liberty for all denominations in Canada, as it will prevent a repetition of the recent controversy in view of further union in the future, so far as the legality of property transfer is concerned.

The securing of this enabling legislation was in itself a great gain to the Churches, but it was not obtained without a struggle. The bills were opposed by the Anti-Unionists in the Federal and Provincial Parliaments, and, in some instances, amendments were secured which more or less impeded the progress of Union; but in no case was the principle of the measure defeated. The most detrimental amendment was that inserted in the Federal Act calling for a vote by ballot in congregations This gave an opportunity for further disturbance in local Churches and a campaign of agitation was at once set on foot.

The strength of the United Church, as compared with the non-concurrent Presbyterian congregations, is indicated by the fact that of the 9,511 congregations in the three Uniting Churches 687 have voted against union. The United Church will have over six-hundred missionaries in the foreign fields, which include China, Japan, Korea, Formosa, India, Africa, Trinidad, and British Guiana.

$100,000 DAM TO BE BURST IN TEST

Startling Experiment Planned to Solve Engineering Problems.

One of the most startling scientific tests ever conceived soon will be made not far from Fresno, Calif., when the Engineering Foundation, the joint research organization of the American Societies of Civil, Mining, Metallurgical, Mechanical and Electrical Engineers, will construct a full size arch dam for the sole purpose of causing it to burst under pressure of the water it impounds.

The object of the test is to determine the weakest parts of dams of this type of construction and their manner of failure, for the purpose of ascertaining how to build dams of maximum safety, yet with minimum thinness of construction and consequent economy of material. The experiment will cost $100,000, says "Popular Science Monthly."

The experiment will furnish engineering science with its first opportunity to perform needed tests of dam construction on an adequate scale. In the past, engineers have been dependent for their knowledge of dams upon the results of experiments with small models in laboratories, and upon the development of various methods of design by mathematics.

Through the Department of the Interior and the southernCalifornia Edison Company an ideal site and suitable facilities have been obtained for the test dam on Stevenson Creek, a small tributary of the San Joaquin River. The creek gorge is of granite, steep and narrow, so that the reservoir will be small. A recently completed water-supply tunnel is near and provides means for furnishing and controlling the water needed.

The idea of the engineers in charge of the experiment is to approximate the most daringly thin dams that have been built, and perhaps "go them one better." Then, after many tests and measurements, an attempt will be made to break the dam in order to discover its weakest part and the manner of failure For this purpose the dam will be extended vertically to increase the depth of water and its pressure against the dam.

FIND ODD JUNK IN HUMAN STOMACHS

Surgeons' Knives Disclose Amazing Variety of Foreign Objects Swallowed.

In hospitals in many parts of the United States are museums where are displayed an amazing assortment of articles, mostly useless. There are carpet tacks, pins, needles, fragments of combs and eyeglass frames, thumbtacks, bits of wire, shoe laces, pieces of bed springs, paper clips, metal tags, washers, curtain hooks, cartridges, shot, safety-razor blades, teeth, both natural and false, spoons, hairpins, phonograph needles, safety-pins, fragments of bone, watermelon and other seeds, coffee beans, pieces of solder, beads strung and unstrung, and coins, the last almost enirely of denominations less than half a dollar.

Such articles, you would say, would make only a poor display in a museum case. They do. It happens, however, that virtually every one of the thousands of articles so displayed represents a human life that was saved, writes Ada Patterson in "Popular Science Monthly." For these odd collections of useless hardware, vegetable matter and trinkets are made up of the odd things people swallow.

People take these singularly indigestible objects into their systems for a variety of reasons. A small percentage pass into the stomach, throat or lungs by accident. The most careful person is likely to swallow a peach or prune pit, a small bone, a pebble, or bird-shot with his food and not realize that he has done so.

Most of these foreign bodies that are swallowed, however, are taken by intent. The professional swallowers—"human ostriches" they call themselves—who entertain in the side shows at county fairs have contributed many weird additions to the odd surgical museums.

Many other persons swallow sharp objects—nails, needles, knives, and razor blades—with suicidal intent. Other habitual swallowers are mentally deranged, or suffer from some peculiar physiological condition that causes them to enjoy the irritation hard or sharp objects set up in their internal organs. Then a great many of those who have been operated on have been infants whose careless mothers or nurses have left bright and attractive, but dangerous, objects within their reach.

Not long ago an operation on a 15-year-old girl in Michigan resulted in the removal of almost a thousand things she had swallowed. These included safety-pins, earrings, watch chains, stove bolts, coins, metal street-car tokens, brooches, adhesive tape, shoe laces and bits of ribbon—almost four pounds in all.

A professional "swallower" in Chicago yielded 272 metal objects in an operation, the contents of his stomach including upholstery tacks, nuts, bolts, screws, a can-opener, a couple of handfuls of thumbtacks, almost a box of fair-sized nails, cartridges, safety pins, paper clips and coins.

Removal of foreign objects from the throat or windpipe has been facilitated greatly by the invention of the bronchoscope by Dr. Chevalier Jackson, of Philadelphia. This device consists of a long, flexible tube within which is a series of mirrors that reflect an image of the object to be removed. Illumination is supplied by a small electric light. Through this tube, the operating surgeon inserts his forceps and readily withdraws the object that has been swallowed.

VACATION HELPS TO KEEP MAN FIT

Change of Scene, New Ideas, Give Your Brain a Rest, is Plan.

There was a time when years alone measured a man's age Far better to judge a man's age by the condition of his arteries, his kidneys or his liver. With the growing increase in life's span, soon an employer will not ask—"how old are you?" but "how is your heart? your liver?"

The healthy man of 65 is a far more useful citizen than the young man of 35 who has not taken care of himself.

Combined with right living, vacations are most useful in keeping folks young, and healthy. Nature intended that all of us should have vacations—probably longer vacations than we usually take.

Once vacations were looked upon as fads, something the rich alone could enjoy. Now scientific medicine knows that vacations are useful in keeping folks well. Big employers of labor know it is wise to offer vacations with pay, because it results in greater efficiency and greater contentment in the job. Hundreds more are being converted to the idea every year.

To enjoy a vacation to the utmost, plan a change of scene if you can. Meet new people. Expose yourself to new ideas. Plan a vacation that will take you out of your accustomed rut. There is no particular virtue in simply remaining away from work for two weeks, with your mind on the office force or on your job, wondering how things are going.

Of course things are going on. Just remember that they would have to if you never came back to the old desk and consequently shut them out of your mind completely.

Give your brain a rest—a vacation just as well as your body.

True there is always the cost to be considered in taking your holiday. But to take a vacation in the true sense of the word does not call for a big expenditure of money.

Suppose you are an office worker and decide not to travel this summer. All right, you are to forget the office, and do the things that will give you unaccustomed experience. Get out in the open. Go swimming, loaf on the beach, absorb the ultra violet rays from the life-giving sun! Hike with some good companions! Play differently than you do during your working months.

Since you work inside, it would do you good to get out in the country. Walk. Walk while you still have the pair of legs God gave you! Spend a day or two on a farm! See how the things are produced that you will eat during the rest of the year!

Play! Exercise! Sleep! Loaf! Do these simple things during your vacation and you will come back to the job a new man, ready for new worlds to conquer.

A flawless emerald is worth more than a diamond of the same weight.

SAILOR'S FORTUNE GOES TO WOMAN WHO TIDIED UP

Man Who Sailed Round World Appreciated Attentions Given

"LEFT A LADY"

Widow Who Befriended Financier Knew What Was in Will

The whole of his fortune of more than £70,000 has been left to a companion-help, Mrs. Jane Holt, a widow, of Huntington street, Nottingham, by Mr. George Parkin Cooley, a financier, of Nottingham and New York, who died last February.

Mrs. Holt visited the home of Mr. Cooley daily in order to look after his requirements.

"Mr. Cooley was a retired sea captain who had several times sailed round the world," Mrs. Holt said. "I befriended him eight years ago, and as he lived alone I went each day to keep things tidy and to see to his occasional needs, also travelling with him when he went away.

"The will was made three years ago at Liverpool, when he told me I should be 'left a lady.'"

GAVE SHIP ORDERS IN BRITAIN TO HELP

Company Loses Over Quarter Million Pounds to Aid Unemployed

Over £2,700,000 is to be spent in British shipyards by the Blue Star Line on their new fleet of eight express steamers of large refrigerator capacity to bring their Argentine to London chilled meat service up to date. This order will ensure a year's work for 7,000 men.

"In placing these orders in the United Kingdom we are paying out of our own pockets £300,000 more than we should have paid had the ships been built on the Continent," said Sir Edmund Vestey, who, with Lord Vestey, owns the Blue Star Line.

"We believe it is in the interest of the country that we should make this sacrifice.

"There is no one more in favor of Free Trade than Lord Vestey and myself, but we have been forced to realise that our present system of leaving our large English markets open to nations that refuse to admit the produce of our working people is anything but Free Trade."

FELL 200 FEET OVER CLIFFS BUT LIVES

Broken Ankle Only Result of Fall by Lucky Man

"I was suddenly giddy. The next thing I knew was that I landed in the sand."

This was how Edward Willett, 38, of Tackleway, Hastings, described his fall of nearly 200 feet from a cliff while gathering broom.

Willett is in the Royal East Sussex Hospital, suffering from a broken ankle and a bruise in the forehead. He is able to talk about his wonderful escape from death.

"If I had not landed in some soft sand at the bottom of the cliff, I should not be here to tell the story," he said.

"I was walking along when suddenly everything began to swim. I do not remember hitting the face of the cliff, but I was quite conscious when I landed in the sand. Some men helped me. I am the luckiest man alive."

Willett has a wife and two children.

EARTH HIS COUCH, SNOW HIS BLANKET

Irishman of the Hills Had Frame of Steel

A hermit of the Tipperary mountains, Michael Connolly, known locally as "Johnny of the Hills," was the subject of an inquest, at which it was stated that he:

Lived alone in the open for 25 years.

Often slept out covered with snow —and wakened up a fresh man.

Was found dead in a small structure covered with heather, into which a police officer had to creep on hands and knees.

"If ever there was steel in a human frame, this was an instance," commented a juryman.

Death from natural causes was the verdict.

MOTHER LEADS SON BY EAR FROM ALTAR

Learning that her son had arranged to marry, a Grimsby woman went to the church just as the wedding party was about to go in.

Seizing her son by the ear, the mother said, "Come home, my lad; you're not going to marry her," and, still holding his ear, she led him away.

The bride, to avoid a scene, hurried off in the opposite direction.

ADMIRER SENT CASH WITH OFFER

Irene Menzies, a thirteen-year-old Dalton-in-Furness girl, whose photograph as a "Rose Queen" appeared in the press, has received an offer of marriage by post.

Her admirer, who thought that she was over twenty years of age, wrote from Bangor, Wales, enclosing a cheque for £400, which is to be returned.

TWO DIAMOND WEDDINGS IN SOMERSET VILLAGE.

Two diamond weddings were celebrated in the village of Cheddon Fitzpane, near Taunton, on the same day.

The couples are Mr. and Mrs. James Sparkes and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hooper, and their combined ages total 344 years.

The Hooper family consists of five sons, five daughters, 36 grandchildren, and 10 great grandchildren. Eleven grandsons served in the war, and all returned.

Mr. Sparkes is still active at 91, and recently repaired the clock in the village Post Office, of which he was formerly sub-postmaster.

MALE TIPSTER WHO POSED AS A GIRL

Sent Photograph and Love-Letters, Then Borrowed Money

PICKED WINNER

Police Shattered Illusions of Hull Man Who Developed Romance

An amazing story of a Halifax man who posed as a pretty young woman, and worked on the credulity and affections of others, was told, when Brian Lawrence, aged fifty, of Halifax, was charged with obtaining £45 10s. by false pretences. He pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

The victim, a Hull man, won a prize in a newspaper competition, and he received an offer to supply selections from Lola Brian, the name, it was stated, adopted by Lawrence. He accepted same, and later "she" wired Greek Bachelor for the City and Suburban, which won at 25 to 1.

Then followed a letter in which "she" said "she" was twenty-four, and desired a male companion. Photographs were exchanged, the letters became affectionate, and a holiday together in Manchester was arranged. Requests for money followed, and the man sent various sums amounting to £45 10s., and promised to send "her" ten shillings a week until an expected legacy was paid to "her."

Disillusionment came when the police called upon him and told him the girl was a man.

Mr. Bentley, who prosecuted, said this was not an isolated case. After his last term in prison Lawrence had written a series of articles, giving an account of his exploits for a Scottish newspaper.

FALSE TEETH SET WITH A DIAMOND

World's Best Dressed Woman Left Much Valuable Jewellery

"A set of false teeth, with diamond," figured in the catalogue of the sale of the jewellery which belonged to the late Mrs. Margaret Smith-Wilkinson, of Matlock, who had the reputation of being the best-dressed woman in the world.

Some of her best jewels were not in the catalogue. These included a ring of large square emeralds, worth about £500; a necklet of diamonds for which she gave £500 to a countess who was in need of money: and the Russian crown, said to have cost £632,000, but which actually cost £50. There was included the celebrated £1,000,000 pearl necklace, however, described as "The famous large rope of imitation pearl beads."

It will be remembered how Society gasped at the sight of this "million pound" necklace when she wore it at the Devonshire House ball. It was given to Mrs. Smith-Wilkinson by an American admirer, and great was her disgust at finding it was paste.

Mrs. Smith-Wilkinson left £17,000, but nothing was bequeathed to her husband.

PROVED HIS SANITY BUT LOST FORTUNE

Illegal Detention Followed by Law Actions Cost Big Sum

W. S. Harnett, the Sittingbourne farmer, whose claim against two doctors in connection with his detention in asylums was finally disposed of in the House of Lords, when reasons were given for their lordships' dismissal of his appeal, declares that in clearing his name from the stigma of insanity he has lost his fortune.

He estimates his losses during his nine years' detention at £7,351. Costs of his various actions amount to £12,000, the total loss or expenditure being thus over £19,000.

GRANDDAUGHTER TO PAY HONOR DEBT

For the honor of the family name Miss Beatrice Eastwood, of Derby, has decided to pay in full all the ordinary creditors of the local firm of Eastwood, Swingler and Company, which has gone into voluntary liquidation.

This will involve her in the payment of several thousand pounds for which she has not the slightest legal shares. She holds only a few hundred shares, but she considers that she is taking the only cause possible in the circumstances. Miss Eastwood is the granddaughter of the firm's founder.

ONLY RATEPAYER OWN RATE COLLECTOR

John Elliott, of Nesbit Hall Farm, Easington, Durham, is in the unique position of being his own parish overseer and rate collector.

Nesbit Hall Farm is in the parish of Nesbit under the Easington Board of Guardians, and although the parish boasts of six Parliamentary voters, it has only one ratepayer. Mr. Elliott, being that ratepayer, has represented the parish on the local board for some years.

HOVE MAN SAYS MONEY USELESS SO GIVING IT AWAY

Inventor of Cigarette Making Machine is Making Millions

JOY OF LIVING

Aged Widower Finds Personal Interest in Results of His Gifts

Mr. Berhard Baron, a widower, aged 74, and worth millions, is giving his money away. He is chairman and managing director of Messrs. Careras, Ltd., of Hove, near Brighton.

How much he has given away and how much he is going to give away it is impossible to estimate, but it is probable that already his gifts to private individuals, institutions and hospitals run almost into seven figures.

Within the last few hours he has given something like £700,000 away.

Mr. Baron lives in a comparatively unostentatious villa in The Drive, at Hove, and when asked to confirm a report that he intended to give £300,000 to charities, replied, "Yes, it is quite true. I have nothing to do with my money now but give it away. I have been giving it away for a long time. I shall be 75 next December, and then I hope to make people sit up.

Mr. Baron has made the following gifts during the last few weeks:—

- £8,000 for a new wing for the Hove Hospital.
- £11,000 to the New Liberal Jewish Synagogues Building Fund.
- £2,500 to the Jewish Maternity Home, London.
- £10,000 to the London Jewish Hospital.
- £1,000 to the St. George's Jewish Settlements, London, E.
- £300 to clear the debt of the Hutchison House Club for Working Lads, Aldgate.
- £600 to the Leman street, (Aldgate) Girls' Club.

Last December he gave £300 to relatives and his children. Recently, too, he made considerable money gifts to the employees of Carreras, Limited.

In the case of three workmen who had been in his employ for 27 or 28 years, his gifts consisted of shares in the company worth many thousands of pounds.

But there is no doubt that all his monetary gifts he derives the most intense pleasure from those made to hospitals and similar institutions.

"Charity," he said, "has no religion. Charity knows no nationality. It springs from something higher than ourselves, and of which we know very little. I make money. I have made tons of money. But what good is it to me? I am still making plenty of money, and I tell you there is nothing in it—nothing in continually making, making, making.

"But to give! In some way which I cannot explain to you at all, I get the greatest joy out of that. When I see a sick man in hospital getting better, and I know that I have given towards making him better, then—as they say—that gets me. I feel a personal interest in that man. It seems to me that he is my brother."

Mr. Baron still attends to his business and goes up to London for a week, and then spends a week at home.

"I still look after my interests there," he said. "There are two million pounds' worth of them.

"But here in Hove I live today no better than I lived 20 years ago. I am an individual of simple tastes. Of course, if I want anything I get the best money will buy, but it is extraordinary how little I want. I seem to have no desire.

"I go to the South of France for a few months every year, and I have been doing that for the last 20 years."

In conclusion, Mr. Baron simply added these words, "It is not the giving of these tens of thousands that gives me pleasure. I mean it is not because I am able to give tens of thousands. It would be the same if I was a poor man and could give only sixpence."

ROAD TO FORTUNE

Mr. Baron's life has been a remarkable one. To epitomise it one might say:

A penniless man; a poor inventor who made a revolutionary machine for manufacturing cigarettes; a millionaire.

He is of French descent, and started in America as a cigar maker. In those early days he worked at the same bench as the late Sam Gompers.

Then he invented the Baron cigarette-making machine.

He has been a naturalized British subject for many years, and today numbers Ramsay Macdonald and Arthur Henderson among his friends. At the last election he started the Labor party's election fund with £5,000.

CIRCUS OWNER DIES IN CARAVAN

Never Lived in House—Whole Family in Circus Business

Her only son, who will carry on her circus, four daughters, and twenty grandchildren are also in the circus business. Her husband was a famous acrobat.

Mrs. Baker was robbed of all her jewellery and a large sum of money at Barnet Fair last summer, and the loss affected her health.

UNCLE OF VISCOUNT LASCELLES IS SHOT

Found With Fishing Rod Attached to Trigger of Gun

The Hon. Francis John Lascelles, half-brother of the Earl of Harewood and uncle of Princess Mary's husband, Viscount Lascelles, has been found shot dead at his residence, Lee House, Romsey.

The body was found in the smoking-room, lying on the floor near an empty chair opposite the muzzle of a double-barrelled gun which had been fixed between two leaves of an expanding table. A rod was tied to the trigger.

Mr. Lascelles, who was fifty-three years of age, and the ninth son of the fourth Earl of Harewood, married a daughter of Robert Anstice Stradling, of Bristol, in 1905.

A number of years ago he was seized with hallucinatory delusions while ranching in Canada, and shot a Chinese. He underwent treatment in a nursing home, and was then brought home by relatives.

ARAB PATRIARCH WHO SAW NAPOLEON

Man Claiming to Be 140 Years Old With Enormous Appetite

There is one man living who claims to have seen Napoleon Bonaparte in person.

Members of the Royal Geographical Society were told of him by Mr. H. St. John B. Philby, a former political officer in Arabia, who described a journey from the Dead Sea to Aqaba.

This man who claims to have seen Napoleon is Hajj Tahir, one of the many visitors to King Husain during his stay in Trans-Jordania. He claimed to be 140 years old, having been born at Mecca. Then, in the year 1799, when about 12 or 13, Hajj Tahir migrated to Palestine when Napoleon was operating on the Syrian coast.

"I do not vouch for the soundness of this claim," said Mr. St. John Philby, "but it is locally accepted on the evidence of the oldest inhabitants who declare that they had never known him as anything but an old man.

"He is sound in wind and limb, and has an enormous appetite, and, strangest of all, an indisputable power of mastication with the aid of what purports to be a newly-sprouting, but still invisible, third set of teeth.

He declares that he committed matrimony for the first time at the age of 75 or thereabouts—and he has recently married again.

FORMER HALF TIMER LEAVES FORTUNE

Bequests of Vegetarian, Teetotaller and Non-Smoker to Missions

A "half-timer" in a spinning-mill at the age of 12, Joseph Wilson, of Bradford, who died at the age of 91, has left a fortune of £37,000.

Mr. Wilson was head of the manufacturing firm of Joseph Wilson, Ltd. He was a vegetarian, teetotaller and non-smoker.

Mr. Wilson left a mission house and institute with land in Bradford to the Gospel Temperance Mission, which he conducted, also £100 a year and a sum of £500. He directed that the mission should be carried on as "a teetotal and non-smoking school."

Membership is strictly confined to those who "keep the pledge." Mr. Wilson left £1,000 on trust to continue his subscriptions to temperance and vegetarian organisations.

LONDON'S TRAFFIC TAKES HEAVY TOLL

One hundred and eighty-five persons were killed by the traffic in London streets during the past three months. The number of persons involved in accidents was 17,810.

Omnibuses were responsible for thirty-eight deaths and 1,883 accidents, tramcars for five deaths and 1,062 accidents, taxicabs for nine deaths and 901 accidents, private motor cars forty-two deaths and 5,160 accidents, motor cycles nine deaths and 4,163 accidents, and trade and commercial vehicles for sixty-seven deaths and 4,163 accidents.

Pedal cycles were in 1,628 accidents, in which two people were killed.

OXFORD "BAGS" WERE YARD ROUND

Students' Trousers Eclipsed Feminine Toilettes for Delicacy of Shades

Oxford "bags" went to 32 ins. at the feet in honor of the opening of Eights Week. Some were estimated to be a full yard round.

They were mostly white ones, and the wearers preened themselves in the company of pretty cousins and sisters.

There was much more material in one leg of some of the Oxford "bags" than went to make some of the women's dainty toilettes. One male "creation" consisted of a black coat like a curate's, lavender Oxford "bags," and a sort of pyjama jacket of light blue, with a black tie tied in the Chelsea fashion.

Many of the wide trousers were made in material of bright and delicate shades. There was, in fact, a pitched battle of color with the feminine visitors, and trousers of mauve, cinnamon, biscuit, and blue seemed to eclipse the toilettes of the river girls.

HYBRID RACING CAR AND AIRPLANE

Novel Method of Increasing Speed is Latest Proposal

An extraordinary hybrid vehicle which is a motor-car in front and an aeroplane at the back, is the latest idea for increasing the speed of racing motor-cars.

It is to have a powerful engine in front, driving a couple of pneumatic-tyred wheels. Then it tapers away in a stream-lined form, which ends in a vertical rudder exactly like that of an aeroplane, with a couple of curved horizontal surfaces like the elevators of a flying machine.

When at rest on the ground the machine stands on its two front wheels, with its tail drooping behind, and supported by one small rear wheel. But as soon as it begins to move rapidly across the ground the pressure of air under the rear elevators causes the whole of the tail part of the machine to lift and float through the air exactly like a flying machine.

At top speed only two front wheels touch the ground. All the rest of the weight is air-borne by the tail-planes.

The driver steers by movements of the land-wheels and also by turns of the big air-rudder. He can also adjust the angle of the elevating planes as required.

Phenomenal speeds are predicted for such machines.

WEYMOUTH HAS BOY MAYOR AND COUNCIL

Is Given Seat on Bench and Wears Scarlet Gown

Weymouth has now a civic corporation of thirty-two boys as well as a town council. It was elected by the boys of the elementary schools, and the juvenile councillors elect an equally juvenile mayor and eight aldermen and other officials.

Robes are being provided for them. The boy mayor will be in scarlet, the aldermen will wear gowns of red and purple, and the councillors will be attired in sombre black.

Weymouth's official mayor is taking up the idea with enthusiasm. The boy mayor will visit the mayor's parlor, so that he can see something of the duties, civic and social, of a mayor. He will also have a seat on the bench of the police court, and will be instructed in magisterial procedure.

NEW SEA SERPENT

Latest Takes Form of Shetland Pony With Dog's Head

Taking part in fly-fishing at Skerry Rock, near Peterhead, two fishermen were amazed to see on a part of the rock an uncanny monster, which they described as smaller than a Shetland pony. It had a dirty white but smooth coat, four feet, and a head something like that of a collie dog.

It slipped down the rock and disappeared in the sea.

Both fishermen are positive that this fresh form of a sea serpent was not a seal, but it might have been a sea lion or a walrus. They were certain they had seen a beast very like it at a menagerie.

V.C. IS COFFEE STALL KING AT WEMBLEY

Australian Seized Opportunity to Oust Sandwich Sharks

MAORI HELPER

Serves Twenty Thousand Customers in Day Outside Exhibition

Captain W. J. Symonds, who won the V.C. at Gallipoli, and last year opened a coffee-stall outside the Wembley Exhibition, now feeds 15,000 people within the exhibition each day.

He is the grandson of a Cornish man, who ran away from Oxford to marry a fifteen-year old girl and then followed the great gold rush to Australia.

"Eighteen months ago," Captain Symons related to a press representative, "I came here from Australia on holiday. I went to Goodwood races, and was amazed at the price asked there for food. Sandwiches cost a shilling!

"Then the idea came into my head of remaining in this country and starting a quick-lunch bar. It meant surrendering a lot, but I thought the idea could be made a success.

AT RACE MEETINGS.

"I began at Chelmsford races, and attended two or three more meetings before I established myself outside the Wembley Exhibition. Before the exhibition closed I had eight employes, and was serving from our little stall 5,000 people a day.

"Out of all that number only a few recognized me, and they were men I had met either in France or in Gallipoli.

"When, three months ago, a caterer for the workmen at the exhibition was required, I immediately applied, and was accepted by the authorities. Yesterday I took £500, which, at an average of sixpence per meal, represents meals for about 20,000 people."

A Maori who was with Captain Symons at Gallipoli is now in charge of a canteen, and another ex-soldier, who gained the D.C.M. when fourteen years of age is his chief accountant.

CAT PLAYED GHOST ROLE IN DORSET

Operated Knocker on Front Door and Then Disappeared

Mr. Allen Bullock, writing from West Moors, Dorset, tells how his cat, Toppets, played the role of ghost.

Nocturnal knockings at the front door of the house in which Mr. Bullock lives disturbed the family. The knocks were answered once or twice but no one was waiting for admittance.

It looked as if a first-rate ghost story was about to develop until the imprint of a cat's paw was found on the knocker.

Toppets, it seems, had been shut up in the kitchen and, by an oversight, deprived of his evening walk.

His dignity was hurt, and he indulged in reprisals by knocking loudly on the front door and then bounding across the lawn to a high tree.

MINERS HEAD LIST IN BIGGEST FAMILIES

Professional Workers Have Lowest Average Number of Children

Facts about family life are dealt with for the first time in an analysis of the 1921 Census for England and Wales, issued by the Stationery Office recently. This brings out some curious points. The largest families are found among—

Miners (43 per cent above the average);

Makers of coke, lime and cement.

At the other extreme are found—

Professional workers (29 per cent below the average);

Workers in textile trades.

Out of 7¼ million families, nearly 3½ million families contained no children at all under 16.

In 23 per cent there was one child only, in 15 per cent there were two children, while families of three or more children under 16 comprised only 19 per cent. of all families.

The average number of "dependent" children per married man or per married woman was 1.27 and rises with the age of the parent to a maximum of 2.16 children in the case of married men of 39 to 40.

MAN WHO WAS CHASED BY TWENTY-SIX WARSHIPS, ACQUITTED OF FRAUD

Amazing Adventures of Captain Gardiner, Who Invented Submarine Net, Commanded Mystery Ship and Created World's Record for Diving

These are some of the things done, according to his own story, during an adventurous life by Charles Alfred Gardiner, 58, who was at the Old Bailey found not guilty on charges of obtaining a cheque for £200,000 by false pretences from the Gardiner Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, Poole, Dorset, of which he was director, of publishing false statements to induce persons to become shareholders, and of perjury.

Salved gold from a warship lost 100 years ago.

Commanded a mystery ship in the war.

Invented a type of submarine net.

Intervened in the Moroccan war at the invitation of Abd-el-Krim.

Been chased by 26 Spanish warships.

Laid mines in Russo-Japanese War.

Commanded Chilean vessel in a Chilean revolution.

Commanded Australian bushmen in the Boer War.

Wounded 9 times.

After Captain Gardiner had given evidence, the jury stopped the case, and he was found not guilty and discharged.

Rear-Admiral Sir Edward Inglefield, secretary of Lloyd's from 1909 to 1920, said that before the war Captain Gardiner was conducting salvage operations on the Lutine, the man-o'-war wrecked off the Dutch coast 126 years ago, from which the Lutine bell at Lloyd's was recovered.

There was supposed to be about £1,000,000 of gold in the wreck and previous salvage operations had failed. Captain Gardiner conducted salvage with some success.

During the war, said Sir Edward, Captain Gardiner commanded one of the mystery ships and, he believed, performed very gallant and distinguished service.

Sir Edward said he had the highest opinion of Captain Gardiner's integrity and his wide experience of shipbuilding, and after the war he recommended him to business men.

AIDED RIFFS.

"I have left everything," he said, "my wife and my home, and I have had to sell my furniture to pay my defence here."

Asked why he did not attend his bankruptcy examination, he said he was out of the country.

I went over to Paris in 1923, on the invitation of Abd-el-Krim, the leader of the Riffs, to try to arrange peace between the Riffs and the Spaniards. I was in Paris for seven months, but they could not agree to the terms, and so the war went on. In December, 1922, I left Paris for Morocco. Twenty-six Spanish men-of-war were after me, but I got there. I made several trips into Morocco. A member of the House of Lords was with me there. I returned to London in February, 1923, and was arrested in March.

Explaining why he was in a motor-launch at Southampton when arrested, he said he was fitting out a small boat with which to run the blockade into France, as he wanted his only son, whose brain had been turned by the troubles they were going through, to see an eminent French doctor, and as a mentally deficient person his son would not be allowed to land in France.

DIVING RECORD.

Gardiner said that he laid all the mines in Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese War. In the Chilean Revolution he was in command of the crew of one of the Chilean vessels, and in the Boer War he was in command of the Australian Bushmen. Up to 1914 he believed he held the world's record as a diver for staying under the water 9 hours 22 minutes.

During the war he salved the Oceanic (the White Star liner converted into an armed merchant cruiser, sunk off the north coast of Scotland in 1914) and commanded one of the "Q" or mystery boats. He invented a locking system for mines used against submarines and also invented not-cuttable submarine nets. He had been nine times wounded in the course of his life.

Replying to Mr. Roome, for the prosecution, Gardiner said Abd-el-Krim spent seven months with him in Paris and wanted him to act as an ambassador.

Have you had any previous experience of ambassadorial work?— Yes, but I must decline to say what.

Was not the real truth that you were trying to run some guns from France into Spain?—Nothing of the sort.

You had nothing more to do with peace than the man in the moon? — After I had been in Morocco some months the Spanish papers put a price of 2,000,000 pesetas, about £60,000, on my head.

The Common Sarjeant said he quite agreed with the verdict of the jury.

ART TREASURES FOUND BY CHANCE

World's Largest Sapphire Was Indian Child's Plaything

"A doctor of my acquaintance paid three shillings at a country sale in Cheshire for a bit of Greek sculpture which he sold for £2,100 to an American museum," said Mr. E. Page Gaston at a London Rotary Club luncheon recently, when he recommended business and professional men to collect the rare and curious in art as a hobby which promised both pleasure and profit.

"The largest carved sapphire known and valued at many thousands of guineas," he continued, "was on view at Wembley last year, after serving for years in India as a paper-weight and plaything for children. A companion to it is believed to exist, and a sizeable fortune awaits its discoverer.

SLUM DISCOVERERY

"In a Birmingham slum an original oil portrait of Nell Gwynne by Lely was found stopping up a broken window. It was bought for a shilling or two, and is worth thousands.

"Another collector purchased at a dilapidated shop in Paris Raphael's original design for 'La Disputa nel Sacramento' for sixpence. He would have willingly paid twenty thousand times as much, if necessary.

"An artist friend of mine discovered that a London solicitor was using as an office fire screen an original portrait by Gainsborough."

FULL REHEARSAL OF WEDDING CEREMONY

Bishop's Daughter Wore Sports Suit and Lace Curtain Train

Mr. Noel Pensonby, organist of Ely Cathedral, previously rehearsed his own marriage service in Ely Cathedral before the actual ceremony. He wrote special music for the wedding.

His fiancee, Miss Adela White Thompson, daughter of the Bishop of Ely, was dressed in a sports suit for the rehearsal, and had a lace curtain as a substitute for the bridal train.

Two tiny pages held the curtain under protest. In the centre of the curtain they placed their teddy bears.

In the afternoon the bride walked from the bishop's palace to the cathedral, leaning on her father's arm, amid the cheers of a large crowd.

Thousands of people gathered in the cathedral to witness the marriage ceremony, which was performed by the Bishop of Ripon. Afterwards, at the cathedral door, showers of red rose petals were scattered on the bridal pair.

HOW FAMOUS LINE OF POETRY WAS BORN

In the annual oration, delivered before the Medical Society of London, Sir William Hale-White said that the story was that Keats, dreamily resting in his St. Thomas street lodgings one evening, broke out with the announcement that he had composed a new line—"A thing of beauty is a constant joy."

"It has the true ring, but is wanting in some way," said Stephens, a fellow medical student. An interval of silence, and then Keats broke out with "A thing of beauty is a joy for ever"—and thus, said Sir William, was born one of the imperishable lines of English poetry.

USED HYDROPLANE TO CATCH POACHERS

Trawler Skippers in Firth of Clyde Had Unpleasant Surprise

A fast hydroplane working with the Firth of Clyde fishery cruiser has captured three Fleetwood trawlers fishing in a prohibited area. The trawlers were taken completely by surprise. The hydroplane travelled over the water at forty miles an hour.

Each of the skippers was at Campbeltown fined £100. One of them complained that the use of a hydroplane was "a rotten way to make a catch." Another said it was a "fair catch," and he would never enter the Firth of Clyde again as long as the fishery cruiser had that hydroplane.

SLUMP IN PRICE OF R.A.'S PICTURE

President of Academy's Famous Painting Sold at Christies

There was a remarkable slump at Christies in the price of a picture by Sir Frank Dicksee, President of the Royal Academy—"Memories: 'O for the touch of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is still.'"

Hung at the Royal Academy in 1886, it was sold for 800 guineas in 1890. At the last sale it fetched only 150 guineas.

In 1890 the president was accorded his highest valuation at auction, nearly £1,000 being paid for one of his pictures. Four years ago £900 was paid for a replica of his famous "Harmony."

About sixty pictures by the president have been sold at Christies during the past 35 years.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burto

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling young lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children!

She refuses to cook or keep house. She hires Ranghild Swanson to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she swamps him with debts for her clothes and an automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with Stanley Wayburn, an out-of-work actor. She and Wayburn, with May Seymour and Jim Carewe make a jolly foursome. Wayburn is offered a job on the New York stage. Gloria lends him $200 of Dick's money to help him out.

Dick becomes ill with pneumonia. When he recovers, Dr. John Seymour, husband of the flighty May, sends him away for a rest. Gloria refuses to go along, because Dick's mother, whom she hates, is going.

As soon as they leave on their trip, Gloria sets out for New York. She goes straight to Wayburn. But he spurns her, and tells her he has just married his leading woman, Sonya Chotek.

For two weeks Gloria tries to land a job and fails. Finally she comes home to Dick. He takes her back into the house, but not as his wife. He feels sure that she would never have come home if Wayburn had wanted her to stay in New York. One night after her return Gloria finds Dick having dinner in a downtown restaurant with his secretary, Miss Briggs, of whom Gloria has always been jealous.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Mother Gregory stood before the walnut dresser and began to hook herself into an elaborate black dress, made in a style that had been popular when Dick was a baby!

"What did you come to see me about, Glory?" she asked again.

"We—ll," Gloria began, "last night we were robbed of every bit of that lovely flat silver you gave us for a wedding present! Some one broke into the house."

Mother Gregory threw up her plump hands.

"My stars! . . . Dick's reported it to the police, of course?" she said. "Why, that silver has been in the family for a hundred years!"

Slowly Gloria shook her pretty head. "No, Dick hasn't reported it to the police. Dick doesn't know anything about the burglary," she said calmly.

Mother Gregory looked at her with her sharp black eyes.

"You see," Gloria went on without flickering an eyelash, "it all happened in the middle of the night when Dick wasn't at home."

"When Dick wasn't at home!" Mother Gregory echoed in a loud, surprised tone, "Well, where on earth was he at that time of night, then?"

"That's what I want to know," Gloria answered, "but I have every reason to think htat he was with Miss Briggs."

The words exploded like a bomb in the quiet room.

"With Susan Briggs!" Mother Gregory repeated. "With Susan Briggs! Oh, no, Gloria!"

Gloria shrugged her shoulders.

"Have it your own way," she said. "But I know what I found them having dinner together on the quiet, last night. I left them at nine o'clock. They said they were going to work for a while at the office. And at one o'clock when I fell asleep, Dick hadn't come home!"

* * *

Mother Gregory all but fell into a chair that stood opposite Gloria. Her eyes were wide, and her mouth stood open with surprise.

"I can't believe it!" she cried at last. "And how do you know when the burglar was in the house?"

"I heard him," Gloria answered. "I though I heard Dick come in and I ran downstairs. Then I saw some one in the dining-room and I rushed back to my room and locked myself up . . . I was scared to death!"

"You couldn't have been so terribly frightened," Mother Gregory mused, "or youwouldn't have dropped quietly off to sleep at one o'clock as you said you did."

At that Gloria flared up.

"Well, I'll tell you just how frightened I was, if you want to know, Madam Gregory!" she said, furiously. "I was so frightened that I'll never stay alone in that house again, after dark! . . . And if your son wants to have a love affair with his office girl he'll have to work at it daytimes!"

"Glo-ree-a!" exclaimed Mother Gregory in the severe tones of the vice president of the Home Women's club, "You're vulgar!"

"Vulgar nothing! I'm just telling you the truth about your beautiful son!" Gloria sneered. "When I married him I thought he was a plaster saint, too! But I've found out all about him . . . . Look at those!"

She pulled some of the "Roxie" and "Lucie" love letters and pictures from her handbag and threw them into Mother Gregory's lap.

Dick's mother laughed her comfortable deep laugh, as she picked them up.

"Roxie and Lucie Gilchrist!" she said. "There were both in love with Dick. First Roxie was—and then Lucie. They're First Roxie was — and then Lucie. They're both married now, though. And Lucie has a baby! . . .Dick had a lot of girls in his day, Gloria. But that doesn't prove that he isn't what you call a 'plaster saint'!"

Gloria's lip curled.

"All right," she said. "But you can't explain his staying out most of last night with Susan Briggs!"

"I don't believe for a single second that Dick was out half the night with Sue Briggs or any other woman!" Mother Gregory said with spirit. "I'd have to see that with my own eyes to believe it!"

"Well, then, where was he until two or three o'clock last night?—No place where he had any business to be!" Gloria cried. "He certainly wasn't working until then! . . . . Don't try to tell me that!"

Mother Gregory's fine black eyes flashed.

"Why don't you ask him where he was?" she asked quietly.

Gloria laughed unpleasantly.

"That's just it! He didn't give me a chance to ask him anything!" she answered. "He sneaked away this morning before I woke up."

"My poor child," Mother Gregory's voice was soft with sudden pity. "Can't you trust your husband out of your sight? Don't you know by this time what sort of man Dick is?"

Gloria shood her head.

"I certainly don't!" she said. "I thought I did once. But Dick's changed so, lately. He's getting to be a regular crossword puzzle. I can't make him out. What do you suppose he did the night I came home from N. Y. York?"

"Tell me."

"He put me out of our room!" Gloria said. "He moved all my things into the spare room. He doesn't want me for his wife any more, I suppos . And that was his gentle way of breaking the news to me."

Mother Gregory knitted her brows. This was more serious than she had supposed—this breach between Gloria and Dick.

"My dear," she said. "How did you happen to go to New York in the first place? There's a story around town that you went there with that actor of yours . . . What was his name? Westfield? Wakefield?"

"Wayburn," Gloria helped her out. "But I didn't go to New York with him. He went two weeks before I did."

"But did you go because he was there?" Mother Gregory asked.

Gloria was all ready to say "No." But she had a feeling that Mother Gregory's eyes could see right down into her very soul!

"Yes," she whispered. Her lips quivered.

Mother Gregory sat down heavily on the edge of her great four-poster bed. The springs creaked under her weight.

"A—ah!" she said, "and then you expect Dick to take you back with open arms? When you've shown him you love another man?"

"I don't love Stan Wayburn," Gloria answered sullenly.

"You don't love Dick, that's sure!" Dick's mother said.

"And he doesn't love me!" Gloria came back at her. "If he did he wouldn't leave me alone in the house all night to be frightened to death! . . . He doesn't care a darn for me any more!"

"I hope he doesn't, Gloria," Mother Gregory said solemnly. "I'd hate his marriage to wind up the way poor John Seymour's did, last night.

"Dr. John!" Gloria cried. "Why what's happened to Dr. John?"

A curious, cold fear seemed to take hold of her heart . . . to squeeze it. She could hardly breathe. Mother Gregory's voice seemed to come from a long way off, when she spoke again.

"Didn't you see the morning paper," she asked.

With a great effort, Gloria shook her head. Her thoughts flew to May. What terrible trouble was she in? What had happened to Dr. John?

"He shot himself," Mother Gregory said. There was a long silence. Then Mrs. Gregory arose and called down the stairs to Maggie.

"Maggie, bring up the paper, please?" she asked. In a minute she came back into the room, shaking out the rustling sheet.

"Dr. John Seymour . . ." she began to read. But Gloria stopped her.

"No, no," she said. "Don't read it! I must go to May! She hasn't anybody but me . . . ."

She ran down the stairs, and out into the street. A trolley car was coming. She ran to catch it.

Oh, it wouldn't be true! There must be some mistake! Things like that didn't happen in this warm, sunny world with its blue sky and its June roses everywhere!

And that it should happen to May of all people! Careless, carefree May, who was like a yellow butterfly that did nothing but dance in the sun . . .

But May was a butterfly crushed on the wheel when Gloria saw her that June morning.

She lay with her face turned to the wall in her darkened bed-room. She made no sound at all when Sarah, the old laundress, opened the door to let Gloria in.

"My dear," the girl said, leaning over her, "I'm so sorry . . ."

May didn't answer. She lay motionless in her frivolous pink silk nightgown. Gloria sat down beside the bed and began to stroke her arm.

"Don't cry, dear," she murmured. There were tears in her own eyes.

But May was not crying. The face that she turned to Gloria, at last, was hard and white as flint.

"I killed him," she said dully. "You know that, don't you? Just as surely as if I'd held the gun"

"Hush, dear," Gloria begged. "You don't know what you're saying."

May made a noise in her throat that was halfway between a sob and a laugh—a terrible sound.

"I killed him!" she said again, clearly. "Jim Carewe . . . ."

Her voice broke on the name. She suddenly burst into a storm of frightful sobs, and threw herself back on the bed, waving her arms like a crazed woman. She tore at her hair.

Gloria rushed out into the hall for help. A nurse in uniform was running upstairs. It was Mrs. O'Hara—Dr. John's "boss" nurse.

"You'd better go," she said to Gloria over her shoulder, as she went into May's room.

Shaking all over, Gloria hurried downstairs.

Lloa Hough came out of Dr. John's little office back of the dining-room. She had on a bungalow apron, and she looked as if she had been crying.

"Hello, Gloria," she said quietly. "What's happened up there?" She jerked her head toward the second floor

"May's crying, that's all," Gloria answered. "Lola, how did this thing happen? Do you know?"

Lola looked at her steadily for a minute with her moist blue eyes.

"Yes, I do," she said. "I was here when it happened last night . . . alone with May."

Gloria sat down weakly on the hall seat. "How terrible for you!" she gasped.

But Lola shook her head. "No," she said. "I was glad May wasn't here alone with—him. And it was just by chance that I happened to be here. It was almost midnight, and the baby had the colic. I knew the drugstore would be closed at that hour, so I ran over here to get some peppermint from Dr. John."

Lola paused for a moment. She wet her dry lips with her tongue and went on. "As I came up the street, I saw Jim Carew's car leaving the house. And May still had on her hat when she let me in . . . . Of course, she'd been out riding with Jim! But anyway, I'd hardly set foot inside the house when we heard a shot in Dr. John's office. I looked in . . . ."

"And was he dead when you looked?" asked Gloria, shocked to her finger ends.

"Stone dead," Lola answered. "I called the police, and then I thought we ought to have Dr. John's lawyer. So I phoned Dick."

"How did you know he was at his office?" Gloria asked sharply.

"I didn't, but your house didn't answer, Central said." Lola explained. "So I took a chance on the office, and got him. He came right over."

So this was where Dick had been! All of the time when Gloria had pictured him with Susan Briggs, either in his office or walking home with her under the stars!

"Our phone didn't ring last night at all, " Gloria said, presently, "and it wasn't out of order, because I was talking to May at half past nine, or so . . . just before she went out with Jim, I suppose . . . . Oh, I'll bet the burglar cut the wires!"

Lola's blue eyes showed their whites with surprise.

"Now don't tell me you had burglars last night!" she cried.

"We certainly did!" Gloria replied. "They stole all our flat silver . . . . I heard 'em! I was waiting up for Dick to come home—worried to death, because I didn't know where he was.!"

Lola smiled bitterly. "I guess you don't have to do much worrying about where Dick is at night!" she said. "He's a man in a million . . . . I wish Bill behaved himself half as well as Dick Gregory does!"

* * *

She laughed with sudden nervousness. "Bill's having a terrible time today," she said. "He stayed home with toothache. So I left him in charge of the kids for a while. The baby's tummy ache is gone, and he was asleep when I left. But the twins'll keep Bill busy . . . . He'll get a taste of my job and its joys!"

But there was no laughter in Gloria that morning.

"Lola," she said, shuddering, "why do you suppose Dr. John did this terrible thing?"

Lola was not the kind of woman who balked at the truth. She said what other people only thought. She said it now.

"Why, because of Jim Carewe, of course!" she rapped out. "He knew May was crazy about Jim. He'd forbidden her to see Jim. But you know May . . . .She does as she pleases. And I suppose Dr. John sat here alone for hours last night, brooding, until he just didn't know what he was doing. That's the way I've figured it out, any way?"

"Yes, but to kill himself! He must have been out of his mind!" Gloria shook her head. "Honestly, Lola, I never thought Dr. John cared if May ran around with Jim. I used to wonder why he didn't."

"Oh, he cared, all right enough!" Lola answered, "but you never can tell what those quiet men are thinking about. They bottle everything up inside themselves . . . . until they do something like this!"

Cut in the cheerful, sunny street again, Gloria thought over what Lola had said about Dr. John.

My European Excursions

By Edwin Robert Petre

A NORWEGIAN HIKE ABOVE THE FJORDS

Among the many very interesting trips I recently took in Norway there was one from the village of Merck at Geiranger Fjord, to the frozen lake of Djupvand (Deep Lake) situated 3,400 feet above the fjord. Many drive up this road but most of the way is so steep and winding that the ponies can only go slowly that I preferred to walk and had no difficulty in keeping ahead of the horses.

The road leads up beyond the point where snowdrifts often hide and block the road in the summer. Looking back, a grand view is obtained of the Geiranger Fjord, where the steamer is lying and looks no larger than a toy ship. The mountain torrents are magnificent and a cool spray is often driven across the road, like rain. The Djupvand lake has wild and grand surroundings and even in midsummer its blue waters are often covered with ice. A hike to the frozen lake is not easily to be forgotten by anyone who has taken it. In a few hours you are carried from the warm sunshine and flower-decked meadows of the valley to the eternal winter of the mountains and on the way pass through scenes of almost unequalled lovlineess and grandeur. The vast amphitheatre formed by the mountain walls of the valley, is one of the most impressive places in Norway.

Work and Worry Weaken Many Women

New Health Can be Had Through

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality---and more

The demands upon a mother's strength are many and severe; her own health trials and her children's welfare, exact heavy tolls, while broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through sick headache, backache, and nervous troubles. But varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple, and relief near at hand. When well, it is good blood that keeps a woman well; when ill, she must make her blood rich to renew her health; and the nursing mother—more than any other—needs rich blood and plenty of it.

Care of diet, sufficient rest, fresh air, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will keep a woman's heath robust and regular; and because these pills make new blood abundantly, thousands of weak wives and mothers have derived prompt health-help from them.

Mrs. Stewart Grant, Stewiacke, N.S., says:—"After the birth of my first baby I did not regain my health. I could scarcely walk across the room because of the pains in my back. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and through their use regained good health. Later an attack of influenza left me very weak, and again the pills fully restored me. I can recommend them to any one who is weak or run down."

NEW BRIDGE OVER TRENT

Hastings Has Improved Rail Facilities—First Road Built 1879.

HEAVY TRACKS

HASTINGS, June 13.—The new railroad bridge which is being built over the Trent River on the Canadian National Railway about a mile west of Hastings is now nearing completion. The first railroad came to Hastings in 1879 and part of the surveying of the road was done by the late H. M. Fowlds. This line came from Belleville and only went as far west as Hastings at this time.

In the year 1880 it was decided by the company to extend the railroad further out and a bridge was built on the Trent River. This first bridge was erected of wood and was placed on wooden piers. After a few years the first bridge was discarded and was replaced by an iron one erected on stone piers.

The present bridge is of steel and is a wonderful improvement. The swing bridge will now be opened and closed and worked by electricity, the latter to be supplied from the local power house of C. R. Fowlds.

Large gangs of workmen have been here for sometime working at the bridge and laying heavy steel rails, so that heavy engines may run on the railroad through here. The first engine and tender coming through here came east from Belleville, forty-six years ago, and Alex. Wilson and Robert Steel were the first men from here to ride over the new railroad. The engineer who was at the throttle was Mr. Kelley.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT

cattle accused handed over what seemed to be cheques, but were in reality bills of exchange, a fact which was not noticed by any of the farmers. He contended that the evidence showed that a scheme was afoot between Sherman and Merson on the one hand and Charard and Spegil on the other to pay off certain indebtedness to the latter pair. Who were Charard and Spegil? Charard was Sherman's brother-in-law. Spegal was Merson's brother-in-law. Where did Charard and Spegil, working men, get the money? From other relatives. How was the debt paid? By the money which was got from the sale of cattle belonging to farmers in this district. Counsel contended that conspiracy began with the deposit of the cash in the bank and the immediate withdrawal. Much stress had been laid on evidence showing the accused were trusted by the farmers.

Unworthy of Confidence.

All that could be drawn from the evidence was that defendants enjoyed a confidence of which they proved themselves unworthy. Counsel read definitions of conspiracy showing the agreement to defraud was conspiracy even though the offence was not actually committed. The question for the jury to decide was, has there been evidence to show that there has been a scheme afoot to carry out this offence against these farmers? To his mind this was one of the clearest cases of conspiracy he had encountered. Not only did they conspire but they carried out the conspiracy, a well constructed scheme, which he believed was engineered by the assistance of someone with brains. The design was perfectly clear. They took the money really belonging to the farmers in order to pay their own friends. No notice was given to the farmer of the words written on the cheques which prevented them from being paid on demand. The documents were read and construed as if the words were not there. The defendants had certainly defrauded their creditors. It was for the jury to say whether this was as the result of a conspiracy.

Fairness of Witnesses.

His Honor, in his address to the jury, commented on the lack of vindictiveness and the spirit of fairness shown by the farmers, all of whom had been injured financially, in giving their evidence in the case. His Honor said all prejudices concerning the race of accused must be brushed aside. Irrespective of race, all men must be treated with British fairness in a British Court of Justice. He begged the jury to remember that Benjamin Disraeli, the great British Prime Minister, was a Jew. Rufus Isaacs, Lord Reading, was a Jew, honored by being chosen as the King's representative in India. One of the most honored and respected members of the House of Commons at Ottawa, S. W. Jacobs, was a Jew. There were good Jews and bad Jews just as there were good Protestants and bad Protestants, and good Catholics and bad Catholics. These men might be good Jews; they might be bad Jews. What the jury had to decide was, Did they enter into a conspiracy to defraud. His Honor read extracts from the Criminal Code, giving the definitions of conspiracy. Conspiracy, he said, was a very difficult charge to prove. When evil schemes are hatched, the process usually is private. There had been cases of conspiracy where memoranda had been produced in proof of the charge. There had been cases where conspiracy had been acknowledged by persons in conversation. There had been no such instances in the case in question. There were no memoranda. There had been no admission of conspiracy. The accused denied entering into conspiracy. Mere intent to enter into corrupt dealings did not constitute conspiracy if there had been no agreement. But intent and agreement constituted conspiracy even if not carried out. Proof of conspiracy need not be direct proof. Conspiracy might be inferred from collateral acts which showed evidence of intent and agreement to defraud. Because of the difficulties, he asked the jury to give even more than ordinary attention to the case. Much had been said concerning the words written on the cheques. He wanted them to take the cheques in with them and study them very carefully.

Was It Design?

The real question was this, Was what took place in Montreal part of a design? If they thought the giving the cheques to the farmers, shipping the cattle, getting the money, paying the creditors and having the deposit credited at the bank, they were justified in returning a verdict of guilty. If, however, they believed the matter was a mistake, was only bad judgment, then they bring in a verdict of not guilty. The thing to decide was, Had there been an agreement to defraud? He felt it was only fair to say this. If the accused desired to cheat, they could have done so more extensively than they actually did. He impressed on the jury the necessity of giving the accused the benefit of any doubts they had. By doubts he meant reasonable misgivings as to the guilt of accused; not imaginary doubts or doubts conjured up to help them to avoid carrying out an unpleasant duty.

At 6 o'clock the court adjourned until 8.45.

At nine o'clock the jury filed out to have light thrown on an obscure point. Had the giving as cheques, of what were really bills of exchange, any bearing on the charge of conspiracy? His Honor replied that it might have a collateral reference, but as to having a direct bearing on the charge, that was for them to decide.

The jury retired. Five minutes later they returned with their verdict.

PETERSON DIED

had been sent for, and the two used every medical aid without success for an hour to restore Sir William.

Death was due to angina pectoris, from which Sir William had suffered for some time. The body will be sent overseas for interment, probably at Sir William's home on the Island of Eigg, in the Hebrides.

Sir William Petersen was born in Denmark on May 29, 1856, but for over 50 years had resided in England, and was a British subject. During practically the whole of his life, he had been connected with shipping. He was a director of the Thompson Steamship Company, the London-American Maritime Trading Company, and was chairman of the Registry of Bureau Veritas. Indirectly he was associated also with other shipping companies.

Sir William first came to Canada in 1893 in connection with a shipping project of carrying coal from Cape Breton to Montreal. Subsequently in 1897 he secured a contract with the Dominion Government with a subsidy of £153,000 a year to run the Whitney service of passenger steamers between Canada and England. That service did not materialize, because Sir William found, as he stated to the Ocean Rates Committee of the House this session, that he had enormously strong opposition from the shipping community. The Canadian Government gave him a contract for another period but in the meantime the Spanish-American War broke out, and it was impossible to go on.

In 1904 he established a line called the Franco-Canadian Line, between Canada and France and London, but Sir William gave up the enterprise. Then in 1907 he started a line in connection with the late Sir William Mackenzie, between Rotterdam and Canada. This line was developed and became the Royal Line, which was eventually transferred to the Canadian Northern Railway.

Sir William's latest agreement with the Canadian Government was for the establishment of a Transatlantic line of ten steamers between Great Britain and Canada. Under the contract, which was signed late last year by Sir William and by Hon. T. A. Low, as representing the Canadian Government, Sir William was to receive a subsidy of £275,000 a year and the Canadian Government was to control the rates. It was provided in the contract that it would come into effect only on approval by Parliament.

There was strong opposition to the contract, and it was referred to a special committee of the House of Commons. By a dramatic coincidence, the committee reported its findings to the House only about an hour before Sir William was stricken. While not specifically recommending that the subsidy should not be granted, the committee, in its report, took the ground that opportunity should be given to Sir William to demonstrate the practicability of the corrugated vessels—a new type of steamer which he proposed to utilize in the service. This recommendation was interpreted in political circles as involving a holding up of the contract.

Sir William was a widower, and is survived by three daughters and a grandson.

Both former societies were well represented and a splendid meeting was enjoyed by all present. Mrs. John Hope, who has been President of the Presbyterian W.M.S. for over thirty years, very ably conducted the meeting and expressed the hope that the united efforts of both societies be used for the furtherance of Christ's kingdom both at home and in foreign fields. A splendid report of the Presbyterian W.M.S. convention held at Cobourg was given by the delegate, Miss Jessie Davidson, and was much appreciated.

Appropriate and interesting readings were given by Mrs. Hugh Cameron and Mrs. William Morris.

TO PERMIT SHELL AND DICE GAMES

This section carried.

M. N. Campbell (Progressive, Mackenzie) characterized the proposed provision providing a penalty for the unauthorized use of the word "royal" as a "ridiculous piece of legislation."

Hon. J. B. M. Baxter (Conservative, St. John Albert) favored the legislation. It was desired to cultivate among the people of Canada, in respect to the use of this word a certain amount of good taste and gentlemanly manners. The legislation proposed set a proper standard towards the highest ideal known within the Empire, he stated, in referring to the position of the Royal family. To meet certain objections made Dr. Baxter suggested an amendment to the clause providing that no prosecution would be made in the matter "except by order of Attorney-General of Canada or the Attorney-General of the Province;" this amendment was accepted by the Minister of Justice.

J. T. Shaw (Independent, Calgary, West) thought that the situation at present was amply protected.

The clause carried.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe introduced another amendment which prohibits the carrying of liquor on trains in prohibition territory.

Mr. Lapointe explained that this legislation had been introduced already in the form of an amendment to the Railway Act. On that occasion, the opposition leader suggested that it would be wiser to bring it in as an amendment to the Criminal code as the Railway Act was applicable only to those roads which came under its jurisdiction.

This amendment also carried.

Another amendment providing a penalty in the case of false returns made by a company, was aproved.

This amendment results from information collected by Commissioner Lewis Duncan when investigating the alleged western fruit combine.

The Bill was reported from committee and now stands for third reading.

Floppy Hats, Filmy Frocks and Flamboyant Colors Feature New Summer Fashions

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Floppy hats, filmy frocks, flamboyant colors are about to have their inning, for all these are featured in the new summer styles.

"Summer dresses are lovelier this year than ever before," says Henri Bendel, New York style authority, "because they strike so high and individual a color note.

"We have finally overcome our inhibitions against the use of bright colors for day frocks; and have consequently achieved more stunning effects than ever before. Black or navy blue have been the accepted colors for the day, and white or pastel shades for evening."

One of the most interesting frocks I saw displayed is the model photographed with the wide sash.

Revolutionary?

This is of coral colored cotton voile with insets of lace dyed the exact shade, mounted over a slip of navy blue satin. The sash too is navy blue. The harmony of these two colors is indescribably lovely though it sounds very revolutionary.

The sure-fire combination of brown and orange is featured in the other model which is of very supple flat crepe. The three-tiered pleated skirt is piped in brown and the long sleeves are given a picture quality by wide pleated ruffles that fall far over the hand, but are so roomy and loose that this is no way suggests discomfort. The brown grosgrain sash is finished with a corsage of yellow buttercups.

"Both gowns owe their success quite as much to their colors as to their lines," Bendel said. "They may be worn for practically any day function, and neither requires a wrap to complete the effect."

Incidentally these models call for the very simplest lingerie and plain footwear. You can see for yourself that the large hat is much more appropriate than the small type would be.

"Obviously color calls for a discriminating eye," Bendel warned, "and a respect for the complexion and figure.

"It takes a very youthful figure and a debutante coloring to wear the delicate shades of blue, pink or yellow, whereas the deep greens, hennas, reds and purples are very becoming to the mature type.

Futuristic

"A touch of brilliant red or green used on black gives it the necessary dash for this season without adding any color complications. Perhaps the most conservative way to use color is in figured materials that have a background of black, white or a neutral gray or tan.

"One can attempt much more vivid colors in chiffon or georgette than would be advisable in a silk fabric."

TWO OF THE NEWEST SUMMER OUTFITS.

Another feature he called to my attention is the use of futuristic designs. Large disks, triangles and squares of colors are handled in a bold way to give a poster effect, the most gaudy colors are combined in what seems to be an artless manner, but is really highly sophisticated.

PAPA LOVE MAMA? MAMA LOVE PAPA?

My Husband Reads to Me From Articles in His Favorite Business Magazines.

He gets so interested that he isn't satisfied with going through them himself. He has to share his enjoyment with me.

I always dread what's coming when I hear him say, "Just let me read you this wonderful analysis of salesmanship—it's only four pages now listen——"

Or else he breaks out with:

"This fellow, Herman J. Pringle, certainly knows what he's talking about when he tackles the subject of credit. Listen——"

Many's the long half hour I've spent hearing all about cutting down overhead expenses, office managemen, advertising appropriations and a lot of fascinating subjects like that.

I may not know what makes the tired business man tired—but I certainly do know what tires his wife!

HOME TOWN RECIPE.

A recipe for seafoam candy has been requesedt. Mrs. B. Morrison, 45 Sophia street, makes it in the following way:

White sugar in the desired quantity is cooked until it threads, using enough water to keep it from burning, while stirring constantly. When it will thread consistently, whip in white of egg, using one white to every cup of sugar and whip until stiff. Any flavoring may be used, and nuts also may be added, or sprinkled on top. Drop on buttered platter.

Cynthia Grey Says

BEAUTY SHOULD BEGIN AT HOME

Take the case of a young wife whom I happen to know. And let's call her "Jill" because that is not her name.

Less than a year ago Jill married Jack.

There never was a prettier June bride than Jill with her satiny hair, her pink cheeks, and the powder fluffed on her face like confectioners' sugar.

And even today if you should happen to meet her at a matinee or a party, your first thought would be, "What a pretty girl!"

For Jill, dressed for the public eye, is a very different girl from Jill-around-the-house.

Jill-around-the-house says flatly that home is the very place to wear out her old clothes. She hasn't bought herself more than one house dress since she was married.

She gets breakfast and washes dishes in the old red silk that was her best afternoon dress last fall. It isn't worth a trip to the dry-cleaners Jill says. So she wears it week after week just as it is—covered with grease spots and stains!

And Jill no longer takes the trouble to brush her hair until it shines, or to powder her face every morning when she gets up. She hasn't time, really—and so Jack carries away with him to his office the daily vision of a frowsy, sloopy wife in a dirty dress!

The Girl of His Dreams has become a slattern with a dress that gapes in the back, and slipshod feet.

But it never occurs to Jill that she isn't the girl Jack thought he was marrying. Her defence, no doubt, would be that "it's too much trouble to keep dolled up around the house. There's no one but Jack, to see me anyway!"

No one but Jack! Jack, who ought to be the first admirer of his wife's beauty! For a woman's looks don't count half as much with her friends and the outside world as with her husband, if only she knew it!

QUESTIONS-ANSWERS.

Dear Miss Grey: What kind of imitation jewel is it permissible to wear in the evening?—Dancing Star.

Strands of pearls are very fashionable just now, for evening wear And brilliants have always been worn with formal evening dress, too.

Dear Miss Grey: I am not better looking than many girls, but for some reason men are always attracted toward me Even the fact that I have been married for two years does not seem to keep the men from making a fuss over me. Every time I go to a dance someone wants to make a date with me. Why is this?—Lolita.

Unless you are very attractive, and you say you are not, the cold fact must be that you are a flirt. Men are easily flattered: and a great many of them are shy and will not pay any attention to woman unless she flirts with them first. This probably explains your amazing popularity.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

TO SET THE COLOR

Pinks and all shades of red should be soaked in salt water to set the color before they are laundered. This refers to cotton fabrics.

EMERGENCY CEMENT

An emergency cement for mending a pot or kettle is made by mixing white of egg with fine coal or wood ashes until it forms a thick paste. Plaster this over the hole and hold it over the fire until the egg is baked.

ADD LEMON JUICE.

When jelly does not set, add the juice of a lemon and the difficulty will be overcome.

BOIL FRUIT JARS.

Before using fruit jars that have been standing around, boil them in hot soda water.

Hedda Hoyt Talks About Things That Interest The Busy Woman Of 1925

The Pink Bride

NEW YORK, June 13.—(United Press).—

"Something old, something new Something borrowed and something blue,"
But if the bride wants a newer kink
She'll make her wardrobe baby pink!

Enter the pink bride! "Bride's blush" is the newest shade for the 1925 bride, and this is the most delicate pink imaginable. Complete trouseaux are being made in pinkish shades and the fact that most smart shops are showing them proves that many brides must have forsaken the proverbial white.

Of course, there are many girls who feel that they want their gowns to be white. This doesn't necessitate the white veil, however. At a recent New York wedding, the bride chose a white satin gown and utilized the pink tone in her tulle veil which was held in place by pale pink appleblossoms. She carried a bouquet of appleblossoms and lilies of the valley.

Another bride wore a velvet gown of the palest flesh shade imaginable. This was made with long fitted bodice and with a skirt that was bouffant over the hips. The sleeves were long and extended well over the hands. A veil of buds fell below the scalloped hem of the gown.

When one speaks of a pink bride, however, one refers to the palest flesh tones and not to bright pink shades. Bride's pink is so nearly white that it offers a flattering note rather than a digression from the customary white.

At present pale pink lingerie is more popular than white with the bride and this season it is combined with lovely laces in pale ecru tones. For dancing frocks designed for honeymoon wear the bride invariably chooses pale pink as the popular evening shade this year and is extremely flattering and youthful. Naturally, the bride does not wish to appear too striking in her color schemes.

This Is Your Birthday

SATURDAY, JUNE 13 — Until you are about 40 years of age, you will possess a stern and unforgiving nature that will make you many enemies. But you are born under the sign of Gemini, the twins, and you have a better nature which will assert itself under the mellowing process of old age. You will become much more charitable and sympathetic. If a woman, should be a success in business, and yet it will not hold your interest, for you will always long for a real home of your own.

SUNDAY, JUNE 14—If you are celebrating a birthday today, you will be "faddist" at some time during your life. All sorts of fads, such as retaining your own name after marriage and other feminist movements, will appeal to you. But you also have a changeable nature, and soon after you will tire of all these "idiosyncrasies." You will detest all fads and become real old-fashioned. You probably will marry someone at least seven years your senior. If you don't, you will be engaged to such a person for at least a year.

A LINE-O-TYPE.

Last night's decision of the City Council to ban Sunday bathing so far as lay in its power, and to do away with Sunday band concerts, was not unexpected. And the people will be more satisfied now that the reason for the action is made known—whether or not they agree with the ideals as expressed by the Mayor. The situation is different when it is known that the City Council has closed the bathing beaches on Sundays because it does not desire to force a man to work on his rest day. And musicians are not to be asked to play on Sunday.

Some Satisfaction.

Up until last night no one but the City Council understood the issue. Some suggested that bad behaviour on Sundays was to blame, but could not understand why this should be on Sunday particularly. Others mistakenly thought it was a money-saving measure.

But what a lot of people will find trouble in assimilating is why, if a band is allowed to play on Sunday after a wet Friday, the bathing beach caretaker should not be allowed to attend to his duties on a Sunday if he volunteers.

To the onlooker at last night's meeting there were many apparent inconsistencies.

Alderman Crowe suggested letting the people decide the Sunday bathing question in January. But he does not run for office at the end of this year, having been elected for two years on January 1, 1924.

The "noiseless" engine that passed through Peterborough yesterday was not of course really noiseless. Steel wheels cannot grind on steel rails without making sound.

Noiseless Engine'

But it was—compared with the engine that wakes us up every night at midnight, when we're in bed that early—noiseless. It will be a long time before the railway company puts cushions between the freight cars to take up the sound of the coupling-up. But even this is helped by the new type of engine—at least in Peterborough. To prevent having to cut the train four times, as would be necessitated by its length if brought into the city, the cars are left at Jackson Park while the engine comes down for water. Coupling-up is done there, and the people in the centre of the city are not disturbed.

So many objections have been made, so many petitions signed, so many letters written by the City Council, that perhaps it would be well to have an expression of appreciation sent to the C. N. R. It might hurry up the inauguration of these quiet engines more than a great many kicks.

After 46 years' absence in some of the benighted southern States, Jonathan Phillips is making a trip here for the Douro Old Boys' Reunion. He probably thought he would run up to see whether the farm where he was born is being used as a filling station, or what it would sell for now as business property as an adjunct to Peterborough. There have been some changes in this district in 46 years, and those who have lived through them do not realize the real progress the city has made. And Douro, too, has advanced. P. G. Towns, the indefatigable leader of the Reunion workers, has prepared an exhibit of old implements that will show just the extent of modern improvements in the agricultural line.

Coming Home.

These hundreds who are coming back week after next to the big reunion will see the change. And many will recall, for the first time in years, the hardihood and perseverance of the pioneers who laid the foundations of success for the thousands who now live where their scores plucked a precarious livelihood from the forest.

The Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion in Douro, where tradition runs strong and tales of old are kept alive by much telling, should be the event of the year in this district.

* * *

One trouble about this sudden morality streak is Peterborough doesn't sound so good as Zion city.

EMERGENCY FIRE-HOSE COUPLER

During many great fires, fire-fighting equipment from neighboring cities has proved useless because the threads in the hose couplings did not fit the local hydrants. In order to remedy this, the U. S. Bureau of Standards has perfected a set of tools enabling new threads to be cut on the spot. Fire departments in many large cities now are being equipped with these.

AIRSHIPS ON RAILS FOR PARIS STREETS

Odd Type of Railway Planned for Commuters of French Capital.

Paris bids fair to be the first of the world's largest cities to solve its rapid-transit problems high in the air. Recent reports from the French capital indicate that actual construction work soon may begin on a remarkable high speed aerial railway, along which propeller-driven cars suspended from an overhead monorail will travel 69 miles an hour, carrying thousands of commuters between Paris and the suburb of St. Denis.

Designs for the airway have been completed, examined by expert engineers, and found to be practicable, writes Arthur A. Stuart in Popular Science Monthly. The inventor, Francis Laur, a well-known French engineer, and formerly Deputy of the district of Paris, has laid his entire scheme before the Prefect of Police and now is waiting only for a concession on the line to begin work.

During the last year inventors in America and Europe have been at work on the idea of aerial railways to supplant commuters' crowded trains, jammed subways, surface cars, taxicabs and buses that have brought the problem of traffic congestion to a critical stage in almost every large city.

The proposed car for the Parisian line would be virtually a propeller-driven airship suspended from and running along a rail. Its body tapering off at both ends like a dirigible, would be built of duralumin, extremely light. While it would be capable of carrying from 60 to 100 passengers, the entire car, including equipment, would weigh only five tons. Present plans call for a car 40 feet long, seven feet wide, seven feet high, driven by a nine-foot propeller. The car would be driven by either a gasoline or electric motor. A reversible propellor would permit it to be run in either direction. Extra cars could be hooked on to a propeller-driven car during rush hours.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

SUNDAY BATHING

Editor, The Examiner,

Sir,—You may not believe it, but there are very many people in the city who do not approve of the way in which you have undertaken to reprimand the members of the City Council in the course of this campaign of objection to the action of the Council with regard to Sunday swimming. You ascribe to the members nothing but a fanatical, obstinate and wholly to be unjustified course.

You have set to one side, or at least you have never pointed out that in the Council its members may, and no doubt have in mind the one serious objection to indiscriminate opening and civic approval of the use of the swimming places on the Sabbath day. A decent observance of that day, and what its thought and ideal carries with it is found in the fact that even people who may be disposed to treat the day as one of enjoyment, respect a lot of people who in turn respect the old-fashioned requirement that we observe the day as one of rest and not wholly for recreation. The tenor of your writing, and of those who support your view, is to break down the law and the observance, leading presently to extension of claim and general derision among many with regard to the Sabbath observance.

The one pernicious element, in this civic permission and approval of swimming is to create in the minds of young people a contempt for the Sabbath observance. And that if one form of recreation be permitted, why not others? Presently we shall have thrust on us the American Sabbath, in which a large part of the public, commercially and in other ways, set the Sabbath aside. Bathing, or washing one's self is one thing, but swimming is a sport, and the encouragement of sport on the Sabbath is a thing that the good sense of a law respecting population will never approve of.

Please, do not repeat the time honored arguments as to golf and motoring, on Sunday. Those have been aired before. But quietly consider the possible effect, the entirly probable effect, of your support to a movement that plainly tells the young and very young that dad and mother are old-fashioned freaks, and that in this day of jazz, radio, and speed limits, youth has the call and must be eased of old and possibly unliked restrictions.

Some such thought, it seems to me, might have been in the minds of the Council, when those members decided to withhold civic approval to fosterng a form of sport on the Sabbath day. At least I think that among the number are men who respect the objection to Sabbath amusmens, and in their public position hesitated to approve.

Respectfully,
F. H. DOBBINS.

SEES IMPURE IDEALS IN BATHING.

Dear Examiner:

Your editorials upon bathing beaches will soon be as stale as Ham Burnham's letters. We do not elect aldermen to cater too or please the local press. We have men in Council with convictions and principles of right, who are trying to preserve our Sabbaths from desecration. You want to read Lieutenant Governor Cockshutt's address dated May 30th, to the Ottawa Board of Trade, and get soaked with his message, then give us editorials of a higher moral tone.

Quit acting as an agitator unduly beating the air. Leave the aldermen alone. A great burst of elegance about Daylight Saving and now bathing beaches.

If electors does not like the personnel of the present Council they will have a chance next election day to say so.

What benefit will our children get by going to church if we let them go in the afternoon to bathing beaches where the moral atmosphere is offensive and ideals of purity lowered.

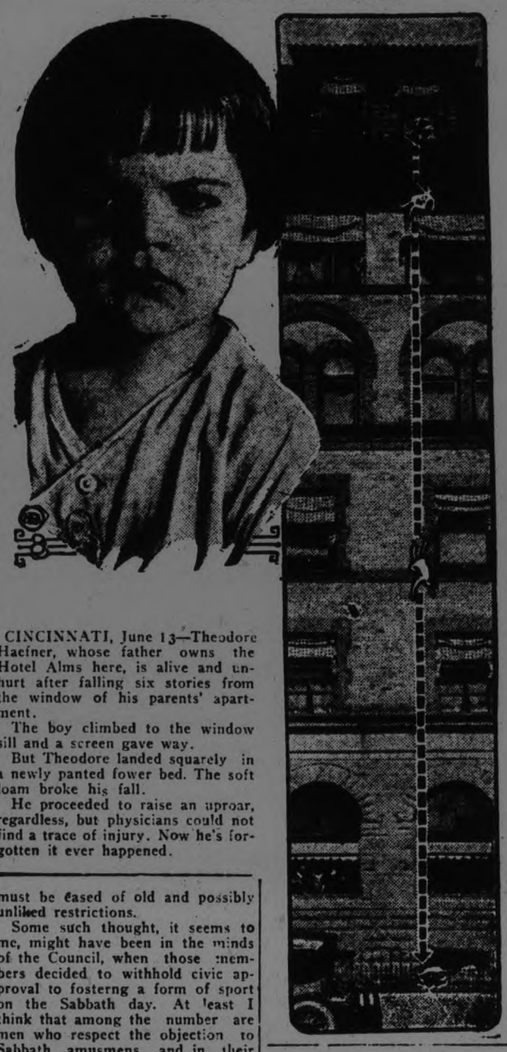
FALLS SIX FLOORS UNHURT



CINCINNATI, June 13—Theodore Haefner, whose father owns the Hotel Alms here, is alive and unhurt after falling six stories from the window of his parents' apartment.

The boy climbed to the window sill and a screen gave way.

But Theodore landed squarely in a newly panted fower bed. The soft loam broke his fall.

He proceeded to raise an uproar, regardless, but physicians could not find a trace of injury. Now he's forgotten it ever happened.

West Has Been Liberally Drenched During the Past Ten Days.

TIDE CROPS OVER.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 13. (Canadian Press).—Boosting the season's precipitation well above the average, a steady rainfall again drenched Manitoba generally and southern and central parts of Saskatchewan Thursday night.

Districts around Virden, Man., were soaked in a downpour which exceeded one inch, while Moose Jaw reported a heavy rainfall. During the past ten days, the West has been liberally drenched, and farmers throughout the Prairie Provinces intimate that sufficient moisture is now in the ground to tide the crops over for at least two or three weeks.

Fair weather prevails in Alberta, with intermittent showers in some districts.

Prospects are for cool temperatures and more rain.

LITTLE PRODUCE AT CITY MARKET

Butter 35 and 38 Cents — Eggs 27 and 28 Cents a Dozen.

There was little produce on sale on the open market this morning. Green plants in boxes, tomato and cabbage at 20 and 25 cents, salvia and asters and red cocks' comb, at 3 for 25 cents, fresh salmon trout and whitefish at 20 cents a pound under the fisherman's curtained enclosure, a couple of bags of potatoes at 6 cents a piece, some rhubarb and green onions, a few carrots and bunches of asparagus, with a pair of pigs, retailing at $15, made up the available merchandise.

Over near the buildings a patient horse stood hitched to a rig in which a lively potato bag thrashed and squirmed in energetic writhings, from its interior arising the sounds of impotent squeals by the "pig in a poke" enclosed therein.

The auctioneer's helper comforted himself from the sun by means of a large black umbrella, while one of the patrons of the sale lolled in a warm red velvet rocker.

A load of hay was priced at $15.

Canterbury Bells. "Just about ready to ring," as their owner expressed it, were 3 for 25 cents. Upstairs there were bunches of pansies, feathery-edged white pinks at 25 cents a bunch, rich red peonies, 3 for 25 cents, and big bunches of white iris, heliotrope California poppies, and spicy-scented lemon lilies, at 25 and 35 cents each.

The Scotch vendor of home-made pastries had his "sweetheart" with him this morning.

Dairy produce was fairly plentiful. Butter was selling from 35 to 38 cents a pound, eggs at 27 and 28 cents a dozen.

Little aristocratic "broilers" were 50 cents a pound, while their more plebeian neighbors of the older hen variety were 25 cents. A "September" turkey, guaranteed good for roasting, was 30 cents a pound.

Bananas on the market were selling from 25 to 50 cents a dozen, with oranges from 30 to 50 cents. Lemons were priced at 4 for 25 cents, tomatoes at 20 cents a pound, and home-grown strawberries were 25 cents a box.

CITY WET BUT SOBER.

PLYMOUTH, June 13.—This city claims the record for sobriety. Only 87 prosecutions for drunkenness were reported last year. This is less than one to every 2,000 of its population.

YOUR GARDEN

OBSERVATIONS AMONG PEONIES.

The earliest peonies, P. tenuifolia and anomalo, are already out in bloom. The Tree Peonies (P. moutan) will follow, and soon the vast array of early, medium and late varieties will be in their glory, finishing with the albiflora varieties.

There are eight distinct types of peonies recognized by the American Peony Society, and numerous named varieties of each type.

Single.—Those with a single row of wide guards (petals) and a centre of yellow pollen bearing stamens.

Semi-double. — Those with several rows of wide petals and a centre of stamens and partially transformed petaloids.

Japanese.—These have wide guards the same as the singles, but with the stamens and anthers greatly enlarged into narrow, thick petaloids of various colors, tipped with vestiges of yellow. The anthers are without pollen.

Anemone Flowered.—A step farther in the process of doubling, with the stamens all transformed into short narrow petals forming a round cushion in the centre of the flower.

Crown.—In this type, wide petals are developed in the centre of the flower, forming a high crown, with the narrow short petals forming a ring or collar around it. Often the crown and guards are of one color and the collar another or of a lighter shade.

Bomb.—The next step, in which all the centre petals are uniformly wide, approaching the guards, but distinctly differentiated from them, forming a globe-shaped centre without collar or crown.

Semi-rose.—Flowers with the petals all uniformly wide, but are loosely built, with a few pollen bearing stamens visible or nearly concealed.

Rose.—The process of doubling is completed, all stamens fully transofrmed into evenly arranged wide petaloids, similar to the guards, forming a perfect rose-shaped bloom. (Descriptions from bulletins of the American Peony Society.)

The writer admits a special liking for the singles, semi-rose and rose types, though others may have their special preferences. The point is that one should study the various types and make selections of varieties according to one's special tastes. The symposium rating of the American Peony Society is a very safe guide in making a choice and is now sp cial tast s. Th symposium rating of th Am rican P ony Soci ty is a v ry safe guide in making a choice and is now included in the catalogues of most growers. Now-a-days one should pick and choose carefully, selecting the choicest varieties (though not necessarily novelties and the most expensive sorts) aad leave the inferior sorts alone.

For general landscape use there are a number of varieties which are very floriferous and bear their flowers on sturdier stalks, which is a great advantage, gives a finer show with no trouble in staking. Some of these are Mme. Herve, Gen. Davoust, Irma, Ruy Blas, Pomponette and Mme. Muyssart.

The Tree Peonies deserve a word of mention and a place in the garden. Although they last but a short time in flower, especially in a hot season, they well repay the extra care necessary by the interest of their huge buds and the unfolding of the most gorgeous water lily-like single and double flowers in all shades from white to the deepest red. Some good varieties are: Georges Paul, Athlete, Reine Elisabeth, Duchess de Morsey doubles, and Mme. Pierre Dessert, Papillon, Shiro-Kagura (singles), to mention a very few.

The May flowering peonies make a good start for the season, although the time of bloom is short. They are worth giving a trial too, however, and some good ones are Officinalis Alba Plena, Offinalis Rosea Superba, Tenuifolia Flore Plena, Violaceae Spheric and Anomala.

A further article on the actual planting and care of peonies will be printed in good time, when the proper month arrives.

THAW RETURNS TO NEW YORK TO SPEND HIS MONEY ON DIAMONDS FOR FAWN GRAY

Fawn and her red chow—Thaw bought the dog for her.

Notice the bracelet on Fawn's wrist. Thaw bought that for her. It contains 126 diamonds. You guess the price!

The young folks these days seem to have just as much gayety and fun as they ever did," Harry Thaw remarked when he returned to Brodway, as a moth returns to the flame. With him was Fawn Gray, a young dancer upon whom the slayer of Stanford White has lavished his attention and many gifts.

The accompanying photographs posed by Miss Gray for M. J. Ackerman, NEA Service and Examiner photographer, tell better than any words the story of Thaw's spectacular return to New York night life after years spent in asylums and in seclusion on a Virginia estate.

All of Thaw's romances have been tinged with tragedy. Heartache has followed the waving of his wand of riches and bright lights. Even now Helen Gallagher, former wife of Ed Gallagher of "Mister Gallagher and Mister Shean" fame, is in tears. She introduced Thaw to Fawn Gray and since then she has been dropped almost entitrely out of Thaw's life.

Will tears be the lot of Fawn Gray? At present she is basking in more publicity than any woman in the world. That publicity has brought her a contract as leading danseuse in a very pretentious musical show soon to open on Broadway. After that, what?

REBUILD MINAKI C.N.R. DECIDES

Summer Hotel Burned on Thursday With Loss of $150,000.

MONTREAL, June 13.—(Special)—With regard to the destruction by fire on Thursday night of the Minaki Inn, a summer hotel owned and operated by the Canadian National Railways on the Winnipeg River at Minaki, Ont., about 100 miles east of Winnipeg, the following official statement was issued by Walter Pratt, general manager for hotels for the National system.

"The main building of Minaki Inn was totallydestroyed by fire with a loss of $150,000 which is fully covered by insurance. The inn, which was to have been opened for the accommodation of guests Saturday was occupied at the time only by members of the staff. There was no loss of life. The cause of the fire has not been determined.

"The Lodge, which was originally designed for the accommodation of winter guests was not damaged by the fire and instructions have been issued to Manager H. T. Knight to prepare it immediately for the reception of guests so as to be ready for opening on June twenty-first. The dance pavilion, boat house, swimming accommodation, and the ice house were untouched by the flames. The new golf course has not been injured in any respect.

The Canadian National Railways will begin work at once to prepare plans for the erection of a new building to replace the one destroyed by fire.

LAKEFIELD OBJECTS.

Umpire Declares Game Forfeited—Team Says Ump Wrong.

The secretary of the East Peterborough Baseball League has received a report on the Lakefield-Curve Lake game from the umpire-in-chief, who declared the game forfeited to Curve Lake when Lakefield refused to continue play when ordered to get busy. Another letter from the Lakefield Club objects to the Ump's ruling.

On their showing against Cognawagas here, the Keene team should not be in the cellar. The Otonabee club gets good battery work with Charlie Robertson showing improvement behind the bat. The infield is strong and the outfielders are good fly grabbers. In spite of their three defeats the Keene ball tossers are strictly in the running and will give the Cogs a battle royal in the return game at Keene.

Woodhouse, who is doing the heaving for Lakefield this season, is a real hard luck pitcher. He has some nice curves and good control, but his team mates mar his effectiveness by frequent "boots." There's a black cat somewhere in the Lakefield camp. Individually, the players size up like a real ball team.

Billingsley, a raw recruit with the Cogs last season, is coming along fast, judging by his work to date, having won all his starts. He sheets them over from port side.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

THE HALF-PAY COLONEL

By M. B. Levick.

The half-pay Colonel home from India did not take kindly to the idea of wearing mufti all the rest of his life. Hard lines—retired at 41, to give younger men a chance for promotion. Younger men! Completed. Done for. His career neatly docketed and bound with red tape.

It was jolly to be home again, but he hadn't expected it so soon when he took his regiment out two years ago. Nobody thought about India then, and now they were all talking. Women gabbled at tea about Sikhs and memsahibs, and said they just knew he had been in India from the tan on his face. As if active service in the Sudan wasn't enough to tan a man. But what was nine years before, when the Arabs penetrated the square at Abu Kela and the desert column was decimated, literally. It wasn't a pipe-clay campaign, that job of striking across the Bayuda desert. A camel corps of a thousand men; it was a wonder that any got through.

The half-pay Colonel remembered how very tranquil he had pretended to be at hisefirst mention in dispatches, at the wells of Abu Kela. It had seemer a real beginning, after all the garrison duty. Now he was through, retired. The Sudan was forgotten, and they prattled of India. It was all because of that new fellow, Kipling. He'd set them going. Was India just as Kipling pictured it? people kept asking him. Well, very likely this young Kipling's work was pukka, but as for him, give him "Bleak House," or "The Book of Snobs." These youngsters couldn't hope to come up to Dickens or Thackeray. They were so very young.

Of course there might be another war, sometime, somewhere. That would give him another chance, if it were big enough. Maybe he would have done better to stay in the navy as his father stayed. As for that, there was another forebear, five times removed, who hadn't done so badly in the army. He, however, lived in William III.'s day, and times had changed. The navy had changed, too, in a few years. He thought of this chap, on his way to being an Admiral, and that other, the big man in gunnery; they had all been under the white ensign together, cadets in the old Britannia with her sails and her guns like soda bottles. That was in '66. Well, after all, he had chosen the army in the end, and he must put up with things—even retirement at 41.

A hard part about it was thatt others would much better have been dropped. His Hussars were a good lot to work with; hadn't he found that out by serving all his army years with them, from newly gazetted subaltern to Colonel? He was proud of them when he took them to Bengalore. But aside from the command, he himself had done good work at the Muridki camps. He had shown them how cavalry could be handled.

There were some backbiters who said he rode like a sailor, and there was So-an-so, six feet three, who tried to be patronizing to a man five feet five. What of that? The work was what counted. Muridki was only manoeuvres; quite true. But he knew active service, too. The Sudan had given him insight into the working of cavalry in the field, especially staff workng. At the manoeuvres in ndia he had served as Brigadier. He had thought again that the future was just opening for him. He had made a reputation, of a sort. And now he was home, retired.

There was such a lot that should be done with the cavalry arm. Now somebody else would do it, if anybody at all. A half-pay colonel can't do much but write letters to the newspapers. Now look: suppose there's another war somewhere in the Empire. South Africa say. Where would the old tactics get you on a terrain like that, against an enemy like the Boers? You'd have to rely on turning and sweeping movements, on intuition, too.

That's a waterless country. Here—on this map. The road runs along this valley. The enemy appears on the high ground, sniping and bringing up guns. There is the objective, over there; that neck. Here is your horse. Now, what to do? Do the rules help you? Not a bit.

If you stop and fight, the enemy shifts and you have to fight them a second time at the nek. You lose men—and time. Let them snipe; go straight on. You can't fight Red Indians or Boers either with correct Aldershot tactics, all on dress parade. That was something he had learned in the River War, with the Dervishes fighting like devils.

But what's the use of knowing such things when the gate has closed behind you? It's enough to make a man think he is the unluckiest man in the army.

Thus, irksomely, the former Colonel settles down to his unwished-for years of quiet, concerning himself no more with men and mounts but with books—Dickens and Thackeray, and books about Napoleon also; queer volumes dealing with horsemen in odd parts of the world, on the steppes and the American plains and the pampas. He even sets to writing a book himself about cavlary. Sir George, home too, has suggested that. Sir George Luck, Inspector General of Cavalry. Pity there isn't more in a name. Still, it's something that Sir George has remembered India and the Muridki manoeuvres. Good work, then, is not completely forgotten.

The ex-Colonel's book appears. The public knows nothing of it, nor cares, but men who can judge cavalry call it a masterpiece. It tells what ought to be done through the whole arm.

"Writing about it is all very well," says the retired Colonel, "but what counts, you know, is getting these changes carried out."

Sir George himself has said the same thing at the War Office. Who will do it? they ask. Why, says some one, the man who had told what should be done; who else?

So at 43 the half-pay officer steps back into service, as chipper as the rawest lad who ever head Napoleon say every trooper has a Field Marshal's baton in his knapsack. His career, he tells himself, has just bebun in earnest.

Colonel John French was retired on half pay in 1893. His career seemed closed. A short time ago funeral honors were given him at Westminster Abbey as the Earl of Ypres. His second start came as narrated above and was followed by brilliant work in the Boer War, leading to titles, the rank of Field Marshal and supreme British command in the early part of the World War.

Radio Flashes

To make a low-loss coil, put six strips of gummed paper lengthwise on a bottle with the gummed side up, wind the required number of turns, coat the wires with collodion above each strip, wet and stick together the free ends of the paper, break the bottle, and there you are!

If wiring your house for radio, with its wall receptacles and all, is too expensive, run two pieces of bell wire under the rugs from the jack on the set to the loudspeaker, to which have been attached ordinary phone connectors.

When a loop won't reach the longer wavelengths insert a 25 or 50-turn honeycomb coil in series with the loop. When it won't reach the low, or short, wavelengths use a variable condenser in series with the loop.

Try adding another "bulb" to your circuit to prevent tube "blowouts." This "bulb" should be a 25 or 50-watt electric lamp of the tungsten type inserted in the B-minus lead.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

The Kingston Whig is very wrathy over the manner in which the Petes performed the other night, intimating that the Johnstonites made a burlesque of the game once they were in the rear and that they should be made to play ball or get out of the league. Omigash! After the exhibition the Ponies gave here last Saturday, too!

Heckmann especially comes in for a big share of abuse from The Whig writer as a poor sport. As a matter of fact 'Heck" was in there with a lame arm that has bothered him for several weeks, and the only reason he remained on the mound so long was that he felt that the work was doing his wing some good. The Whig should have been here a week ago when Joe Daley left Young in for the greater part of the game although his offerings were being murdered.

The benefit game for Bill Duggan, injured Examiner pitcher, at Riverside Park on Tuesday evening, should attract a big crowd of fans. The Petes will use their regular lineup, while the Mercantile League will be represented by three players from each of the 4 teams, making a club strong in all departments. The proceeds will go to Duggan, who suffered a fractured jaw in a game last Monday.

SMOKING ROOM IN FULL BLAST

In Metropolitan Church — Scene of Ban Three Years Ago.

OPPOSE RESTRICTION.

TORONTO, Ont., June 13. — (Canadian Press). — In an article published to-day Rev R. E. Knowles author and journalist, points out that the smoking room is in full blast in the basement of the Metropolitan (Methodist) Church, where the General Council of the United Church of Canada is in session. Mr. Knowles recalls that it was in this same church that the guadrennial general conference of the Methodist church in Canada 3 years ago, decreed that no candidate for the Methodist ministry should be ordained without the assurance that he did not, and would not through his ministry, use tobacco.

In interview with Rev. Dr. Ward Stafford, special minister of Metropolitan Church at present, and ex-president of the Wesleyan Conference of Great Britain, Dr. Stafford is quoted by Mr. Knowles as having vigorously condemned any effort towards restrictions of this kind regarding the personal conduct of ministers, adding that the great majority of Methodist preachers in England were addicted to the weed.

EXHIBITION GAME.

Athletics Won From Dufferin All Stars By 4 to 3.

On Friday evening, the Dufferin All Stars of East City met the Athletics of Brownton, both of the City League Bantams, in a fast game of baseball at Dufferin Park. The weather was ideal for baseball, and the game looked like a tie until near the end of the game, when the Athletics got another run, making the score 4-3 in their favor. As this was just an exhibition game, the All Stars put in four pitchers and the South-Enders put in two. The lineups were:

Dufferin All Stars: McCartney lf, Starr c, Playford 3b, Leahy 2b, Meagher cf, Mongraw rf, Collins 1b, Milliken, Leahy, McMann and Ellis p, Perdue ss.

SECOND CHARGE ALSO FAILS AGAINST SHERMAN AND MERSON

No Evidence Offered on Obtaining By False Pretenses Count.

THIRD TRIAL.

Monday Will See New Trial on Charge of Defrauding Creditors.

Acquitted last night of conspiracy to defraud creditors Reuben Sherman and Nathan Merson were brought up again at ten o'clock this morning charged with obtaining by false pretenses.

Both pleaded not guilty and the Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton intimated that the Crown had no evidence to offer, and the jury without retiring from the court declared accused not guilty.

Sherman and Merson were then arraigned on a charge of defrauding creditors by disposing of property. They tendered pleas of not guilty.

New Jury.

The jury was empanelled as follows:

W. E. A. Smithson, 266 Sherbrooke street, Peterboro; J. H. Morrison, 700 Water street, Peterboro; Harry Carter, 517 Romaine street, Peterboro; David Darling, Lakefield; Samuel Buck, Asphodel; Archibald Telford, Douro; Stirtson Lancashire, Otonabee; E. J. Wilelman, Belmont, Wm. Whitcroft, 490 Charlotte St., Peterboro; David Scollard, Ennismore; George Simpson, Monaghan; Beecher Matchett, Otonabee.

Crown Attornrey Hatton, in his address to the jury, laid special emphasis on the fact that accused, in payment of the cattle received on November 1, tendered the farmers what purported to be cheques but were in reality bills of exchange. He asked the jury to remember that while every cheque was a bill of exchange, every bill of exchange was not a cheque. A cheque was a bill of exchange, payable on presentation, and implied that there were funds in the bank to meet it. Nothing was said to the farmers to indicate they were being paid in any form other than a cheque, payable on demand. The farmers were all given to understand the money would be available for them in the bank. No one of these farmers was paid on presenting his cheques at the bank. Evidence had been given showing that accused shipped the cattle to Montreal and disposed of them on November 4. The money received was taken by Merson and Sherman's son to the Peterboro bank, where it was entered and immediately afterward withdrawn in order to pay certain debts owed by accused to relatives. He would call on some of the farmers to repeat their evidence of the sales of the cattle.

Farmers Testify.

Michael Duffy again took the stand and gave evidence as to the delivery of the cattle at the station.

Bert Sanderson, asked by counsel, stated he had heard something about an offer on the part of accused, to fulfil some of their obligations, but he was not sure.

Harvey Webber, in answer to a question, stated he also had heard that money had been paid to Mr. R. R. Hall, acting on behalf of the farmers, to effect a settlement at 42 or 50 cents to the dollar.

His Honor intervened at this stage. Don't let us have any quibbling, he said. It was quite distinctly stated yesterday that an offer had been made of 50 cents to the dollar.

Mr. Wearing rose to explain that a sum had been mentioned which would have allowed a settlement at approximately 50 cents to the dollar. It had since been calculated as sufficient to pay 50 cents to the dollar.

John Fox again told the court of his dealings with accused. He expected to be paid by a check. There were lots of farmers at the stock yards when he brought the cattle.

R. Maloney also received what he thought was a check when he took his cattle to the pens.

David Wood, Cavan, for his two cows and a calf, received what he thought was a cheque for $220. He was told he would be paid at the car.

George Howden also received what he thought was a cheque, but he could not get it cashed.

Leo Connolley, Ennismore, was asked to deliver his cattle at the C.P.R. station, where he would be paid. He got what he thought was a cheque. He did not see the words payable on November 3 until his attention was drawn to them at the bank.

John Christie, Asphodel, delivered his cattle at the station. There was a big bunch of farmers at the station when he was there.

William White, North Monaghan, delivered his cattle on November 1 and received a document which he thought was a cheque. He had not got the cheque cashed.

E. Fyfe, Otonabee, took his cattle to Indian River station and received what he also thought was a cheque. But he could not get it cashed.

Bank Manager.

John Crane, manager of the Dominion Bank, recounted how Merson appeared at the bank, accompanied by Sherman's son. The $3,786, made up largely of cattle dealers' cheques, was put through as an ordinary deposit. As soon as this went through they presented the two cheques each for $1,707.75, to be marked. After these cheques had been marked, the Sherman-Merson account showed a debit. On being shown these cheques by the ledger clerk, witness called them in and asked Merson what the transactions meant. Merson told him they had obligations in Montreal and had to do this in order to get the cattle sold. Witness had been given to understand that about $2,000 was outstanding to the farmers. He had received this information from Sherman some days previously. At the time of the deposit of the $3,795, some of the farmer cheques were lying in the bank but were not then due. He had to mark the cheques presented by Merson as one of the men ho controlled the account. It was unusual to have cheques marked payable some days after being issued. The account of Sherman and Merson was now closed at the Dominion Bank. He did not at the time, nor had he since, any reason to doubt that Merson's statement about having to pay the money to liquidation of debts owing to friends was true.

Sold his House.

Mr. R. R. Hall stated he was acting for about 90 per cent. of the farmers. He said he had received $2200, $1100 advanced by a brother in law, Mr. Lavine, on behalf of Sherman, and $1100 raised by Merson through the sale of his house and effects. This would be sufficient to pay approximately 44c on the dollar.

Wants his Money.

Mr. McIntyre would have sold $700 worth of lambs had they been able to strike a bargain. He would have taken a cheque and an agreement been reached. He did not think he would have taken a draft. He did not think they were getting a square deal if they did not get the money.

Tried to pay Up.

Reuben Sherman said he had on previous occasions issued checks marked payable some days after the date of issue. He identified the entries read out by Mr. Huycke relating to the shipments of the firm. He again related his experience with his brother in law Charard who threatened to stop the sale of the cattle in Montreal unless his demands were met. He said he agreed under pressure to pay Charard the money at the same time arranging with Merson to visit the farmers and reassure them that Merson and himself were doing their very best to raise the money in order to pay for their purchases. His brother-in-law had never urged him to pay until the note fell due. He had tried to get a loan for another brother-in-law, M. Lavine. His intention was to borrow sufficient money to pay his creditors and still carry on the business. He had been a cattle buyer for twenty years, and had never struck anything like this. He could do a little arithmetic. He could multiply but he could not divide.

Answering Mr. Hatton: When he made the purchases he agreed to pay on delivery at the station.

He knew that there was three days' grace after November 3 on the cheques given to the farmers. He was examining the cattle when the cheques were given out.

"Who drew up the cheques?"

"Somebody."

"Certainly," commented counsel, "They did not draw themselves up."

He was there when Merson said they had not got the money. He did not hear Merson say they could not be expected to carry $4,000 around in their pockets. He was forced to pay away the proceeds of the cattle to his relatives. His brother in law Charard was a tailor earning $35. Witness knew that Charard had borrowed from friends the money he lent him.

Charard and Spegil would not give up the notes until they got their loans repaid in cash He had tried to get money to pay the farmers right up to the last minute. He did not know what steps Charard and Spegil could take, but he thought they could stop him from selling the cattle.

"The cattle were there at the market," said Attorney Hatton. "What could they have done them?"

Witness did not know.

"Do you think they would have stepped forward and seized the cattle?" asked counsel.

"They might have taken the bull by the horns," suggested His Honor.

At 1.10 the Court adjourned until 10.30 on Monday.

The strong language employed by the Secretary came as a surprise, although it had been indicated he would make a public declaration as the result of recent conversations with Ambassador Sheffield, who appears to have returned from his post on leave chiefly to discuss the grave situation in Mexico with the President and Mr. Kellogg.

WILLIAM DEMILLE'S "THE BEDROOM WINDOW" IS A FINE COMEDY MYSTERY-DRAMA.

A story with the hero and villain unknown—until the last reel! And several parsons suspected of murder until the final moment!

Most motion pictures begin with clearly defined characters of good and evil, but Clara Beranger has reversed the method in her original comedy-drama, "The Bedroom Window," which William de Mille produced for Paramount. In fact, suspicion shifts in so many directions that seldom will two persons agree upon the same suspect at the same moment.

The story opens with a murder. A young clubman rushes into the darkened bedroom of a New York banker and locks the door behind him. When the police break in, they find him with a revolver in his hand and the body of the financier on the floor.

When the banker's secretary arrives and refused to state where he has been, suspicion falls upon him also. A neighbor is suspected of having bought a gun and then having left town. A fascinating woman is brought into the case. Here are fou suspects already. Then, when the sister-in-law of the banker and the family lawyer begin seeking clues, the circle widens still further. The sister-in-law is a writer of "detective thrillers" and resents the entrance of the lawyer into the case creating unique complications.

But the final solution of the mystery is a carefully guarded secret, and a secret it will remain until "The Bedroom Window" is flashed upon the screen at the Royal Theatre next Monday.

May McAvoy and Malcolm MacGregor head an unusually strong cast of featured players. Others include Ricardo Cortez, Robert Edeson, George Fawcett and Ethel Wales. Playing in support are Charles Ogle, Medea Radzina, Guy Oliver, Lillian Leighton and George Calliga.

AT THE GRAND

HUNTING BIG GAME

Those who have only seen wild animals in a circus have an opportunity in the appearance at the Grand of H. A. Snow's thrilling picture "Hunting Big Game in Africa," of getting a new angle on the animal world. The first thing that probably impressed those who saw this wonderful film last night, was that the animals on the screen seemed so much larger than the specimens on view in a menagerie. There are many close ups of these denizens of the jungle that afford a splendid chance to compare the captured variety with the wild beasts, and the camera man has done some wonderful work.

The picture is a condensation of two years of adventure into two hours of thrills, and nothing quite like it has been seen here. It is full of punch, charging animals, attacks on lions, leopards, rhinos, a stampede of maddened elephants, enough material for a dozen ordinary pictures.

And the best of it all is that it is true.

There are no pet lions that are pictured, charging in an artificial jungle in California, but the real thing.

"Hunting Big Game" will be at the Grand again to-night. It is too thrilling to be missed.

AT THE CAPITOL

ALICE TERRY GORGEOUSLY GOWNED IN NEW PICTURE

Alice Terry, long recognized as one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, enjoyed her first opportunity of wearing lavish modern gowns in her first Paramount picture, "Sackcloth and Scarlet," which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre next Monday.

Miss Terry has been beautifully gowned in many pictures but in such instances the gowns were of period design. In such pictures as have shown her in modern clothes her roles did not permit anything extravagant.

Wearing eight different gowns in one day was the record set by Miss Terry during the filming of "Sackcloth and Scarlet." All in all, she wears twelve different creations in the production, each designed by the man responsible for Gloria Swanson's screen fashions. The fact that Miss Terry travelled all the way from Hollywood to New York for fittings indicates the careful preparations made before even a single scene of "Sackcloth and Scarlet" was "shot."

The picture was adapted from George Gibb's novel by Tom Geraghty, Jules Furthman and Julie Herne and produced by Henry King, who made "The White Sister," "Tol'able David," 'Romola" and other big screen hits. Dorothy Sebastian, Orville Caldwell are also featured in the cast.

LEAFS GAIN ON BALTIMORE IN PITCHERS GAME

Both Hurlers Pitched Winning Ball, But Homers Won For Leafs.

SLUGGING MATCH.

Providence Collected Twenty Hits in Game With Syracuse and Leave Cellar.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 13 (Canadian Press).—Myles Thomas had too many guns for the Orioles yesterday afternoon and the Toronto Leafs took the third game of the series 3 to 1. Earnshaw pitched pretty good ball for the champions, but was not as effective as Thomas. Fielding was rather loose on each side. Two long home runs by successive batters, Gehringer and Joe Kelly, gave the Leafs their margin of victory in the fifth. Doubles by Walker and Boley gave the Flock its lone counter in the fourth. Earnshaw forced in Toronto's first run, when he walked Heath with the bases full in the forth. Score:

Baltimore ....000100000— 1 7 3
Toronto.... ....00012000— 3 9 5

Earnshaw and Cobb; Thomas and Manion.

Providence 22; Syracuse 9.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., June 13 (Canadian Press).—Providence got out of last place yesterday by defeating Syracuse, 22 to 9, in one of the heaviest batting, poorest pitched games in years here. The Grays hit Frankhouse hard all the way, collecting every variety of hit in the list and drew ten bases on balls, and, in addition had two hit by pitched balls. Swartz started for Providence, but was taken out in the second inning, Musante was sent in. He lasted the rest of the inning and Duggan started the third but went out after the Stars had walloped him for five hits. Swaney finished the game strong. The biggest weekday crowd of the season was present. Score;

JERSEY CITY, June 13 (Canadian Press).—Hard hitting in the second and eighth innings earned Rochester an easy victory over Jersey City yesterday afternoon by a score of 9 to 5, giving the Hustlers three straight. With two men on in the second frame, Hinkey Haines poled a homer over the right field fence. Rochester made 17 hits and Jersey City 11. Score:

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER THORON
Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

While the weight passes to the right leg in the back swing and the club 'winds up' the entire right side, there is, in the correctly - made back swing, quite a pull against the left leg when the club is at the top. The player must not lose this firm contact with the ground, for the left leg helps greatly to hold the body in place and maintain balance. This pull also keeps the shoulders from drooping. In the most graceful swings the left knee begins to bend inward when the club is about half way up in the back swing. This bend in the left knee should not be forced. If you stiffen the right leg in the first part of the back swing, absorbing the passing weight, the left leg will take care of itself, but it requires an occasional watching to see that the knee is falling over to the right knee, not out toward the ball. When it points to the ball the left knee is absorbing too much weight and letting the left shoulder drop.

CAMPBELLFORD LACROSSE LOST

Combined With Hastings, But Unable to Stop Norwood and Havelock.

SCORE 10 TO 7.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 13. — In the first intermediate O.A.L.A. game played in Campbellford for several years, the combined Hastings and Campbellford team lost to the Norwood and Havelock combination by a score of 10 to 7.

The smallest crowd to witness an intermediate game in Campbellford saw the home team go down before the speed and close checking of the visitors.

The C.P.R. combine had a shade more speed in the field, and when the orange and black jerseys did get possession of the ball they had trouble getting in for a shot, so well did the husky C.P.R. defence hang to their checks.

The homesters were without Montgomery and Tait on the defence, and the veterans' steady influence was missed.

The brand of lacrosse was not as good as the intermediates of these towns used to dish up, but should improve as the season advances.

Cruickshanks opened the scoring in three minutes on a long shot, but D. Brennan evened up for the C. P.R. towns and put them ahead when he picked up a loose ball in front of the home net after Fox had made a brilliant save. The youngster made another fine stop of Jack's shot when the Havelock home man was unchecked right in front of his net. Stevenson was in close at the other end, but Neil saved.

Just before the whistle blew Fox stopped D. Brennan's shot but failed to clear and Jack picked up the loose ball and slammed it home for the C.P.R.'s third goal.

Second Period.

The Havlock and Norwood combines kept up their offensive and Jack scored on a pass from Baker. Doug Brennan made it 5 to 1 when he went around his check.

Gould got one back on a clever play evading two defence men to get in close. Clapper reduced the C. P. R. lead to two after a pass from behind the home net for the railroaders 6th goal and D. Brennan made it 7 to 3 when he was on the firing end of a fast combination.

Third Period.

Vice president of the O. A. L. A. Armstrong was so anxious to give all men a chance, he trotted out 11 men at the start of the period but Referee Lennie Simth noticed the congestion and gave the visitors a three minute penalty. With the one man advantage the orange and black started an offensive but couldn't get in close on the striped jerseys net. Holmes drew a penalty for turning Doug Brennan over when he tried to go around him. Brennan and Baker scored for Havelock. Norwood and Gould for Campbellford-Hastings. All were scored on nice combination plays.

4th Period.

The home team played their best lacrosse in this period and outscored the visitors 3 to 1. Gould and Stevenson, after some clever passing, landed the first counter of the period. But D. Brennan got it back when the home defence backed in on the nets. Cruickshank got a nice goal coming across in front of the net fast to take Stevenson's pass.

"Toey" Ibey wound up the scoring for the day, with the prettiest goal of the game, taking Stevenson's pass directly behind the net and slipping between three defence men dropped the ball in the net. Weir and Doug. Brennan were the bright lights for Havelock-Norwood with Hooper and Charlie Brennan playing fine lacrosse.

For the home talent, Cruickshank Clapper, McArthur and Ibey were the most consistent and played clever lacrosse. Gould and Stevenson were good in spots.

Holmes and Nesbitt are not in shape for a hard game.

Fox, in goal, did his job well, his only slip being when he tossed Brennan's shot out in front of his net and Jack picked it up for an easy goal.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

BABE RUTH'S DEBUT.

"Don't miss any on me today," remarked Babe Ruth to me as he made his 1925 debut.

"You can't make any base hits with your bat on your shoulder," I replied. That's an old one, but is always good.

"You know the Babe hasn't been in there for two months and things are going to look strange. Don't make it any tougher by missing three or four," Ruth continued.

"If they are close enough to hit, keep swinging, don't give me a chance to miss any."

The late "Silk" O'Loughlin, had he been talking to Babe, would have replied, "I never missed one in my life and it's too late to start now."

While down in his heart it is possible that "Silk" may have had his doubts about some of his decisions, no athlete can ever recall him admitting that possibly he missed one.

Thus the Babe made his 1925 debut in an effort to break the losing streak of the Yankees that developed the moment the big fellow left the lineup.

MAKER OF DRAMA.

No player in the history of baseball has supplied more drama than Babe Ruth. In the big moments he has invariably done his best work.

Fate played a queer prank in having the great Ruth make his debut against the world champions, Washington, with the famous Walter Johnson doing the pitching.

In years past, Ruth and Johnson have staged many historic battles, in which Ruth pitted his batting prowess against Johnson's pitching craft.

The first time Ruth faced Johnson he grounded out. On his next time at bat he supplied near drama. With two on and the score a tie, Ruth met one of Johnson's fast ones on the trademark and the ball started on a line for the right field bleachers. The crowd went wild; Ruth had made his first homer of the season.

The umpire must call all hits into the stands or over the fence fair or foul, according to where the ball is when it disappears from his view.

Unfortunately for the scribes, the ball was foul not over six inches. It spoiled many a good human interest story, those scant six inches.

Two innings later he made a sensational one-handed catch, one of the greatest I have ever seen.

Thus Ruth in his first appearance lived up to his reputation of being the most colorful athlete in the game. In a few weeks he will be back in the headlines with a vengeance.

NOT IN SHAPE.

Ruth isn't quite ready. It may be a month before he is again at the top of his game.

The Babe looks great physically and apparently his operation has in no way affected his swing. His batting doesn't seem to have suffered. It is in the field and on the bases that he shows the effect of his recent illness.

Ruth has small legs, far too small it seems to carry the 200 pounds that he now carries around and he is the lightest in years.

Babe runs the bases with the same determination and pursues fly balls with his usual zeal, but the legs simply balk on the assignment.

It will take at least two weeks, and possibly four, before Ruth recovers the strength of his underpinning. Until such a time he will appear slow on his feet.

* * *

However, the experts who counted the Bambino as through have another guess coming. He is still the same dangerous Mr. Ruth, a pest for the pitchers.

BASEBALL SIMPLIFIED

By BILLY EVANS.

Is it possible for the pitcher to make a balk without any runners on the bases and does the calling of a balk have any effect on the status of the batsman?

It is impossible for a pitcher to make a balk without any runners on the bases.

The calling of a balk on the pitcher can in no way affect the status of the batsman, regardless of what the call of balls and strikes may be when the balk is committed.

It is possible to illegally deliver the ball to the batsman with no runners on and this condition often confuses with the balk.

For instance, if the pitcher, with nobody on the bases, delivers the ball to the batsman without having either foot in contact with the rubber, it is an illegally pitched ball. The umpire should rule it a ball.

This same act on the part of the pitcher with a runner on the bases would be interpreted as a balk.

Thus the same act is differently interpreted according to whether or not there are runners on.

When the umpire calls a balk on the pitcher, play is immediately suspended, which, of course, makes it utterly impossible for the balk to have any effect on the status of the batsman. The count on the batsman remains the same when a balk is called, regardless of whether the pitcher delivers the ball, because no play of any kind is possible.

THE SHORE DINNER.

The poet who said there was more to a fishing trip than just fishing was right.

One of the main assets is food. Delmonico never served a meal that would measure up to boiled spuds and fried trout along the ol' water trail. The guides call 'em shore dinners.

No matter how white the linen or cute the waitresses at the Fishing Inn the noon shore dinner has the call. When you have inhaled the ozone of a morning's fishing, gone ashore for the noon siesta, started up the pipe and waited a half hour for a skillet of sizzlin' trout—oh man! Can you eat?

Any fisherman, hunter or camper knows how life in the open whets the appetite. It's really remarkable how many flapjacks and syrup and bacon and coffee one can consume at a camp breakfast. It's wonderful how hungry you get before noon.

On a mountain hunting trip a feller drags into camp at night so tired he can hardly move—then eats so much caribou he can't sleep.

But there's something about this noon shore dinner that has the rest of 'em stopped. Fresh fish from your own morning's catch. Boiled potatoes. Loads of bread and butter and jam in your basket. Coffee or tea, cooked over the campfire, in the blackest pot you ever saw. And then—your head against a log and your feet stretched over the wildflowers, a friendly breeze croonin' through the pines, just watchin' the clouds float by.

If there is a lake, pond or stream handy you have the location for all of this. Pack up a fryin' pan, two tin pots, tin plates and cups, knives, forks and spoons and try it out.

Put in some spuds, bacon, bread, butter, coffee or tea, jam and pickles, pepper, salt, sugar and a can o' cream. Then catch a fish or two. (A few eggs will serve in lieu of fish.)

Build a fire-place in double rows of stones, about two feet long, 10 inches high and eight inches apart. Make a hot fire of small and dry sticks or twigs. You can put the fryin' pan and both pots on this rig at the same time.

Try this shore dinner. You'll like it, and eat it, and enjoy it.

COCHRANE IS SECOND RAY SCHALK

Such is Connie Mack's Estimate of His Latest Catching Sensation—Has Inspired the Athletics.

"The best young catcher to break into the American League in the last ten years."

That's Connie Mack's estimate of Gordon Cochrane, who is making his big league debut with the Athletics.

When I talked with Connie down at Fort Myers, Fla., the spring training camp of the Athletics, he was not so positive about Cochrane.

When I queried him about the young man, who cost him in the neighborhood of 40,000 iron men, he replied:

"Cochrane has much promise. He is going to help my club. He lacks experience, has his faults but possesses ability and enthusiasm.

"Just now he has the habit of fighting the ball, doesn't give with it and it affects his style."

Has Peculiar Catching Style.

In baseball, fighting the ball is construed as not handling it with ease. Instead of giving with the ball, the player has the habit of pushing his hands into it.

This causes him to receive the ball in a stiff manner, the muscles are tightened and, as a result, many pitched balls are dropped.

Wally Schang had a similar habit when he broke into the majors. However, he quickly overcame it and ranks one of the game's best catchers.

Unquestionably Cochrane was fortunate in having the advice of three men who know every angle of catching, Connie Mack, Ira Thomas and Cy Perkins.

Quickly Absorbed Good Advice.

Connie Mack won diamond fame as a catcher long before he became an outstanding big league manager.

Ira Thomas, Mack's first assistant, for years was one of the most valuable catchers in the American League. Thomas was a thinker. He got the utmost out of his pitching staff.

Cy Perkins, who for years has done practically all the catching for the Athletics, starred on a tailend team, is still rated one of the leading catchers in the majors.

Quick to absorb the knowledge imparted to him by Mack, Thomas and Perkins, it was only a very short time before Cochrane began to show results. Almost overnight he developed from a likely prospect into a great catcher.

Cochrane is a "Rah-Rah" athlete. He attended Boston College. He starred in football as well as baseball at that institution. It is hard to understand how the scouts of the two Boston clubs overlooked him.

No one player has done more to make Mack's club the early sensation of the majors than the youthful Cochrane. The rest of the team has absorbed his enthusiasm. Instead of a drab lot, the Aethletics are now a colorful aggregation.

Cochrane bats left-handed and seems to have no great difficulty hitting southpaws. He is the fastest catcher in the American League.

There is no better balanced catching staff in the mapors than the youthful Cochrane and the veteran Perkins, both stars.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

YANKEES SLUMP

No matter how great a ball club may be, there comes a time when it cracks. Father time eventually exacts its toll.

Five years ago, the New York Yankees were generally regarded as the most powerful club in the majors, also boasting the best pitching staff.

Today, the all powerful Yanks of just five years back, are bravely fighting to keep out of last place in the American League.

Unquestionably the illness of Babe Ruth that kept him out of the first seven weeks of play raised havoc with the showing of the Yanks.

However, I am inclined to think that even had Ruth been in the lineup, the club would have experienced a slump. Possibly it would not have reached the present unusual proportions had he been in there.

Yet, I doubt if even the Babe could have carried the handicap the club suffered when several veteran stars slumped at bat and in the field.

It is the history of all great ball clubs that there comes a time when it is necessary to rebuild. The old and halting must make way for the young and sprightly.

VETS DISAPPOINT

To me, the passing of Everett Scott as shortston of the Yankees was the blow that put the club on the toboggan.

No team can lose a veteran star at short and not seriously suffer. A wonder in his day, Scott was a defensive threat that gave stability to the infield.

In addition to the passing of Scott, some of the other tried and true veterans just couldn't hit their stride. Incidentally, the pitching staff experienced much trouble.

The sensational Cubs of 1906, the Athletics of 1910, the Chicago White Sox of 1919 and a half dozen other winning combinations have all passed on. The experience the Yankees are now going through is but a part of the game.

In a recent series against Washington, Miller Huggins in an effort to break a losing streak, put a team in the field that contained only three of the regulars of 1921, Bob Meusel, Babe Ruth and Joe Dugan.

Managers are superstitious. When a club is going bad they will try most any combination in an effort to win. Peculiarly, Huggins broke the losing streak by beating the world champions 8 to 5.

On the bench were such star performers as Wally Pipp, Aaron Ward Schang and all the veteran pitching stars.

While most o fthese veterans will shortly be restored to the lineup, the belief being that a rest will bring them back, the shift makes it apparent that the Yankees are to rebuilt.

BREAKS OF THE GAME

The shakeup made by Miller Huggins proved conclusively the part that the breaks play in the winning of ball games.

Gehrig, Shanks and Bengough were inserted into the Yankee lineup because the team was in a hitting slump. Gehrig, alone of the trio, is regarded as a hard hitter.

Yet, as these three players made their first appearance at the plate, the batting order had them following each other, all three hit safely and started a rally that netted three runs, just the margin by which the Yanks won the ball game.

Despite the slump that the Yankees have experienced in the early games, it is not a second division club. Its bad start is going to make it hard to prove otherwise. Ruth is sure to get the club going somewhere.

"LEFTY" GROVES.

Literally it took "Lefty" Groves seven weeks to finish his first game for the Athletics.

"Lefty" Groves is the southpaw pitcher for whom Connie Mack paid the Baltimore club a trifle better than $100,000 last winter.

It so happened that I called balls and strikes in the first game the much-touted pitcher was able to finish. At that "Lefty" was on the ropes at the bell.

Groves turned the trick against the slugging Yankees. Perhaps it might be well to say the erstwhile slugging Yanks, as the Miller Huggins crew is known, are having a hard time finding themselves this year.

For seven innings he pitched shutout ball, allowed only two hits, one a scratch and had struck out seven men. Although wild throughout he was able to get the ball over in the pinch.

In the last two innings Groves was in much trouble. He was fortunate to get a 9 to 7 decision.

* * *

After the game Manager Mack remarked to me that he gambled the limit with Groves, believing that the finishing and winning of a game would set him right.

WINS FIRST GAME.

Before the affair was over Groves had struck out nine, passed as many and showed the same number of hits. Two home run drives with runners on almost beat him.

Mack is positive that Groves is destined to be one of the game's greatest southpaws. He is not in the least discouraged by the poor showing he has made so far.

Connie is convinced that Groves has the stuff and the courage. He lacks poise that comes with experience. Mack, however, is always willing to go the limit with a pitcher who has the stuff and "guts."

Five years ago when Slim Harriss came to the American League he had perhaps more stuff than 95 per cent. of the American League pitchers. But he couldn't win.

Always something would happen to spoil his game, at a time when he appeared to be going well. It would either be lack of control, failure to field or inability to hold the runners on.

Most managers would have weakened on Harriss in a very short time. Not Mack. He kept the big fellow, nursed him along, positive that the moment he acquired poise he would be one of the most effective pitchers in the American League.

The great work of Harriss so far this season makes it seem that Mack's system in going along with a likely pitcher isn't a bad one. That is the reason why the tail leader of the Athletics is banking on Groves to come with a rush once he finds himself.

GREAT PROSPECT.

Here are my impressions of Groves as gleaned from umpiring the first major league game he was actually able to finish.

Groves has a great fast ball. It is the best fast ball any southpaw has showed me since the days of "Rube" Waddell. Literally, he throws his fast one by the batters.

His curve ball, while good, isn't in a class with his fast one. I am sure he will develop his curve ball under the veteran catcher, Ira Thomas, and increase his effectiveness.

Groves lacks poise. There isn't a big league finish to some of his pitching methods, but it will soon wear off. All he needs is a couple of victories to give him confidence.

* * *

I would say that Groves, despite a most disappointing start, is the greatest southpaw prospect I have seen in 15 years. I don't think Mack paid a penny too much for him.

SISLER'S RECORD.

George Sisler's record of hitting safely one or more times in the first 34 games of the season is a remarkable performance.

It makes it seem that the comeback of the popular leader of the St. Louis Browns is more than a mere flash. Few long batting streaks have started with the opening of the season as did Sisler's.

In compiling his record of 34 consecutive games in which he hit safely, Sisler drove the ball to all fields.

Last season he dropped most of his hits into left field. This year he is pulling the ball to all sections of the playing territory. No better proof could be offered as to the genuineness of his comeback.

Sisler's 1925 record of 34 games in which he hit safely tops the two best efforts of last season.. In the American, Sam Rice hit safely in 31 games, in the National, Eddie Roush went 27 straight.

* * *

GREAT JOHNSON.

That the baseball fan admires the true sportsman, the player who always gives his best, is evidenced wherever the Washington club plays.

Walter Johnson is the athlete to whom the fans pay homage. His great record and his fine character win for him round after round of applause any time he steps on the ball field.

Johnson's career has been a true test of the man. It is difficult for a star to show to best advantage under discouraging conditions. That has been Johnson's fate from the very start.

With a tail-end team the greater part of his career, he has been an outstanding star since the day of his debut.

Not until he was on the decline as a pitcher did his teammates display pennant aspirations. Every fan is familiar with Walter Johnson and the 1924 world series.

Some idea of Johnson's greatness as a pitcher can be gleaned from the fact that with the exception of one season, his pitching average has been higher than his team's record.

VET'S OPINION.

The other day I bumped into "Nig" Clarke, famous catcher of 15 years back and receiver of the great battery of Joss and Clarke.

"I sure would like to have seen Lajoie and the rest of that old Cleveland gang swinging at the lively ball now in use," he remarked.

"The infielders would have to equip themselves with protectors and masks, just like the catchers."

Clarke's opinion pretty well answers the query that is often put to me, as to what the hard hitters of the old days would do if in the game now.

Take it from me, the old boys hit the ball as hard, if not harder, than the present-day star batsmen. Frank Baker of the Athletics swung a mean bat, yet he used to lead the American League in home runs with as low a figure as nine circuit drives.

* * *

The difference in the swat records of past and present-day stars can be traced to the lively ball more than any one thing. Possibly the pitching is inferior, also.

GREATEST PLAYER.

In baseball there is a difference between the greatest player and the greatest natural player.

No doubt if a vote were taken as to who is the greatest player in the majors at the present writing, Rogers Hornsby would be out in front.

Ten years ago, perhaps five, that honor would have gone to Ty Cobb unanimously. Cobb, however, after 20 years of campaigning, is beginning to show the ravages of time.

While the old batting eye still appears to be as keen as ever, the legs have lost much of their power and the arm no longer can get the great distance that once characterized Cobb's throws.

If Rogers Hornsby was elected the greatest player by popular vote of fandom. I would still rate Bob Meusel of the New York Yankees as the greatest natural player.

Bob Meusel has the physical assets to be as great player as was Ty Cobb in his prime. Yet it is doubtful if Bob ever comes close to the crown once held by Cobb.

MEUSEL A MARVEL

Meusel has the ideal build for the ball player; he is tall and rangy. He has great speed and is a wonderful slider.

At the bat Meusel is one of the most dangerous hitters in the game. If he cared to, he could increase his batting averages at least 30 points by mixing up his style.

Knowing the power that Bob gets into his drives, opposing infields always play him very deep. If he became adept at bunting, he could beat out scores of them each year, for he has the necessary speed.

In the field, Meusel is a marvel when he wants to be. He is an uncanny judge of fly balls and he covers with ease all the territory from the left field foul line to centre field.

No player in baseball has an arm that even approaches that of Meusel. He gets great distance and is deadly accurate. When he fields the ball baserunners invariably stop in their tracks.

Meusel has one besetting fault, lack of initiative. He is not aggressive. He was one of those take it for granted temperaments. Nothing ever troubles Bob.

If ever a player ever deserved to be hailed as one of the greatest stars of all times, that individual is Bob Meusel. Lack of proper temperament has so far prevented it.

FANS' ATTITUDE

Don't get the impression that Meusel doesn't play to win, for Bob likes victory as well as the next fellow.

In perusing the wins scored by the Yankees this year, they have been in the minority, you will find that Meusel has played a most important role.

Meusel, however, with his easy style, nonchalant manner, doesn't impress you with his greatness. There is none of the ego to Bob. He doesnt' try to thrust his greatness on the public.

For that reason many of Meusel's great efforts attract but little attention. When he errs, however, it usually is of the glaring variety, largely because of the take-it-easy spirit that characterizes his play.

I doubt if any player is more alternately cheered and razzed by the New York public than Bob Meusel. It is indeed unfortunate.

Bob accepts the attitude of the public in the same care-free manner that he performs. His cap is never lifted from his head, regardless of applause or verbal raspberries.

TILDEN'S TENNIS TITLE LOOKS SAFE

Net Game Reveals No Pastimer Likely to Dethrone Quaker This Year

BY ART CARLSON

How long will Bill Tilden rule the tennis throne?

That's a question that has been popped every spring for the last few years. It's a tough query, however. It beggars a reply.

For "Big Bill" appears to be the same old fellow; the same racquet wielder who has romped through the tennis field in a more or less reckless manner since 1920.

At least the lanky Quaker's work down south during the winter months would lead one to believe that he is as good as ever. And when Bill's in tip-top form he is well nigh invincible.

Tilden, like old wine, seems to improve as the years roll by. Time doesn't appear to slow him up or depreciate his game to any outstanding extent. Season after season he continues his same old bombardment, in the same old way.

Tilden and tennis—the two T's—are synonomous. Mention of the player recalls the pastime. And vice versa.

Tilden first sprang into the sportive glare in 1918. He finished runnerup to R. Lindley Murray that season. The following campaign found him second to Bill Johnston the champion.

In 1920 Tilden reached the dizzy heights by beating Johnston in the final round. And every season since has defended his much-cherished honors successfully. And oddly enough, each time against Johnston.

Tilden has held the top rung for a longer period than any champion since the days of W. A. Larned, who skipped along from 1907 to 1915, inclusive, without relinquishing his laurel. Thats' driving back quite a spell.

A couple of years ago the wiseacres were ringing the last final gong for Tilden. He had just undergone an operation on one of the digitis of his racquet hand. They claimed it would prove too big a handicap for him to overcome, for even a Tilden.

His star was due to fade, they opined.

But the gawky Philadelphian gave their "expert" opinions the well-known rout. For he stepped back on the courts with his same old brand of stuff. At least it has thus far been plenty good enough to crush all opponents.

The tennis world has never flashed a chap who could compare with Tilden, all things considered. True, Wilding and Brookes wer players of the highest magnitude—the two greatest Australia ever turned out. And a pair of the best in the game's history for that matter. 'Red' McLoughlin, the "California Comet," was another. But none was a Tilden viewed from all angles.

Like baseball can show only one Ty Cobb and billiards just a single Willie Hope, so it is with tenni. — there is only one Bill Tilden. There are ni duplicates, no replicas. Moreover, there aren't likely to be either.

As far as the naked eye can discern at this writing, no pastimer appears on the horizon capable of knocking the props out from under Tilden's tennis throne.

Puzzle Plays in Baseball

THE PLAY.

It is the ninth inning. The bases are filled, two are out and three runs are needed by the home team to win.

The manager of the team at bat sends in a pinch hitter who fails to properly announce his entry into the game to the umpire. He doubles, sending over the plate the three runs needed to win the game.

It is then discovered that the player who made the winning hit was a pinch-hitter who failed to inform the umpire of the batsman he was hitting for.

The manager of the team in the field appealed to the umpire to rule the pinch hitter an improper batsman, making the proper batsman out, retiring the side and erasing the three runs. What about it?

THE ANSWER.

The three runs score and the home team wins the game, since that was the needed number of runs.

While the pinch-hitter was at fault for his failure to notify the umpire of his entry into the game, it was not important enough to erase the three runs that scored on the hit.

When a substitute enters the game unannounced, he immediately takes the place in the line-up of the man he is subbing for. The hit that won the game was therefore perfectly legal.

INKWELL COVERS ITSELF

The annoyance of removing the cover of an inkwell every time a pen is to be used has been obviated by a small glass ball rolling on a runway. When a pen is inserted, the ball is pushed back easily. As the pen is removed. the ball rolls forward, closing the well from dust and air.

Why are the American people so far ahead?

Wherever world-travellers come together, the amazing comforts of Americans are sure to come in for discussion. Why is it that the average American lives like a king?

To be sure, he has more money to spend than any other person in the world, but then he insists on spending it to bring better living to himself and family. Who knows what a subtle, but influential, part advertising plays in putting the American people ahead?

Advertising, by showing us new and better things, keeps us from being satisfied with "well enough."

Advertising, by making us want more, wakens the springs of action within us to get more. American advertising is a pretty substantial explanation of American advancement.

Read the advertisements. They call you to better things

OLD-TIME CONCERT.

Women's Association of Murray Street Church Had Charge.

Last evening an old-time concert and birthday party gathering was held at Murray Street Baptist Church Parlors, under the auspices of the Women's Association of the church. Rev. Mrs. Rose presided over a very enjoyable musical programme, in charge of Mrs. W. Barrows. The platform was arranged with old-fashioned furniture, and many of the performers were in old-time costumes that added much to the attraction of their offerings.

OBITUARY.

WARREN STANFORD STONE

CLEVELAND, June 13 (Canadian Press).—Warren Stanford Stone, 63, labor leader and financier, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and all its far reaching financial activities, in banks, in trust companies and other business ventures, died in hospital here late yesterday from an acute attack of Bright's disease.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES TROTTER'

(Contributed.)

There passed away in Chandos on June 5 Mrs. James Trotter in her eighty-fourth year. Her death followed very closely upon that of her husband, who predeceased her just one month and a day, he also being an octogenarian.

These events mark the passing of two pioneers of Chandos Township. From time to time we hear the remark, "The old people will soon all be gone."

Of the second generation many are white-haired men and women among whom death has made many incursions, and from most of the homes the venerable hoary heads of the old father and mother have disappeared; yet here and there can still be seen an aged parent whose mate has long since lain beneath the sod or perhaps has only recently been placed there. But Mr. and Mrs. Trotter, so far as the writer knows, enjoyed the unique distinction of being the last of the very old people spared to enjoy life together.

The late Mr. James Trotter who died at his home in Chandos on May 4 after a short illness was of Scotch descent and came from the Township of Douro with his young wife, who was Marian Davidson, of Otonabee, to Chandos, when the township was first surveyed and opened up for location, and settled on a bush farm.

Four children were born of this union, only one of whom survives, Mrs. Duncan McPherson of Chandos. Mrs. Trotter was not spared to old age. She died while still young, and herein lies one of the tragedies of the early settlers' life. Mrs. Trotter died in child birth, medical assistance far away, no nurse, no telephone, no railway, no motor cars, not even roads fitted for wheeled vehicles—the result in this case, a motherless home—mother and babe both dead, and a husband and three tiny girls to mourn their loss.

A few years after, Mr. Trotter, still a young man, married Miss Caroline Seidewand, of Waterloo County, Ontario, who entered into rest on June 5, a month after the demise of her devoted husband. "In death they are not divided."

Two sons were born of this second marriage, both of whom survive. They are Thomas, of Chandos, on the old homestead, and Joseph, of Oshawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Trotter never really retired from active life on the farm, but as they advanced in years, younger and stronger hands took the burden from the failing hands, and they passed away surrounded by the loving care of children and grandchildren.

Mr. Trotter's comfortable, luxurious home, the well-tilled farm, the valuable live stock, the shining touring car, all stand as a monument of what can be accomplished by industrious, persevering, God-fearing people who, coming from good stock themselves, raise their families to follow in the same line of duty that they themselves have followed, believing thoroughly in the grace of Almighty God and the gospel of "hard work."

The late Mr. and Mrs. Trotter were Presbyterians in religion and in the early days when the divinity students from the Theological College of Queen's University were sent by the Mission Board of the Church, for the summer months to minister to the spiritual needs of the people, their home was the student's home during his sojourn.

Mr. Trotter leaves besides his daughter and two sons, a brother, Thomas, of Hastings, over eighty years of age, a sister, Mrs. Tedford, of Warsaw, nearing eighty, Robert, of Highland Grove, well up in his seventies, Joseph of Chandos, Alex., of Port Arthur, and John, of Peterborough.

Mrs. Trotter, besides her two sons, leaves a brother, Mr. George Seidewand, of Ottawa, and a sister, Mrs. Cadwell, of Rochester, New York.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT KNOX CHURCH

Noted Violinists Will Provide a Recital To-morrow Evening.

Among the works to be performed at the Bach recital Sunday evening in Knox Church is the great Double Concerto in D minor for two solo violins, with orchestral accompaniment. Mrs. Thurza Clark, L.R.A.M., and Miss Edwina Palmer, L.R.A.M., will be the violinists, and Charles Peaker, Mus.Bac., will play the accompaniment on the organ.

This wonderful work falls into the usual three-movement form—first, an Allegro Vivace; then a Largo in the relative major; and lastly another Allegro in the original key. It is difficult to overpraise the brilliant contrapuntal writing in the first and last movements, or the serene grace of the second one. This Largo is in the old cantor's loftiest style—that tranquil piety we have come to expect of him in all his slow movements; Schweitzer says of it: "Every amateur should know the wonderful peace of the Largo in F major."

Altogether Peterboro people will be very fortunate in the opportunity of hearing this great composition, as it is very rarely two artists can be found so equal to the technical demands it makes, as are Mrs. Clark and Miss Palmer.

Mr. Peaker will play several of the organ works also, notably the "Jig" Fugue in G major, and this recital will close the series he has given this season.

MONDAY EVENING

The pupils of Miss Olive Johnston, A.T.C.M., assisted by vocal and violin pupils, will be heard in recital on Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Conservatory Hall. The public is cordially invited to attend. Silver collection.

PRINCESS RAHME ENDS HER VISIT

Beautiful Story of Naaman Was Last Recital Given Here.

Again last evening a large audience assembled at the Georg street church to hear the Princess Rahme in her last entertainment of the dramatic recital of "Naaman the Syrian." The Princess is a dramatic interpreter of unusual power and held her audience from the beginning to the end. A resplendent igure in Oriental costume, she first gave an intimate glimpse of Damascus, her father's home, and called by its poet, "the Pearl of the East."

"The city lies," she said, "like a white star in a luxurious green oasis. She reckons her existence, not by years, but by the rise and fall of empires. She saw Baalbek and Ephesus grow into cities, and then witnessed their decay and desolation; 2700 years have passed away since the founding of the Roman Empire. Damascus was even then an ancient city."

The princess then told of the Oriental atmosphere which all rays permeated the ancient city. "Algiers and Tunis are French," said she. "Jerusalem is made up of religious sects; Constantinople is thronged wiht Greeks and Armenians. The glory of Bagdad has long since departed, but the 'tarboosh' and fez still prevails in the bazaars of Damascus. The Damascenes are very polite to strangers, but very proud, fanatical and thorough, satisfied with what was good enough for their ancestors."

In an amusing and entertaining fashion she told of shopping and bargaining in the bazaars. The merchant asks double of what he expects to get, and the buyer offers half of what he expects to pay. "Damascus," she went on, "was honored by the Crusaders, cherished by the Moslem and still holds her own to the present day.

All this was as an Oriental setting for the story of Naaman, whose home was in this ancient city. In a most convincing manner Princess Rahme interpreted the Bible incident when Naaman in all his pomp and glory, returning from a war victorious, was being feted by the king.

In the midst of the revelry he was suddenly proclaimed afflicted with the dreaded disease of leprosy. From the vista of forgotten ages, Princess Rahme visualized each character of that old story, taking in turns the parts of Naaman, Princess Rahme, his wife, and the Prophet Elisha. Miss Luicile Burgess ably supported the Princess in the role of Mariam, the little Hebrew maid, through whose pleading the great captain was sent into the land of Israel to be healed, with the result by the simple dipping seven times in Jordan he was restore to health.

The Princess is especially fitted to dramatize Bible stories, her home in Syria being near many of the ancient Biblical land marks. She possesses a gift of the dramatic so usually found among Orientals and for which her American education has fitted her.

Princess Rahme and Miss Burgess leave for Trenton, the last appearance here before leaving for a ten weeks Chautauqua engagement through Western Canada.

Chinese paintings in 906 A.D. were done on bronze silk.

INDIANS' RIGHTS TO TRAP UPHELD

Ontario Government Plans Conservation of Beaver and Other Animals.

TORONTO, June 13.—(Canadian Press).— Restrictions of the right to take beaver or otter to the resident Indians has been decided upon by the Ontario Government as a central feature of the program of conservation which it has decided upon in the interests of these animals. Recent investigation has shown the Government that both beaver and otter, two of the most valued of the Province's fur bearing animals were in imminent danger of becoming extinct. Regulations for trapping them, therefore, have been made more rigid, shortened seasons being specified in addition to the exclusion of white trapper.

HEART WAS WEAK NERVES ALL GONE

Mrs. J. H. Hallenbeck, 117½ Welland Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I was in a gas explosion; it left me with a weak heart, and my nerves were all gone. I suffered everything; couldn't sleep, or endure any excitement, and when left alone I felt as if I could scream. I took dizzy spells, often falling and bruising myself. My mother read about your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and bought me a box, but having taken so many different kinds of medicine it just seemed that I did not have any confidence in any of them. I took one box of H. & N. Pills, and felt so much better I continued with them until I had used five boxes, and after I had taken them I did not need any more. I cannot praise, or recommend, Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills too highly after all they have done for me."

FLOOD DANGER IS ON INCREASE NEAR WINNIPEG

Whole Township is Inundated and 500 People Driven From Their Homes.

FEAR FURTHER RISE

Government is Watching Matters Closely, as Well as Providing Relief.

WINNIPEG, June 15. — Canadian Press. — Heavy rains during Friday night, it is feared, will increase the flood danger in southeastern Manitoba, where the whole township of Medika is inundated causing 500 persons to vacate their homes when the Whitemouth and Birch rivers overflowed their banks following several days of rain early in the week. The water was receding on Friday but it is now feared it will again rise, causing additional damage to farm property.

Eighty-three Ruthenian families are being cared for by neighbors in nearby localities that are not inundated, and the provincial government is supplying food and caring for the livestock of the settlers.

The flood waters have reached a depth of from three to four feet and with no boats in the district, the settlers are constructing rafts. When they vacated their homes the people had to wade through three feet of water, carrying children on their shoulders, and carry the old and infirm men and women to dry land.

In several other districts of the province flood conditions prevail but the situation is not serious.

The situation is being watched closely by the Provincial government. C. S. Prodan, of the extension service, is on the scene of the flood and is keeping the government posted as to the extent of the damage and the relief requirements. So far only small quantities of foodstuffs and fodder sufficient to meet the needs of the suffering families from day to day are being forwarded by the Provincial authorities in the hope that recession of the waters will permit the residents to return to their farms and utilize their own stocks.

The situation, despite rains subsequent to the Minnesota cloudbursts that precipitated the flood, has become no worse, according to Hon. W. R. Clubb, minister of public works. A gradual improvement is looked for in this particular area.

Meanwhile efforts to get definite reports as to the possible damage have proved abortive through failure to establish telephone communication with Reynolds, on the Greater Winnipeg water district line.

LABOR LEADER FORMS CABINET

New South Wales Changes Follow Labor Victory in Election.

FULLER RETIRES.

SYDNEY, Australia, June 15. (Canadian Press). — Sir George Fuller, leader of the Nationalist party, who has been Premier of New South Wales since the general election of 1924, when the Nationalists and Progressives joined forces to defeat the Labor Government of J. Dooley, resigned to-day along with his Ministers, at the conclusion of a Cabinet meeting. The Labor leader, J. T. Lang, was invited by the Governor to form a Cabinet and he accepted.

Final returns in the recent general election in New South Wales show that the Labor party has 46 seats in the Legislative Assembly, Nationalists 32, Progressives 9, and Independents 3.

Use Of The Word "Royal" Very Jealously Guarded

LONDON, June 15.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Much interest has been aroused here by the proposed amendment to the criminal code before the Canadian House of Commons regarding the unauthorized use of the word "royal." Such use here is jealously watched by the "Society of Royal Warrant Holders," who take care that only holders of the royal warrant declare themselves purveyors to the king. Even the expression," by special appointment," is not permitted.

UNITED CHURCH IS INAUGURATED

Special Services Everywhere Marked First Sunday of New Church.

PREACH ON EVENT

TORONTO, June 15. — Canadian Press. — In almost nine thousand churches throughout Canada congregations who met one week ago as Methodists, Congregationalists or Presbyterians, yesterday gathered as members of the United Church of Canada.

The historic consummation of union during the past week was the subject of special services everywhere, and ministers emphasized the significance of the event from the national viewpoint and its probable effect on all branches of church work.

About one hundred delegates to the First General Council of the new church preached yesterday in Toronto pulpits and throughout Ontario.

Rev. D. W. M. MacGregor of Glasgow, preached at the Metropolitan, the convention church, in the morning, and Rev. D. C. Pidgeon, of Toronto, ex-moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly, in the evening.

Members of the council were guests at a garden party given by Sir Joseph and Lady Flavelle on Saturday afternoon.

This morning business sessions were resumed and will continue until Wednesday evening at least.

A great deal of work remains to be done. A large number of committees have to report and their recommendations on matters of church organization, finance, conference boundaries, and the work of the permanent departments, are likely to cause considerable debate.

An executive head, who is to be known as "Moderator" if the recomdation of the committee on title is accepted, will be chosen, and a clerk appointed. Little speculation is heard among the members in this connection but the names of Rev. Dr. S. C. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist church, and Rev. Dr. Pidgeon, frequently are mentioned.

WEATHER

Since Saturday we have had two heavy rainfalls, that of Saturday night being the heavier of the two, with a total of 1.42. On Sunday night there was another heavy rainfall, with .64 of an inch, giving a total for the two nights of over two inches. This rain was needed, as the scorching heat of the first ten days of June had its effect in many sections. Highest temperature Sunday 81 degrees; lowest last night 62 degrees.—W. P.

RAIN CAME TOO LATE FOR PARTS OF THE PROVINCE

Longest Spring Drought in Thirty Years Wrought Great Havoc.

SOME SAVED

Saturday's Downpour Will Benefit Small Fruits in Some Places.

TORONTO, Ont., June 15.—(Canadian Press).—Twelve hours rain Saturday night, general through out Central Ontario, definitely broke the prolonged drought accompanied by scorching heat which has wrought great damage to field and small fruit crops. To find a precedent for this great spring drought it is necessary perhaps to go back thirty years to 1895, when similar conditions prevailed through May and well into June. Withering field crops, devastated market gardens and in many districts a ruined strawberry crop tell the tale. Gentle and persistent precipitation, opening late Saturday afternoon and continuing without a break through the small hours, will do much to repair this damage, athough high temperatures continue Sunday. But in some areas it is irretreivale. Thus many farmers in the Clarkson district, famous for its strawberries, are ploughing under the vines, and many acres of spring planting have dried up and must be replanted for next season's crop. That particular district has not had a general rain since last fall.

BYE-ELECTION TO GOVERNMENT

Conservative Candidate Was Successful in Scottish Borough of Ayr.

BIG PLURALITY

LONDON, June 15. (Canadian Press Cable).—Colonel T. C. Moore, Conservative, was successful in the bye-election in the Scottish borough of Ayr, held Saturday, polling 11,601 votes. F. J. Dollan, Labor, received 8,813 votes, and W. M. R. Pringle, Liberal, 4,656.

The bye-election was precipitated through the appointment of Sir John L. Baird, Conservative member for Aye, as governor general of Australia, in succession to Lord Forster. In the last election Sir John L. Baird defeated the Labor candidate J. M. Airlie, by a majority of over 6,000.

TOLERANCE IN INTERPRETATION

Lloyd George Says Germany Has Disarmed and Treaty is Stern.

SHOULD BE OUT

LONDON, June 15 (Canadian Press Cable)—Lloyd George, speaking to the Primitive Methodists Sunday at Scarborough, stated that the Treaty of Versailles was stern and emphasized that it was all the more reason why it should be interpreted with tolerance and liberality. Continuing, he said:

"We ought to have cleared out in January, but the French found the Germans had not carried out the terms of disarmament. I do not say you will not find a little breach here and there, but in substance they carried it out. It is a little odd that I should come here and plead for an enemy, but that is the British way. It is vital that we should show Germany an example by carrying out our part of the treaty."

They also decided to protect themselves against legal proceedings by provision of a special committee with all the powers of the Assembly to take any action deemed necessary in case of litigation.

U. S. Congressman Charges Canada With Inciting Western Opposition to Chicago Water Diversion

WASHINGTON, June 15 (Canadian Press).—Charges that the Canadian Government is stirring up the States bordering on the Great Lakes to make a fight against the diversion of water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois River at Chicago, are being made by Congress Representative William E. Hull, of the Peoria, Ills., district. The Peoria representative is at present making "a protetst tour" through the Middle West States and the charges against the Dominion Government are made in addresses before Chambers of Commerce and other commercial bodies.

Mr. Hull declares the Canadian authorities are "greedy for water power," and that if its fight to prevent diversion of the present flow of water from Lake Michigan and if Chicago succeeds the United States project for an inland waterways between Lake Michigan and the Gulf of Mexico will be ruined.

SEVER BRITISH RELATIONS; SEIZE BRITISH POSSESSIONS; IS CRY OF BIG CHINESE MOB

Britain's Reply Said British Were Only Defending Their Lives.

NO RESPONSIBILITY.

Warning Issued Against Allowing Unchecked Anti-Foreign Agitation.

PEKING, June 15. (Canadian Press). — Chinese students, merchants, shopkeepers, and workmen in the largest demonstration made here during the present trouble, today went to the Foreign Office and demanded that the Chinese Government sever relations with Great Britain and instruct the Tuchun of Hankow forcibly to take possession of British concessions there.

This movement followed the sending by the British Legation of a lengthy reply to the Chinese note of protest over the shooting of a number of Chinese last week during an attack on the British concession in Hankow.

The reply declares the Chinese impression that the laws of humanity were disregarded by the British is completely erroneous; that on the contrary the British were defending their lives against a murderous mob invading their settlement, after having killed one foreigner, a Japanese.

Refusing to admit that any responsibility rests on British authorities, the reply cites previous warning against allowing an anti-foreign agitation to go unchecked, and asks that energetic measures be taken to repress it. The note concludes with the expression of hope that the Chinese Foreign Office will issue a statement giving the correct version of the incident, and thus dispel the atmosphere of prejudice which it says has been created by exaggerated and mendacious stories.

WILLIAM MOORE.

Case to Come Up at Osgoode Hall For Legal Elucidation.

TORONTO, June 15. (Special to The Examiner).—Not only the heirs of the late William Moore, farmer, and his wife, of Otonabee, Peterboro, but also the Unionists and the Presbyterian Church are interested in a will case that has reached Osgoode Hall.

William Moore, who died on July 15, 1914, left an estate and a will. A particular clause of the will said: "I give, devise and bequeath all the balance of my real and personal property to my wife, Elizabeth Oliver Moore, for her use and benefit and it is my will that my wife at her decease leave the balance of my estate, if any, for the benefit of the Home Mission Fund of the Presbyterian Church of Canada." still another issue may arise as a result of Church Union. Both Unionists and non-Unionists may claim the contribution.

Mrs. Moore died last February, intestate, and the executor of Moore's will comes to a single court judge for light on what to him, apparently, is testamentary darkness. There's a balance of $3,978.37, and he wants to know certain things. Is this money part of the husband's estate, or is it part of the wife's estate. Was the bequest to the wife an absolute one, or was it a mere life interest, forming part of the husband's estate and going, finally, to charities?

If this balance is held by the court to belong to the wife it goes to the wife's next-of-kin. If judicial dictum says that the residue is the husband's, then the Presbyterian missions receive it, unless the husband's representatives resist successfully.

If the courts rule that the $4,000 shall go to the "Home Mission Fund of the Presbyterian Church of Canada."

SYDNEY, N.S., June 15 (Canadian Press)—An attempt early this morning to loot the warehouse of the British Empire Steel Corporation at Glace Bay was frustrated by the town police assisted by special constables recruited from the ranks of the United Mine Workers of America. Entrance had been effected and approximately thirty were engaged in the work of looting when the police appeared on the scene, according to chief of police George Costey. The raiders were ordered out and went without a show of resistance. The proceedings were watched by a large crowd drawn up along the street opposite the warehouse. The night's activities also included the ransacking of three privately owned stores in the Caledonia district. In the northern area a mob of upwards of one thousand raided Campbell Brothers dry goods store and cleaned it out. An attempt to raid the warehouse of the Mutual Warehouse Company was frustrated by the police. A troop train from St. Johns, Que., is now reported to be due here early this afternoon.

NEW BRUNSWICK MAY USE POWER OF GRAND FALLS

International Joint Commission Gives Provincial Hydro Authority.

SOME TO MAINE.

Sell Some in Maine Because Dam Will Flood Lands in That State.

MONTREAL, June 15. (Canadian Press).—New Brunswick may now proceed with the development of Hydro power at Grand Falls on the St. John River, considered the most potential power site in the Maritime Provinces. An order of permission was given by the International Joint Commission here on Saturday, conditional on the supplying of two thousand horse power for use in Maine and indemnity for property damage caused by the development. Fifty thousand horse-power is the initial development contemplated by the New Brunswick Government through the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission, involving on expenditure of some millions of dollars. In addition to the 2,000 horse-power which will be supplied to Maine, and which has already been contracted for by the International Paper Company at Van Buren, Maine, 5,000 horse-power will be held available for the Province of Quebec. This was agreed upon during the last sitting of the Quebec Legislature, when that body gave permission for the building of dams and other works in this province.

The International Joint Commission gave its favorable decision on Saturday afternoon, after five hours' private session, in which they tried to conciliate the opposing claims of New Brunswick and the United States Government; the former refusing to recognize the United States sovereign right to the power, but willing as a business proposition to sell more power in Maine than the United States asked; the latter upholding a sovereign right to a proportion of the power because of the flooding of land in that country because of the development. The joint commission, unwilling to set a precedent on what they considered a far-reaching question, avoided a decision on it and left the principle open and undecided.

The Commission's finding, as given to the press by Sir William Hearst in the presence of the full commission, is as follows:

"The Commission has granted an order of approval of plans submitted by the Hydro-Electric Commission of New Brunswick for development of power at Grand Falls, subject to a number of terms and conditions with reference to compensation to all parties sustaining damage or whose property has been taken or injured in any way in connection with the development.

"It has not been found necessary to pass upon the contention of counsel for the United States in reference to the right of that country to a percentage of the power to be developed and the Commission has not given any decision in any way on that subject.

"The Hydro-Electric Commission has entered into agreement to make available 2,000 horse-power in the State of Maine at prices which in effect are not to be greater than will be charged to like consumers of power in the province of New Brunswick.

"Should that agreement be terminated or should the Commission at any time hereafter cease to supply this 2,000 horse power, an application may be again made to the Joint Commission to consider the contentions raised at this hearing and to pass upon the rights of the parties in connection with the power claims of the United States.

"The Hydro-Electric Power Commission further undertakes that if the International Paper Company fail for any reason to continue this contract for 2,000 horse-power that such power should be furnished to such other applicants in the United States until at least further order from this Commission is made.

"The formal order when signed by the Commission will contain protection for the rights of all parties affected by the development."

CAILLAUX WARNS PEOPLE OF TAXES

"If France Want to be Helped She Must First Help Herself."

WANTS SACRIFICE

BEAUVAIS, France, June 15.—(Canadian Press).— M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, in the first Sunday open air speech he has made since he assumed the task of the renovation of French finances, decared to several thousand voters and taxpayers yesterday that "if France wants to be helped she must first help herself."

The Minister spoke earnestly and without apology, saying: "The hour of great economic and financial penance has struck for France. French citizens in every walk of life must realize that the day of financial and economic sacrifce and discipline has come.

"However complicated France's financial situation may be, I feel assured that it is still time—but there is not a minute to ose—to save our financial ship, which is beginning to settle. It is a heavy task. We must restore the financial situation, which has become dangerous through immensity and multiplicity by reason of the long lapse of time.

"I must ask for a spirit of sacrifice from all the taxpayers and solicit everyone's help, but not only the rich, but also the middle classes and the workmen. The naked truth must be told to the country, which for ten years has been kept in ignorance of the realties. It is an ungrateful task, but must be appreciated.

"I must have the courage to tell you that the decisive hour was struck, wherein the nation must down its mode of living so that resources will tally with expenditures. Discpline, financial discipline is absolutely necessary. You must have confidence in the chiefs whom you have chosen for yourselves and give them time to accomplish their programme.

"Do not thing that these exists anywhere a Utopia where a marvelous remedy or financial magic can preserve you fromrigorous retrenchment and daily sacrifices. Do not imagine that it would be sufficient ot re-establish the guillotine so far as concerns public places for all financial ills to dissappear.

M. Caillaux's address had been widely alluded to in the French press as "A most important document dealing with France's economic and financial situation." The Finance Minister, however, studiously refrained from giving any details or fgures, beyond warning the taxpayers that new taxes were coming. He gave no indication of their nature, but merely issued a frank warning that France must gird up its loin and make ready for further sacrifices.

Police Were Powerless to Interfere While Four Stores Were Raided.

MURDOCK ON WAY

Minister of Labor Left Ottawa Sunday to Mediate Differences.

SYDNEY, N.S., June 15. (Canadian Press). — A detachment of troops, including artillery, moved out to New Aberdeen in the Glace Bay area at daybreak Sunday morning and proceeded to patrol the British Empire Steel Corporation power station, believed to have been menaced by striking miners. No attempt was made to molest the force.

A telegram from Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor in the Dominion Government, to the United Mine Workers of America Executive, announced that he was leaving Ottawa yesterday for Cape Breton in an endeavor to meditate the differences between the company and its employees.

Upwards of fifty members of the United Mine Workers were swotn in as special constables at Glace Bay yesterday. They will assist the local authorities in the prevention of fires and preservation of order.

Big Funeral.

Five thousand miners attended the funeral at New Waterford Saturday afternoon of William Davies, shot down by a policeman of the British Empire Steel Corporation, during Thursday's fight for possession of the New Waterford power station, subsequently captured and wrecked by the strikers.

A somewhat prolonged service at the former home of their comrade, conducted by the resident Presbyterian minister of the town, and attended by the Catholic parish priest, was followed by a procession in which all the miners joined to the place of interment. Two bands were in the cortege and played the dirges.

Two company stores in the Glace Bay area were again looted and subsequently destroyed by fire Saturday night, in addition to the company's store at Sydney Mines.

Sunday passed quietly throughout the southern area.

Murdock on Way.

The following is the text of the telegram received from Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, by the United Mine Workers' District Executive:

"Replying to previous telegraphic correspondence, May 31, and a few days following, the undersigned will leave Ottawa Sunday, June 14, for Glace Bay, in order to meet your district board, and, it is hoped and expected, officers of the company with a view of endeavoring to meditate points of difference between your district board and company representatives. The deplorable occurrence of the past few days, which I am sure your district board and the men you represent deplore, prompts me to suggest that your board insist, that all improper activities on the part of your members cease, pending my arrival, not later than Tuesday or Wednesday next.

"James Murdock,
"Minister of Labor."

Stores Looted.

Three stores operated by the British Empire Steel Corporation in the immediate vicinity of Glace Bay and the Sydney Mines store were looted by the striking miners late on Saturday night and two of the stores in the Glace Bay area were destroyed by fire. At midnight Saturday Dominion Number two store had been razed and Dominion Number three store was burning. Dominion Number six store had been raided and denuded of its stock. The miners assisted the firemen in saving the houses in close proximity to the Glace Bay stores. The police of Glace Bay and Sydney Mines stated they were powerless to interfere and the military remained at Sydney.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT R. C. CHURCHES

Inspiring Outdoor Ceremony at Sacred Heart, His Lordship Officiating.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL

Speaking from the text, "Come, let us adore and fall down before the Lord," taken from the sixth verse of the ninety fourth Psalm, Rev. P. Butler delivered an interesting sermon at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday. St. John Chrysostom says that the Blessed Sacrement is surrounded by angels, who adore God with holy fear. "To Him that sitteth upon the throne and to the Lamb, benediction," was the admonition of the sacred writer. We should offer adoration and thanksgiving to God, for all He has given us, and particularly for giving us Himself.

Our Blessed Lord wishes His glory extended on earth. He wishes to claim our hearts completely, therefore we must give him our heart and permit Him to exercise His influence over us. If we do this, we ourselves may exercise a beneficent influence over the lives of others.

When Christ walked on earth, He captivated the hearts of His hearers. How much more does he captivate our hearts. In holy communion, His power is extended over us. We should acknowledge the power of our Blessed Lord in the Holy Sacrament. We must give Him honor and reverence and seek to glorify Him, not only in our own lives, but in the lives of others.

We all need consolation, and we can procure it from God in the Blessed Sacrament. Our church might be a pleasant place to be in, even without the altar, but it is that altar and the Supreme Victim upon it that gives us the consolation we seek. "How great is the presence of the Lord in the heart that is sick. If the greatest sinner in the world were to come daily to church, the Blessed Sacrament and It's spell would in time convert him to goodness."

Special ceremonies at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday morning included the reception of the Blessed Sacrament for the first time by thirty-six little girls and thirty-four little boys, all dressed in white, and singing as they went up the aisle of the church.

Following the late Mass, the Blessed Sacrament was borne around the church by His Lordship the Bishop, accompanied by the priests of the Cathedral. About sixty little girls and boys took part in the procession, singing hymns in the Gregorian Chant, and preceded by eight little girls in white, with floral wreaths, strewing flowers before the Sacred Host.

SACRED HEART CHURCH.

A very special and impressive ceremony took place yesterday afternoon on the grounds of the Sacred Heart Church, in the form of a Procession and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, at an open-air altar erected on the grounds. Fully one thousand people took part in the procession which followed the Sacred Host, borne aloft by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, under a canopy of white and gold.

The services in the open, where the white altar was profusely decorated with green floral streamers and pink-shaded lamps, were preceded by a sermon in the church, delivered by Rev. J. McCarthy of Norwood. The procession which followed was led by over two hundred little boys and girls, the latter carrying baskets of flowers and singing appropriate hymns. Altar boys in soutaines and surplices came next, then three young sub-deacons of the Church, Rev. V. Corkery, Rev. C. McCarney and Rev. Mr. Black, with clergy from the city and surrounding parishes; Rev. Fathers Garvey of Lakefield, J. Power of the Immaculate Conception Church, P. Butlar of the Cathedral, J. Finn of the Cathedral, J. McAuley of Ennismore, J. MacCarthy of Norwood, Rev. J. Moloney of the Sacred Heart parish. Then came the Bishop, carrying the Sacred Host, and accompanied by Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. P. Costello.

Little boys and girls were next in order, the latter wearing white frocks and veils, and singing hymns. Then came the men, about four hundred strong, led by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl, of the Immaculate Conception parish, and the members of the Sodality of the Sacred Heart Church, bearing the banner of the Blessed Virgin Mary garbed in white, with white veils.

Following the Benediction, the procession returned to the church, where His Lordship spoke briefly, recalling to the minds of his hearers the occasion, just seventeen years yesterday, when the cornerstone of the Sacred Heart Church was laid by the late Bishop O'Connor.

ROTARY IDEALS STRESSED FOR NEW MEMBERS

Movement Should Be Regarded as Public Servant, Not as Pay Chest.

HISTORY OF ROTARY.

Rotarian Kenner Addresses Baby Members of the Peterboro Club.

"Rotary is a public servant, not a public paymaster; the Rotary emblem is a cog wheel, not a cash box," was a significant statement during the course of a charge to new Rotarians Jack Gillespie and Jack McDonald by Rotarian H. R. H. Kenner at today's weekly luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club.

Rotarian Kenner's address was a succinct and eloquent resume of the history of the Rotary movement, the duties of Rotarians and the Rotary code of ethics.

For the benefit of the new members he explained, that the first Rotary Club was organized in Chicago on February 23, 1905, and thus the Rotary movement would come of age next year. In 1912, the International Rotary came into existence, and in January of the present year there were 1864 Rotary Clubs in existence, scattered throughout 28 countries and with a total membership of 103,000.

Likening Rotary to a transmission wheel through which by means of the cogs of co-operation and contact the loyalty and enthusiasm latent in every community were brought to the furtherance of every worthy purpose. Rotarian Kenner emphasized the fact that it was a honor to belong to the Peterboro Rotary Club and the price of that honor was regularity of attendance.

The speaker, dealing with the Rotary emblem, pointed out that it was significant of the fact that Rotary worked with others. Its organizing powers, heightened by the system by which only one member from each classification was allowed made it of service on behalf of worthy movements. It should not be regarded, however, as a pay chest to be dipped into whenever financial help was needed.

Rotarian R. A. Browne sang "Rolling Down to Rio," in excellent voice and had to respond to an encore.

President Seels announced that the parade committee in connection with the Rotary Carnival would consist of Geo. A. Gillespie, chairman, A. Brown and Geo. A. McDonald.

No Internal Trouble Symphony Orchestra

As this organization has been supported somewhat by the music loving public, and quite generously by a few, an impression or idea, as reported by the Examiner in Saturday's issue that there was 'internal disruption' in the Orchestra must be corrected, and also the basic reason for the present unfortunate condition which was not mentioned in your report, also be made known to the public.

Since the inception of the Symphony, two or three years ago, there has been no trouble or difficulty of any kind, and everything has been most harmonious, the fifty odd musicians toiling hard and conscientiously to make the organization a real musical success, and credit to our city. For this reason we are compelled to take exception to the term "internal disruption" as it is misleading and incorrect.

It is difficult for the members of the Orchestra to understand why there has not been a more pronounced sympathy and tangible support in the undertaking by the general public. Here is an organization that has won distinct success, and prizes in various competitions. The members have received no remuneration at any time, in fact have paid their annual dues as such. In order to gain further support and recognition a complimentary concert was promoted last fall, when of course there was a capacity house, although there was the usual expense attached to the same. But what a difference when the recent concert was promoted and the same people appealed to, to purchase tickets at very reasonable prices; there was about half a house. It was most discouraging, and disheartening to the members, the executive, and to Mr. Gliddon, who had put his best efforts, a great deal of time, and much personal inconvenience during the season in preparation for the event.

Had the Orchestra had the general support of the public, it would not have been necessary to have appealed to the City Council for a portion of the music grant, and therefore would not have placed the Orchestra in more or less of a competitive position with the Rangers' Band in the park engagements.

When this developed, as the Orchestra had eight or ten Union men, who are also members of the band, they decided or were instructed they could not play in the non-Union organization, without receiving Union compensation. The executive of the Orchestra considered this would be unfair to the other members, and as the Union men played important instruments, and were necessary for the proper rendering of a programme, up to the Symphony standard, it was decided to ask the Salvation Army Band to take over our park engagements, and thereby fulfil the arrangements with the City Council. This, Adjutant Smith of the Salvation Army very kindly and graciously consented to do.

Let us also add, there has always been the best of feelings and regard between members of the Orchestra and those of the Rangers Band who were also with the Symphony, and the question of Union or non-Union has never been discussed, unless privately, every one seemingly anxious to make the Orchestra a real creditable organization, and therefore it is most unfortunate that events have turned as they have, when it all could have been avoided, if the necessary support had been forthcoming, from the public.

Yours very truly,
JOHN CRANE,
President Symphony Orchestra.
J. M. GREENE,
Secretary Symphony Orchestra.

(The Examiner's report was based upon a statement by Mayor Turner that the members would rather disband than pay anyone for playing, as was demanded. The Examiner regrets the misunderstanding, if such was conveyed by its report.)

THEY WOKE UP!

Steady Old Oxford Shaken Out of Its Tranquility by New Dress.

OXFORD, England, June 15. — (United Press.) — It was one of those rare days in England and when the sun dials were actually in operation. Mid-day was well on its way to dusk. At every other window along the deserted old droway streets of Oxford some professional pate could be seen nodding off to forty winks before classes, and then it happened. Down Main street tripped an under graduate (male in sex) and this is what he wore:

A black homburg.
Wide seagreen bag trousers.
Blue shirt.
Red tie.

Sheltering his peach complexion from the pitiless rays of the sun was a—blue parasol.

Oxford's sleepiness passed out but speechlessness took its place.

SAFE BLOWERS AT WORK.

Peterborough Officer Engaged in Man-Hunt at Cargill.

Detective W. H. Howard of the C.N.R. returned to town over the week-end pretty badly worn out, after participating in a chase after a gang of safe blowers who have been operating anywhere from Parry Sound in the north to Cargill in the west.

These men, having secured very fast automobiles, and well armed, have been doing their work at night, blowing up no less than five different safes within the past 10 days, as well as robbing numerous stores and gasoline service stations.

Detective Howard, asisted by the Provincial Police, had these men cornered around the shores of Lake Huron, but under cover of darkness they escaped, leaving their stolen auto, a big Hudson coach behind them, but the officers feel that it is only a matter of hours before they will have this gang in custody.

The dancing pavillion opened for the season Friday night, under a new management.

Contractor Blue of Campbellford has finished the steel roof on Dr. Watson's cottage. An up-to-date fire place, with high stone chimney has been built and when completed will make one of the prettiest summer homes along the Trent waters.

WHY A CAT LANDS ON ITS FEET.

Professor R. Magnus of the University of Utrecht, Holland, has discovered that the cat's odd ability to change the direction of its body while falling is entirely a mechanical, or reflex action that the cat performs unconsciously, just as we close our eyes when some one aims a blow in our direction. This discovery was made as a result of performing the experiment with a cat from which he had removed the ability to perform conscious actions by an operation on the brain.

SHIPS GO HIGHER.

American ships have been put on wavelengths far enough away from 600 meters to avoid interfering with broadcasters. Now Canadian ship and commercial land stations will transmit on 715 and 850 meters.

SEE SAW AND UP AND DOWN GEORGE STREET

See-sawing up and down George Street I saw Dr. N. H. Sutton, natty as ever in his sartorial appointments and as eager in pursuit of disease germs. He remarked on the care the Provincial Department of Health is taking to have all tourist camps in healthy condition. .....Saw John Anderson, president of the Male Voice Choir. The organization will give its first park programme on Friday night. ....Saw F. M. Dela Fosse, who has started his annual benefaction in the way of giving away six books for six weeks to library patrons going on vacation. .... Saw Frank Sherwood, Radio Inspector, and he isn't being bothered much by radio fans this hot weather. .....Saw young ladies with hats rushing for cover in a light shower and young ladies without hats sauntering on unaware. .....

That "silent" engine came back through Peterboro on Saturday, and proved even better than appeared at first sight. Not only is it comparatively quiet in its movements, but it does take the cinders out of the smoke, as I suggested. A dingbat inside the smokestack mixes the smoke all up with steam, and what escapes is so discouraged it only rises a few feet in the air. So a second cousin to a friend of an engineer tells me. .....

Walking into the museum at the Public Library on a tour of inspection, or in search of inspiration, or merely looking for peace, I was surprised to find the abode of stuffed animals and gruesome relics the trysting place of a pair of very obvious lovers. It is a quiet backwater in a city, but rather a depressing place, one would think, for lovemaking. .....

A LINE-O-TYPE.

This is dedicated to the men who make "Line-O-Type" possible—the men who sit all day fingering the keys and humoring the idiosyncracies of the machine that turns out hundreds of Lines-O-Type in the eight-hour shift. It's a marvellous machine, and because of its intricate nature it requires skilled men to guide it through the complicated motions of producing leaden lines that bring you the news from north and south, east and west, here and everywhere.

Tales have been written and told, moving pictures have been cast around the heroism of the telephone operator at her switchboard; novels have their origin, school-boys pick their heroes, in the ranks of reporters; but the man who puts the stories into type that is the only medium through which they could reach the thousands of readers remains in the background.

And yet it is a picturesque task, this reading vile writing, nursing balky machines, tapping keys, pulling levers, and starting all over again to read worse writing; setting one minute the story of a wedding written in high hope, and in the next the tale of a death, written amid tears of despair; pounding out the story of a nation at war, or tapping the keys that set up the history-making actions of a uniting Church; giving to the world in the same stickful of type stories of heroes and suicides, rich crooks and honst poor men, politics and churches, artists and clowns and kings.

In a conversation between a party of youngsters on Saturday, one was heard to say he had saved up nearly thirty cents to spend at the Exhibition.

Grown-ups may smile at the youthful enthusiast, but his example is worth following. Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has been growing year by year; its patronage last year was the biggest in its history; its exhibits are annualy worth more attention. The directors, who work without compensation except the satisfaction of a good job well done, have set the stage for this year's show. They have been working for it since the day last year's ended—and maybe before. The prize list is being prepared. Accommodation is being arranged for livestock and men. The show is to be the biggest Peterborough has ever seen, and the Exhibition is to cover five days instead of four as formerly.

It's not too early for citizens to make up their minds to see everything offered—or for them to start saving, like our little friend, so that they may take advantage of the trimmings.

This year is to see a bumper attendance

WEDDING BELLS

COMFORT—VARCOE

ROSENEATH, June 15 — The Roseneath Methodist Church was the scene of a very pretty and interesting wedding on Wednesday afternoon when Miss Vera May, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Varcoe was united in marriage to Andrew Comfort of Beamsville, grandson of Mrs. Margaret Comfort of that town.

Long before the appointed hour of the ceremony, three o'clock, the church was filled to its capacity excepting the seats reserved for the guests. These were decorated with white streamers, the altar also was banked with flowering house plants, ferns and white snow balls.

At precisely three o'clock the organist, Mrs. C. W. Varcoe, took her place at the organ followed by the officiating clergyman, Rev. J. V. McNeely, B.A., B.D., of Bridgenorth, and the assisting clergyman, Rev. J. N. Lovelace, pastor of the church. They were immediately followed by the groom and his assistant, Mr. C. W. Varcoe.

While Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus was being played the maid of honor, Miss Reta Varcoe of Cobourg, who was dressed in flame colored silk canton crepe with picture hat of green and the bridesmaid, Miss Linda Fry, becomingly dressed in reseda green satin faced crepe and large picture hat of leghorn with green trimmings took their places at the altar. Immediately preceding the bride came the tiny flower girl, little Gwendolyn Varcoe, niece of the bride, dressed in orchid silk with pure white hat and carrying a dainty basket of orchids and bridal wreath. Lastly came the bride leaning on the arm of her father in her lovely wedding gown of white silk striped tricolette trimmed with silver ribbon and rhinestones white kid shoe and veil of silk embroidered net and wreath of orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was of butterfly roses, while the maid of honor carried pale pink carnations and the bridesmaid deep rose pink carnations.

The ushers were Mr. Fred A. Norris and Mr. Delbert Varcoe. During the signing of the register, Mrs. C. W. Varcoe sang "If Love Rules the World," accompanied by Mrs. (Rev.) McNeely. While the bridal party were retiring the organist played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores

A reception was afterwards held at the home of the bride's parents, North View Farm, when over forty guests were served with a dainty wedding luncheon. The dining room decorations were of pink and white the bridal table being in pink and white color scheme entirely.

The waiters wore large white aprons and caps tied with pink ribbons. The floral table decorations were very beautiful being of white snow balls and colored peonies.

The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of Old Colony silver. His gifts to the attendants were very suitable and were all worn on the occasion. They included: to the bride's attendants pearl set rings; to the organist, a string of pearls; and to the little flower girl a gold locket and chain. The groomsman also received a pearl set tie pin.

During the evening the bride and groom motored to Cobourg leaving the next morning for Belleville and other Eastern points, where they will spend a short honeymoon before leaving for their future home in Beamsville. The bride's travelling suit was of navy gabardine with blue hat and grey trimmings.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

A Chicago paper which issues a so-called Canadian edition with its Sunday issue plays up a story under a six-column streamer on its front page to the effect that Canada is to abolish capital punishment next year.

This will be news to most Canadians.

Doubtless an attempt will be made in Parliament next year to do away with the death sentence on convicted murderers.

It is a hardy annual that takes up an afternoon nearly every session without any danger of being passed.

The people of this country, contrasting the murder record of the United States as compared with that in England or in Canada, are not anxious to get rid of a system that, while it does not prevent killings altogether, at least reduces the number of homicides.

There are more people murdered in Chicago every year than in the whole of the British Isles—and yet the percentage of convicted murderers in the Windy City is trifling compared with the British record in this respect.

Canada is not ready to scrap capital punishment in the face of the fact that in countries where the law is enforced effectually murders are reduced to a minimum, while in other lands where the death penalty is not imposed or where law administration is lax in regard to capital punishment human life is apparently held as a very cheap commodity.

MORE FLEXIBILITY NEEDED.

The technicality by which the people of Peterboro are deprived of an opportunity of hearing the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra in outdoor concerts during the summer indicates the desirability of a more flexible interpretation of trades union regulations.

The situation is that some of the members of the orchestra whose services are necessary are union members, while the majority of the organization are amateur players who are not members of the Musicians' Union.

The local branch of the Musicians' Union has refused to allow the union members of the Symphony to take part in park concerts with non-union players on the ground that playing in such concerts for a civic grant is a competitive "job."

In effect the complaint was doubtless based on the theory that were the Symphony Orchestra not in the field, the Rangers' Band, composed entirely of union musicians, would get a larger share of the civic appropriation for music.

The union's action has not worked out that way.

The Symphony Orchestra concerts have necessarily been cancelled, but the Council has decided to pay the organization the $300 grant originally made, while the Salvation Army Band will fill in the orchestra's dates without any remuneration.

Thus the result is, that while the division of the civic grants remains unchanged, the citizens lose the pleasure of hearing the orchestra play, and the union members of the orchestra will be short the remuneration they doubtless would have received for participating in the park concerts.

THE SUNDAY ISSUE.

The City Council has re-affirmed its decision to keep the dressing-rooms at the civic bathing beaches closed on Sunday, and has also declined to arrange for Sunday band concerts.

So far as the Council is concerned, the matters are settled—for this year.

The Aldermen whose votes closed the dressing-rooms and made the concerts impossible doubtless were actuated by worthy motives and took the stand they did because they believed they were right.

That being the case, the Examiner must commend them upon their steadfast adherence to what they thought was the right attiude, even if it cannot endorse their judgment.

It has been reported to us that some of the Aldermen refused to change their votes on these questions because they resented the Examiner's criticism of their previous decision.

It is to be hoped that this was not the case.

Anything that was said by the Examiner in regard to these questions was said because we believed that the rights and privileges of a large number of citizens who have not so many privileges as some of their neighbors were being infringed upon unfairly.

It was honest criticism, and men in public positions who would refuse to settle a question on its merits because they were nettled by that kind of criticism would be too small in calibre to be entrusted with a position on the executive board of a city of Peterboro's size.

THE EXAMINER'S POSITION.

The Examiner has been taken to task by ex-Ald. F. H. Dobbin for its attitude in regard to Sunday bathing on the ground that it tends "to create in the minds of young people a contempt for the Sunday observance," and he adds: "Please do not repeat the time-honoured arguments as to golf and motoring on Sunday."

But these arguments must of necessity enter into the situation.

The weakness of the Council's action lies in the fact that those who are without motor cars or summer homes are alone affected.

If the observance of the Sabbath is breaking down, the biggest factor by far is Sunday motoring.

If contempt is being created for the old-time idea of Sunday, the Examiner's defence of Sunday bathing is but a trifling contribution toward that end compared to the fact that Sunday is made the occasion by almost every motorist for an outing.

Nobody protests against that condition, yet everybody knows it.

But when those who are unable to get out of the hot city on Sunday ask the privilege of being able to bathe the elected representatives of the people, one at least of whom says it is his own business what he does with his automobile on Sunday and most of whom have cars and doubtless use them on that day, take the position that they cannot as Aldermen officially approve something they as individuals have not hesitation about doing on their own account.

The Examiner respects the convictions of all people who do not believe in Sunday bathing, but must refuse to admit that Sabbath observance is seriously threatened by opening the civic beaches on Sunday afternoons for the benefit of those who do not believe that Sunday swimming is a crime.

Let us repeat: The Examiner does not want to see the American Sunday in this country.

We are a long distance away from that condition, and we will be better off if we stay there.

But this particular question seems so one-sided that we feel justified in protesting.

The verdict in effect says to the worker and his family: "You people stay at home on Sunday and see that the Sabbath is properly observed while the rest of us jump into our motor cars and go to Chemong or Stoney Lake or Cobourg for an outing—and perhaps a swim."

In other words, the fight against the American Sunday is to be left entirely to one class in the community.

So far as the editorial columns are concerned the Examiner does not propose to prolong this controversy any further for the present.

We have tried to make our position plain and have no regrets in the matter.

THE TEST OF PROHIBITION.

Ontario, another Canadian Province, recently went from dry to wet, and it now allows the sale of beer.

People in the United States from all over the country have been flocking into Detroit and crossing the river to get Canadian beer.

There is a continual cry that prohibition has failed in the United States. A review of the facts may be interesting.

Fact one is that prohibition started in this country January 16, 1920.

On January 16, 1919, the thirty-sixth State voted for the eighteenth amendment, which provided for prohibition.

This amendment was passed by over two-thirds of each House of Congress in 1917. That does not prove that it is right, but it does indicate that a majority wanted to try it.

At that time thirty-two States had State prohibition, most of them by popular referendum.

Every State Legislature but two ratified the amendment finally. New Jersey and Connecticut did not.

Some States co-operate with the Federal Government in enforcing prohibition, and others do not.

Although the amendment says that we shall have prohibition, it does not say how it shall be enforced. This was told in the Volstead Act of 1919, which says that any beverage containing over 1-2 per cent. of alcohol is intoxicating and, therefore, prohibited.

The Volstead Act is fanatical in some of its provisions. But there are 38.9 millions of depositors in savings banks now and the year before prohibition there were only 10.6 millions. Roger W. Babson, the expert in figures, says that prohibition is the chief cause.

Prohibition interfered with the pleasures of a great many people and is, therefore, unpopular. It is backed, however, by the conscientious feeling of a great many, and the Government at Washington is sincerely trying to enforce it.

But it is very difficult to get any jury to convict any violator of the law unless it was violated as a business for profit. That shows that juries favor personal liberty.

If prohibition is founded upon right and justice and the care for the majority at the expense of the minority, it will eventually succeed. If it is wrong and improper, the Volstead Act will be repeated and a much more moderate temperance act substituted.

It is now being tried out in the rough sea of experiment.—New York American.

CHEAP MONEY FOR THE FARMER.

In a recent reference to the possibility of assisting the farmer to cheap capital, a description was given of the nature and operation of the Federal Land Bank of the United States, which borrows money at 4 1-2 per cent., and lends it to farmers at 6 1-2 per cent., which includes a sinking fund of one per cent. to wipe out the loan. In other words, the farmer borrows at practically 5 1-2 per cent., After some years' trial, this scheme seems to be working out better than any other proposition that has been tried either in America or Europe to give cheap credit to farmers. It ought to be examined and considered by the Dominion Government.

The money is not Government money. The management is not Government management. Thus no danger exists of political misuse, and no likelihood of waste through red tape or official indifference. Also, the principles laid down for operation reduce to a minimum the chances of loss through bad loans. A farmer, to get credit, must not only have a good property, and satisfy the bank inspector, but he has to satisfy his own neighbors. He can borrow only through a local farmers' association which endorses his note.

In Alberta, a discussion is going on now in which some of the participants are demanding legislation by the Provincial Government to make it easier to borrow money on mortgage. This sort of thing has already been a failure. The Alberta Government started dabbling with mortgage legislation some years ago with the result that many loan companies withdrew from business in Alberta, and the situation became worse than before. Now the U.F.A., the weekly organ of the United Farmers of Alberta, is urging a mass attack on Ottawa to get the Dominion Government to inaugurate a system of rural credits. But if this results in any Government action which will make the matter one of direct Government control, danger and loss will be certain. The strength of the Federal Land Bank in the United States is that in operation it is a private enterprise.

Neither Provincial enterprise nor purely private enterprise is likely to do well. Manitoba's experience with Rural Credit Societies muts be borne in mind. Fifty out of seventy-five of these organizations have failed, and have had to be taken over for administrative purposes by the Manitoba Government. Within the past month six have failed.

The United States plan to afford cheap rural credit rests upon features which no plan Provincial or private can ensure, and no Dominion Government proposition would be safe without, namely, 1. Wide scope of operation; 2. Limitation absolutely to the single line of lending money on farm mortgages; 3. Private operation, safeguarded by Government inspection; 4. Security afforded by character as well as property, local knowledge being called in to help in this regard, and some local responsibility being required.—Ottawa Journal.

A THOUGHT.

THE WITCHCRAFT OF LIFE IS IMAGINATION

The mind, without imagination would be as useless as an observatory without a telescope. The witchcraft of life is imagination.

Almost every day you get tired of the grind and you feel like freeing yourself from all responsibility and fleeing to some quite spot and there resting until tired.

But few of us can step off as we please. Some obligation sets on our shoulders like a yoke. We feel it is necessary to be actually on the job and still we want to be in the country and hear the hum of the bees, listen to the song birds and smell the fraggrance of the beautiful flowers. With these thoughts in our minds, we are all as balky as mules.

Let's see if I can suggest a way to remain on the job and still be with the birds and the flowers.

I. In your imagination you can, if you will, build a beautiful world, and at the same time be considered sane by the sensible.

Some of the most substantial pleasures of actual possession do not equal in experience even that of a chimerical dream. I would rather recall some pleasant past than take chances with the speculative future The trouble is, we are inclined to think all pleasures are either ahead or behind. We fail to enjoy this faculty of imagination.

The dusty, hot Pullman, as it crashes over the rail joints, cannot compare with a quite trip (in imagination) as you sit in a comfortable chair on the lawn.

Now close your eyes and listen to the song of the lark as it rises to the sky. But you say, "This is a crazy thought."

The insane are those who have the brand of imagination that cannot be turned off while in business. The sane are kept so by occasionally taking a trip in the restful coach of imagination.

We wouldal lgoc razy with nothing but grind. Imgination saves us.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, June 15.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.85 1-4.

Sterling cables $4.85 3-4.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 15.—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market on Saturday was quiet, but there was some demand from exporters for oats and barley on the decline of prices at Winnipeg to cover up old contracts and a moderate amount of business was done c.i.f. basis Montreal. The spot market for car lots of oats was easier, and prices were reduced 1 cent per bushel.

The receipts of eggs in Montreal on Saturday were 1,636 cases, as against 1,783 cases for the same day last week, and 2,958 cases for the corresponding day a year ago, while the arrivals for the week ending June 13, were 13,719 cases, as compared with 14,171 cases for the previous week, and 18,455 cases for the same week last year.

According to latest advices received from producing centres the receipts of eggs have fallen off and the quality of those coming forward are being effected by the hot weather. At the large consuming centres fine quality eggs are becoming some what scarce, and prices have ruled much firmer with the prospects of them going higher in the near future. The hot weather has set in much earlier this year, and this will adversely effect the quality of the June production, and consequently cause holders of earlier eggs to be more comfortable and firmer in their views as to the future. Last year the quality of June eggs was exceptionally good. In the opinion of some operators, the danger as to the future in storage eggs, is the high cost, which means that the consumer will have to pay from 45 to 50 cents to show profit on the original cost.

The offerings of car lots of eggs from Winnipeg were fair during the week, but the demand here was somewhat limited on account of the high prices ruling. Extras were quoted at 30 1-4 cents per dozen, firsts at 29 1-4 cents, and a car of seconds was sold at 25 cents f.o.b. shipping points.

The receipts of butter in Montreal for the week ending June 13, 1925, were 18,043 packages, which show an increase of 7,536 packages, as compared with the previous week, and a decrease of 4,369 packages with the same week last year.

Owing to the demand that developed from English importers for creamery butter during the past week and the more pronounced strength in the cheese situation, a very strong feeling prevailed in the local butter market and prices closed with a net gain of 2 1-2 to 3 cents per lb., and they are now much higher than at this period last year. In the early part of the week, the market was quiet, but towards the close there was considerable activity and quite a large volume of business was done for export and domestic account.

The receipts of cheese in Montreal for the week ending June 13, 1925, were 53,045 boxes which show an increase of 13,932 boxes, as compared with the previous week, and a decrease of 3,803 boxes with the same week last year.

The export trade in cheese during the past week was considerably more active than at any previous period this season to date, which was brought about by a steady increasing demand from English importers for supplies and the much stronger cable advices, the prices bid at the close being several shillings higher than the previous week. This added strength to the local situation and also created a keener demand from exporters for supplies, with the result that prices at the boards in the country up to Friday night scored advances amounting to 1 3-16 to 1 7-8 cents per lb., and on spot they were marked up to 1 1-2 to 1 3-4 cents per lb. The indications were at the close of the week that spot prices would be still higher in the near future.

Butter Prices.

MONTREAL, June 15.—At the Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society auction sale held Saturday there were 2,200 packages creamery buttet offered, as compared with 2,525 packages for the previous week, and 3,550 packages for the corresponding day a year ago. The demand was keener than usual and prices were bid up to 1 3-8 cents per lb. over the previous sale, with No. 1 pasteurized creamery selling at 34 1-2 cents per lb, and No. 2 creamery at 32 1-2 cents per lb., which prices were 1 1-2 cents per lb. higher than a year ago. At the country boards held early in the week, prices advanced 1 1-8 to 1 1-4 cents per lb., with sales at 32 3-4 to 32 7-8 cents per lb, f.o.b. shipping points.

Food imports of France are now greater than before the war.

TO PEN WITHOUT GUARD.

DEXTER, Me., June 13. — Ambrose Arnold, charged with selling a pint of moonshine to a constable, walked 42 miles without a guard to the Penobscot County jail at Bangor to serve his sentence. He carried his own commitment papers. When he was sentenced he pleaded with the judge to allow him to make the trip to the jail without a guard.

When you move to the country

perhaps you can continue getting supplies from your regular grocer and butcher. You can probably arrange to do so before you leave town.

Many grocers call up out-of-town prospects in a circle of 30, 40 or 50 miles on an appointed day and hour, and get their orders. Deliveries are made by truck or express.

Where orders are large enough, and given regularly, many grocers and butchers say they can afford to pay the cost of the calls.

The telephone is extensively used for arranging week-end parties, and for the supplies they necessitate

MRS. D. MILLER IS NEW INSTITUTE HEAD

Warsaw Ladies Elected Officers For Year—Representative Present.

WARSAW, June 15. — The annual meeting of Warsaw Woman's Institute was held Wednesday afternoon. A large number of ladies were present, with the president, Mrs. T. Cooper, in the chair. The first business was the election of the new officers. Mrs. Cooper felt she could not possibly be president any longer. In no case was there need for balloting. Officers elected are: President Mrs. David Miller; vice-president, Mrs. Robert Payne; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Selkirk; Directors, Mesdames Thos. Cooper, Wm. Selkirk, Laurence McCracken and James Moore; Auditors, Mesdames Thos. H. Crowe and J. A. Crowe; Librarian, Mrs. John Sargent.

Reports read showed the Institute in good condition, and also that there is a fair amount in the bank. Mrs. O. MacIlvena sang "When Irish Eyes are Smiling." Mrs. Stewart Payne, one of the charter members was warmly welcomed and spoke a few words of greeting.

Department Delegate.

Miss Martin, department delegate, noticed the bird houses; also she noticed a man, where the stage stopped, put on a sack of sugar to be given to a family, whose bread winner was laid by. She spoke partly on side lines of agriculture, urged co-operation with the district representative, also organization with other branches in the district. Women on the farm could help out by poultry or bee keeping, canning the 'boarder' fowl, fruit canning, pickle making. In speaking of the family table, she said sunshine was there, but we were not all good reflectors. She urged kindly conversation and criticism. Perhaps the sum of her hour's talk was that people should be religious, kindly and make the best of all the opportunities for themselves and others. Also, she spoke of food that should be eaten, vegetables being too much neglected.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty home wedding took place Wednesday afternoon, June 10, at four o'clock, when Vera Irene, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Watley was united in the holy bond of matrimony to William Franklin Sidey, by Rev. F. G. Weir. The bridal couple were unattended, and stood under an arch of ferns and white flowers, principally snow balls. The bride wore a peach-colored crepe gown. Her travelling dress was of fawn silk, with hat and coat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Sidey went to Orillia on a motor trip.

Telephones Still Out.

Telephone repairing is not yet completed. On most lines there can be conversation, but there are still two lines on which the regular ring for central does not go in.

Nearly all the corn is in. In some cases it is up and scuffled once. Wednesday's rain was needed after the intense, baking heat of the previous days. There are some splendid looking fields of clover, and a few that look pretty well killed out. Wheat, generally, looks well and pasture is good, except that a good many speak of more than usual of white fungus on the grass. Just now, appearances point toward an abundance of small fruit, and of apples on well pruned trees.

The regular monthly meeting of U.F.O. was postponed.

Miss Harrison is visiting her sister, Mrs. Richard Batten.

Miss Graham is visiting her aunt, Mrs. R. W. Payne.

Mrs. Stewart Payne and Miss Payne left Warsaw Wednesday evening.

Miss Jean Bowen returned home on Monday.

Mr. A. F. Choate has gone to the lake for the summer.

A.B. BY RADIO

Clifford Lideen of Burlington, Ia., is the first radio graduate of the University of Iowa. Crippled by illness when a freshman, he stayed at home and took instruction by radio. He lay in bed the other day, heard his final examination questions come over the air, and wrote the answers.

On the wall of my camp, there is tacked a picture to which I took a fancy several years ago. It was the front cover picture on a well-known weekly magazine. At the time it was published, I was away in the far north woods, but a bird lover sent it to me, with a pencil note that he knew I would miss seeing it and he took the liberty of sending me one. It was a picture of a handsome young farmer, with some little meadow larks in his hand and the mother bird looking on. The farmer looks very sorry that he has distributed the birds but to look at his face is to know that he loves them and it is easy to see that the mother bird knows he will not harm her young.

Everyone who has seen this picture on my wall, has asked me about it and, of course, I can only tell them what is very clearly told in the picture. The farmer was probably cutting his hay when he ran them down and might have killed them but fortunately he did not.

Nearly everyone who sees this picture, wants to know more, and, as there is no more in the picture, I just tell them this.

I know a farmer who paid little or no attention to birds, until one June day, he was cutting his hay with a machine. He knew that meadowlarks made their nests in the fields, hidden by the grass, but, like many other men, he was busy and not thinking about birds.

He had cut over a quarter of the field, when two meadowlarks flew about his head, making such an ado that he could not properly guide the horses. He got down and went ahead, and the farther he went on foot, the more excited the birds became. So he went back to the barn and got a rope and another man, and they took opposite ends of the rope and dragged the field and finally located two meadowlark nests. They then marked the places with stakes, so that they would not run over the nests. What happened next? Nature Lore will tell you to-morrow.

FIGHTING MOSQUITOES

Danger and Unpleasantness in Skeeter Bite—Old-Fashioned Remedy.

Not only is there danger of communicable diseases from the bite of mosquitoes, but there is quite a bit of unpleasantness connected with the process.

Mosquitoes breed in dead, still water. Often this water is in empty tin cans in the back yard, a rain barrel, or tile on the roof of the house.

Tin cans should have a hole punctured in their bottoms before they are thrown away so they will not hold water.

Gutters, spouting and tile roofing should be examined for stagnant water.

Mosquitoes do not travel far from their breeding places. However, they are driven by the winds, and are carried on persons sometimes for quite a distance.

Many solutions prepared to kill grown mosquitoes may be purchased at drug stores.

A good old-fashioned preventive against their crawling through the screens is a woollen rag, soaked in kerosene, and hung in the centre of the screen window or door.

ASCOT MEETING HELD THIS WEEK

King and Queen Will Attend Famour Race Track in State.

FASHION SHOW.

LONDON, June 15.—(Canadian Press Cable.)— Fine weather or not, the famous race meeting on Ascot Downs, near Windsor, this week, promises to outshine all its predecessors in social brilliance. The King and Queen, who are in residence at Windsor Castle, will make their customary journey along the courhe in the state carriage, alighting from a motor car and changing into the state carriage at a point where the road from the castle adjoins the race course.

Practically everybody who shines in the high social life of London will be present at the races.

Admission to the royal enclosure is granted only by the lord chamberlain who naturally limits this privilege. A writer in the Outlook protests against the superhuman task imposed on the lord chamberlain by the "swarm of vulgar, newrich people whose claims now have to be considered." He also asks why the rule that no divorced person of either sex should receive a voucher of admission to the royal enclosure is now to be relaxed in favor of certain people. "In any case it is a curious rule in the present age," the writer adds, and says he is "somewhat archaic in the post-war conditions of morals. The old brigade is dropping out and each year brings a fresh crowd of what may be called society demobbed."

The Court dressmakers have been busy preparing for the great Ascot Downs event for months past. Flashing shades of fuchsia and petunia, homely but none the less bright tints of apple foliage and lilac blossoms, the various pink hues of sweet peas—this is the impression that the fashion salons give at present.

Flowers smothering the crowns of hats and falling gracefully from shoulders and waists will heighten the effect of a flower bud came to life. Many alight debutantes are choosing gowns of chiffon handpainted with garlands of flowers from neck to hem.

Lace will be very much in evidence again this year, following the lead of the queen and other members of the Royal family in popularizing the Nottingham product. In many of the Ascot models shown the lace is dyed the same color as the gown of georgette it enhances.

The complete rout of the small hat in favor of hats of Gainsborough style and dimensions is the principal innovation of fashion which Ascot is expected to bring, though there are many murmurings in both Paris and London that the more advanced creators are sending models portraying a new line with a more defined and "natural" waist and considerably wider and longer skirts.

LONDON, June 15. — Canadian Press. — A Shanghai despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, says that numerous disquieting reports are reaching Shanghai alleging widespread anti-foreign risings throughout the country, even at small places.

The note is declared to indicate a yielding by the government to the Bolshevik vernacular press and student extremists who are demanding that China deal with Great Britain alone.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burto

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful Flapper marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . . but no work or children.

She refuses pointblank to do her own housework, and hires a maid. But Dick has to let the maid go, because he can't afford to pay her wages. Gloria has swamped him with debts for her clothes and a new automobile.

She becomes infatuated with STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor. She lends him money, and finally, when he leaves town to go to New York, Gloria follows him. He spurns her, telling her he has just married a Russian actress. Then Gloria tries to land a job as a chorus girl and fails. Discouraged, she comes home to Dick.

He takes her back, but not as his wife. One night Gloria leaves him to work late at the office with SUSAN BRIGGS, his secretary. While Gloria is at home alone, the house is robbed. Dick doesn't get home until almost morning. Gloria wonders if he was with Miss Briggs all that time. But next morning she learns that he was at the house of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, who had killed himself because of the love affair that existd between his wife MAY and JIM CAREWE.

Gloria goes to Dick's office to tell him about the robbery, and to make one last attempt to win him again.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

. . . . Dick was the quiet kind of man, too! The kind of man who bottled up everything within himself! . . . . Gloria wondered if he had brooded about her, as Dr. John must have brooded over May for long months. The thought almost took her breath away.

She would go to Dick now, and beg him to let bygones be bygons! She would make him love her again, as he had loved her in the early days of their life together . . . the days when he trembled if he touched her. He had been under her spell once. He would be under it again.

But the sight of Miss Briggs sitting at her desk in Dick's office shook Gloria's confidence in herself, a little. Miss Briggs was actually pretty today! . . . Her cheeks were flushed, and her eyes were filled with sparkle.

"Well," Gloria said, "You don't look as if you'd worked half the night!"

"I didn't," Miss Briggs answered demurely. "Mr. Gregory sent me home at ten in a cab. He's very considerate."

Hmm! Like ice he was considerate, thought Gloria . . . He could send his secretary home in a cab, but his wife could walk, for all he cared! . . . But, perhaps he thought that she had driven downtown in her little car, last night. He probably did think that.

Gloria opened the door of Dick's private office and looked in. It was empty.

"Where is Mr. Gregory?" she asked, turning to Miss Briggs.

"Mr. Gregory's gone out to lunch," Miss Briggs told Gloria. "But he ought to be back soon. If you'd like to, you you can sit down and wait for him. You won't distrub me at all."

She went on with her typewriting. Gloria glared down at her smooth head, bent over the machine.

. . . She guessed she had a perfect right to sit in her own husband's office without waiting for Miss Briggs' permission! And if she wanted to disturb Miss Briggs, she could do that, too. Watch her!

She took off her hat and tossed it down carelessly on Miss Briggs' desk. It bounded off onto the floor.

Gloria picked it up and handed it to Miss Briggs.

"Just brush that thing off," she said impudently.

Miss Briggs looked up at her in surprise. Then she flushed deeply. But without a word she wiped the dust from Gloria's hat with a hand-towel that she took from a drawer of her desk.

Then she hung it on the rack behind her.

"Look up our burglary insurance, while you're on your feet, Miss Briggs!" Gloria snapped.

From under her thick lashes, she watched Miss Briggs go to the files on the other side of the room, and look for the insurance papers.

"Here they are, Mrs. Gregory," she said quietly, as she handed them to Gloria.

"And now call up the police and tell them we had a robbery at our house last night," Gloria directed her. "Tell them all our table silver was stolen. It was worth about $200 . . . in case they ask you."

Miss Briggs stood looking down at her for a moment.

"Wouldn't it be better if you talked to them yourself, Mrs. Gregory?" she asked in a low tone. "They're sure to ask a lot of questions that I won't know how to answer."

Gloria met her look, coldly. "Will you please do what I told you to?" she drawled.

Miss Briggs bit her lips. It was on the end of her tongue to tell Gloria that not she, but Dick, was her employer. But, because of Dick, she said nothing.

She picked up the phone and called the police. They asked a dozen questions and at last Gloria took the instrument from her, and answered them.

"I'll send a man out right away to look things over," the deep, masculine voice at the other end of the wire told her. "There have been a lot of burglaries in that neighborhood lately."

As Gloria turned away from the telephone, it suddenly occurred to her that there was no one at the house to admit the man from police headquarters when he go there.

"Oh, well," she thought carelessly, "what's the diff? He can come back later." She didn't want him going through her house, now, anyway. The beds were still unmade, although it was afternoon, and the dirty dishes from yesterday's lunch were still piled in the greasy sink.

For some reason or other, an old English poem that her mother used to tell her when she was lazy, flashed into Gloria's brain. It told about a collier's sloppy wife, who loved to gossip and hated to work. One evening he was killed at the mine. And when they brought his body home "the wife ran up to make the bed," the poem said with brutal frankness. Oh, well, after she had seen Dick and fixed things up with him, she'd go home and straighten the house, Gloria promised herself. She would honestly try to be a better housewife from now on . . . .

"Won't you have a lettuce sandwich?" Miss Briggs' low voice broke in upon her thoughts.

She had opened a package of sandwiches, and a thermos bottle stood on her desk. From it came a thin curl of steam and the fragrant smell of coffee.

"I always bring my lunch from home," Mrs. Gregory. "I find I can't afford to eat around at restaurants. . . . Will you have some coffee with me?"

"No, thanks," Gloria answered coldly. She was very hungry but she couldn't very well eat salt with Miss Briggs when she hated her as she did.

And she did hate her! She hated Miss Briggs' lovely voice and the dainty way she ate . . . everything about her.

Gloria watched her slyly. There really was something attractive about the woman. But, of course, she wasn't pretty the way Gloria was!

She curled herself up like a kitten in a big chair in the sunny corner by the windows. She took out her vanity case and looked at herself in its little mirror. Then her eyes traveled to Miss Briggs' face.

No—Susan Briggs at her best couldn't hold a candle to her when it came to looks. Her eyes were lovely, but there fine crow's feet at the corners of them. And there were shadows at the corners of Miss Briggs' mouth that would be deep, carved wrinkles in a few years.

. . . . Was it possible that Dick was in love with this plain little woman who was at least eight years older than his beautiful young wife?

But perhaps he had tired of her just because she was his wife, Gloria thought gloomily. She had heard May Seymour often say in her flip, bitter way that no man loved his wife after the first flush of married life was gone . . . .

May Seymour! She of all women, had least reason for saying a thing like that! She must have known all along how desperately Dr. John cared for her.

A folded newspaper lay on the sill beside Gloria. She picked it up. It was full of the ugly details of Dr. John's suicide. On the first page was a large photograph of May in a plumed picture hat.

Poor May! She was fair game for any gossip today! Everybody's tongue was wagging about her.

What a life she was facing. For years and years and years people would remember that her husband had killed himself because of her love affair with another man . . . the story would hound her to the very day she died.

No matter where she went, the tlae would follow her. No matter in what remote corner of the world she tried to hide, there would always be some one who knew all about her. For there always was somebody. . . . People never let you forget your shame.

. . . . Gloria wondered if Jim Carewe was worth the misery that was waiting for May. Was any man . . . any happiness . . . worth such misery?

And what would Jim do now? Would he marry May when the scandal had quieted down? . . Gloria doubted it. Jim wasn't the "marrying kind."

And suppose he did marry May?

Wouldn't the memory of Dr. John always be between them, like a ghostly hand keeping them apart? Of course it would . . . .

He hadn't been able to keep his wife away from Jim Carewe, while he lived. but now that he was dead, it would probably be easy enough.

"Ugh!" Gloria shivered at the thought of the power the dead can have over the living.

Miss Briggs looked up at her. She had cleared away her lunch, and was reading a thin little book.

"I suppose," she said to Gloria "you've been reading that piece in the paper about Dr. Seymour's suicide. Terrible thing, wasn't it?"

"Horrible," Gloria agreed. It was a relief to talk about it to anyone. "Why do you suppose he did such a thing . . . a successful doctor, still young, and with everything to live for?"

Miss Briggs let her hands fall idly on her desk. They were lovely, sensitive hands . . . her one vanity.

"Perhaps he didn't have everything," she said very quietly. "Nobody has everything he wants in this world, nobody! And besides, I've heard that Dr. Seymour and his wife didn't get along very well together."

Now who had told her that . . . . Dick? Oh, no, Mrs. O'Hara of course! She was Miss Briggs' sister as well as Dr. John's "boss" nurse. She had probably known all about his troubles, Gloria said to herself. These nurses, they found out everybody's business . . .

"Miss Briggs," Gloria asked abruptly. "Did you ever know why Dr. Seymour and his wife didn't get along?"

Miss Briggs opened her candid eyes. "Why, yes," she answered. "There was some sort of love affair between Mrs. Seymour and a Mr. Carewe, wasn't there? I've heard there was."

Gloria shook her head.

"It wasn't a love affair," she said. "Not what I'd call a love affair, at least. May Seymour is my best friend, and I happen to know she wasn't in love with Jim Carewe. She used to tear around with him because she was lonely. Dr. John was never at home, and May didn't have many women friends. . . . She called Jim her 'little boy friend' and that's all he was to her. I know!"

* * *

Miss Briggs looked at her with indignant, angry eyes.

"Oh, that's beastly!" she cried.

"What's beastly? What do you mean?" asked Gloria, bewildered. She didn't know what Miss Briggs was talking about.

"Oh, I mean that you could almost forgive a woman for a great big love affair that had swept her off her feet!" Susan Briggs said. "But when you think of a fine man like Dr. John Seymour killing himself over a 'parlor sheik' who happened to amuse his wife . . Oh, it's sickening! And what a hideous waste! . . . For Dr. John was needed. He was of some use in the world. . . ."

"Oh, May's not so bad!" Gloria said. She wanted to defend May, but she didn't see just what defense of her there was.

"She's just made a botch of things . . ." she finished, weakly. "I guess I won't wait any longer for Dick. I ought to go home."

She put on her hat before the mirror, fluffed out the dark reddish gold curls around her ears.

As she passed Miss Briggs' desk her eye was caught by the bright cover of the book she was reading. It was Robert Louis Stevenson's "Vailima Letters."

"Did Dick lend you that?" Gloria asked sharply. She didn't much care for the idea that Dick let Sue Briggs take his precious books.

"No, I bought it," Miss Briggs answered, blushing furiously. "I was interested in it because . . . ."She stopped.

"Because Dick likes Stevenson? Is that what you're trying to say?" Gloria asked, cruelly. She saw in a flash that she had hit upon the truth. For Miss Briggs broke down.

She put her handkerchief up to her face and sobbed, tearless.

Gloria just barely touched her hand with one of hers.

"There's nothing for you to cry about," she said. "I've known for a long time that you're in love with Dick."

Miss Briggs stood up then, and faced Gloria.

The flush in her cheeks had gone, and her eyes were the old blue of a Polar lake.

"What right have you to say such a thing to me?" she asked.

Gloria's laugh was taunting. "Well, it's the truth, isn't it? You are in love with Dick, aren't you?" she said.

She could see Miss Briggs' breast heave under her plain blue dress.

"What if I am?" she asked. "I'd never let him know it! It wouldn't hurt anyone . . . ."

She seemed to be lost in thought for a moment. Then her eyes flashed with spirit.

"I am in love with him—you may as well know it!" she cried. "I do care about him!"

Gloria wouldn't have believed that such a tone could have been wrung from the sedate and proper Miss Briggs. It was vibrant with tenderness.

"I do love him!" she said, again, as if it gave her a certain fierce satisfaction to say the words she had been waiting to say for years.

Gloria blinked with surprise. She couldn't imagine Miss Briggs telling her secret to the wife of the very man she loved. There must be something back of it . . . . Perhaps Dick loved her. And she knew it, and didn't care who else knew it!

"And Dick?—Is he in love with you?" Gloria asked, "Does he make love to you down here in this office when you're alone with him all day?"

A queer expression of disgust went over Miss Briggs' white face.

"Oh, no!" she said. "I wouldn't care for him if he were that kind of a man! . . . I'm just the woman who works for him. And I'm contented to be just that—for him."

The whole spirit of her love for him was in the words. They filled Gloria with pity for her.

"Miss Briggs," she said. "I'm truly sorry for you . . . You'd rather hoped to marry Dick all those years when he was a bachelor, don't you?"

Miss Briggs smiled a wry little smile that twisted her mouth up at one corner.

"I suppose I had, without quite knowing it," she said. "Oh, let's stop talking about it . . . you'll never speak of it to Mr. Gregory, will you? Please. I'd die of shame!"

"We—el, I'm not so sure you ought to go on working for him, feeling about him as you do," Gloria answered. "Do you think you should, yourself?"

Miss Briggs looked at her long and gravely. She could scarcely believe that, in her moment of weakness, she had told Dick's wife that she loved him.

"I've felt that way for a good many years . . . and it hasn't done anyone any harm," she said, miserably.

CRAZY WITH THE HEAT

YOUR GARDEN

PLANTING ANNUALS.

When planting annuals from the flats or boxes they are usually grown in, as much soil as possible should be removed with the roots so as to cause the least disturbance. If water is not readily available choose a day right after a rain and plant as soon as the ground can be worked. Should water be available they can be transplanted regardless of the weather if, after the process, they are given a thorough watering. In very hot weather, shading with newspapers will help.

The ground should have been worked to a good tilth in preparation, and the plants given a watering a short time before. To hold the soil in the actual planting operation the plant should be firmly set by strong pressure of the thumbs and middle joints of the first fingers.

Try planting in irregular groups of four to five to nine or a dozen plants spaced at irregular intervals. A much better effect will be obtained than by planting in straight lines or scattering single specimens. This should not be overdone, however, or monotony of another kind may result. The less stiff and formal flowers, as the Annual Gaillardias, Phlox, Forget-me-nots, Marigolds. Salpiglossus and others lend themselves very well to this treatment.

If you are using Salvias in a conspicuous place, remember that they do not bloom until very late in the season, and endeavor to provide a foreground or background that will supply some color in the interval.

"THE MOST BEAUTIFUL VALE IN THE WORLD."

That is what Adam Mickievitch called the Lithuanian country about Kaunas, for the groves, hillsides and ravines about this ancient Lithuanian city served as the background for his poetry as well as for others. This entire country is fast being etched on to the tourist map of Europe and thousands who used to make Germany and Danzig the goal of their Teutonic pilgrimages, now go up the Baltic to Lithuania, which used to be "off the beaten track," but is now well traveled by the hundreds of tourists who want to acquaint themselves with the most ancient people of Europe, who trace their history back 2,000 years before the Christian era. They were not Christianized unt il the 14th century an many quaint old customs of pre-Christian days are still found among them.

SHAKESPEARE'S 1925 BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A large number of Americans were here at Stratford-on-Avon for Shakespeare's four week birthday party this year and the usual festival is now in progress to the bard's honor. Under the direction of W. Bridges Adam the plays given included "King John," "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," "As You Like It," "Macbeth" and Sheridan's comedy, "The Critic." Stratford truly deserves the 50,000 visitors who come here every year, to the little town, for the Elizabethan atmosphere is kept about its houses, inns and meadows, as few other places in England. I could not help but note that modern travelers do not indulge in the gentle vandalism of scratching their names on Shakespeare's house as they used to in the days when Browning and Thackeray left their's there and Sir Walter Scott and Carlyle scratched them on the windows.

FORECAST END OF STEAM POWER ERA

Engineers Expect General Adoption of Motors on Land and Sea.

Developments in transportation during the last few months all seem to point to the ultimate subordination or elimination of steam as a direct source of power for the movement of ships and trains.

Significant of this trend was the recent arrival from Great Britain of the motorship Aorangi at the Panama Canal, and later at San Francisco, and the keen interest of American engineers in this beautiful 23,000 ton passenger liner driven by internal combustion engines. Likewise the activity of the U.S.Shipping Board in installing Diesel engines in ships that formerly were equipped with steam, has created widespread comment.

Among other signs that have led engineers to ask seriously whether day of steam is passing is the announcement of Samuel M. Vauclain, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, that his company is experimenting with a locomotive driven by electricity generated by a Diesel engine.

Similarly the Pennsylvania Railway recently announced that contracts have been let to electrify the main line of that road between New York and Washington. The New York, New Haven and Hartford Rail road also has announced that more of its branch lines are being electrified.

What is happening in the field of transportation? asks Hawthorne Daniel in Popular Scienc Monthly. What tendencies are apparent just now and will they effect steam?

Modern transportation came into existence as a result of the discovery of the power of steam. Twenty years ago steam had just about completed the task of running sailing ships from the seas; and ashore, except for street railways and a few automobiles, steam was practically supreme as a source of power for transportation.

Recently, however, Lloyd's — the great marine insurance organization that compiles most of the world's nautical date—has announced that one-third of the total ship tonnage now being built will be motor-driven. And reports come from railroads all over the world that electricity and other sources of power are making serious inroads against tseam.

Motor ships cost more to build a ton than steamships, but their cargo capacity is greater, so consequently is their earning power, and they are less expensive to operate. One freighter, converted from an oil burning steamer into a Diesel-driven ship by United American lines, showed operating economies of $149,902 a year, of which $67,148 was represented by saving in fuel.

Coal-burning locomotives long have been recognized as wasteful machines —they burn coal while standing idle, they waste coal when under way.

More and more electric locomotives are taking the place of steam—in this country, in India, in Switzerland, in Spain; virtually all over the world. For where electricity is used savings arise from diminished fuel consumption, from the elimination of water and coal stations with their attendants, and from greatly reduced repairs n motive power.

HIGH GRADE PAPER MADE FROM STRAW

French Inventor's Process May Defer Threatened Wood Pulp Famine.

From Europe recently came the announcement that science had produced an effective process by which the waste straw of food crops, such as wheat, barley, oats, corn and rice, may be utilized as a substitute for the wood pulp from which 90 per cent of the world's paper now is made.

The process has been developed by M. De Vains, a French inventor, and depends upon a method of eliminating the hard brittleness which previously had made impossible the use of straw fibers in the manufacture of printing and writing papers. The De Vains process has been installed successfully in a dozen paper and pulp mills in European countries and plans are now under way to establish a large experimental plant in Canada, where the great wheat crop will supply an abundance of raw material, writes Newton Burke, in Popular Science Monthly.

Canadian wheat straw, it is announced, already has been employed effectively in the manufacture of paper by means of the new process in Europe. The paper produced in the mills where the process has been installed is said to be excellent in quality, a special bleaching method producing a pure white paper when desired.

Paper from straw, of course, is nothing new. Straw paper was made in the United States a half-century ago; also in Europe. Straw is used also in the manufacture of strawboard and several types of cheap wrapping paper. But paper made from straw fibers, matching in quality the paper manufactured from wood pulp, is a distinct novelty, and a successful process that makes it possible is bound to prove of tremendous significance, not only to the paper industry, but from an economic standpoint.

Foresters and economists long have maintained that, despite efforts to replant woodlands of the world, the forests eventually will prove insufficient to supply the demand for wood pulp for paper manufacture. Just how terrific is this demand is shown by the fact that the United States alone requires 7,500,000 tons of paper every year. Fifty years ago this country's annual consumption of paper was only 500,000 tons; in another 50 years, it is predicted, it will be 20,000,000.

Ten years ago De Vains attacked the problem of utilising crop straw, generally burned as waste, in paper manufacture, and advices from Europe indicate that he has solved the problem.

TRIBUTE PAID TO DEAD SHIP OWNER

London Observer Says Petersen Was a Most Valuable Citizen.

LONDON, June 15 (Canadian Press Cable).—The London Observer, commenting on the sudden death in Ottawa of Sir William Petersen, renowned British shipowner, says he was one of the most remarkable men and one of the most valuable citizens whom England acquired from a foreign country. Danish, with a strain of Irish blood, he never forgot his pride in the land of his birth, and looked the Northman—the man of ships and sea, the paper adds.

EVERY DAY HOLY.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Every day in the week is observed as a Holy Day in some part of the world. The Greeks observe Monday; the Persians, Tuesday; the Assyrians, Wednesday; the Egyptians, Thursday; the Mohammedans, Friday, and the Jews, Saturday.

Practical Love

The most practical way that any man can show his love for his wife and family is by protecting their comfort—even in the event of his death.

For the average man there is only one sure method of doing this—Life Insurance.

Take the case of George Haddock for example. Twenty-eight years of age and married, George Haddock insured his life with a North American 20 Payment Life Policy.

For the next twenty years he paid the moderate annual premiums cheerfully and willingly —each payment a reminder of a trust being well discharged.

At forty-eight, he congratulated himself on his foresight in choosing this plan.

No more payments—and a future serene and secure.

The 20 Payment Life is an ideal plan for the young salaried man. Its premiums are low, yet payments are completed in twenty years.

We will be glad to furnish full particulars about this form of policy.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

MANY WAYS OF RIDDING FIELDS OF QUACK GRASS

Smothering Has Proved the Best Way of Dealing With Pest.

PREVENT GROWTH.

Cover Leaves and Prevent Roots From Obtaining Sustenance.

Numerous experiments have been carried on to devise means for the destruction of quack grass, one of the meanest and most persistently spreading pests that can get into a field and one that is causing no end of trouble in certain sections. Smothering it seems to be the most efficacious way of getting rid of it, but more easily said than done.

The principle involved is that by preventing leaf growth the root growth is deprived of needed sustenance elaborated by the leaves and will be checked and ultimately die. Small areas have been conquered by spreading tar paper over the quack grass plot after cutting it short and anchoring the paper by soil, bricks, or stones, overlapping the widths by four inches and leaving it in place for the greater part of the growing season. This is well enough for small areas, but impractical for large ones.

South Dakota has devised a crop rotation which is proving excellent in suppressing the quack without loss of crop. Briefly it is this: The land was fall plowed, disked and harrowed. In the spring a heavy seeding of buckwheat was made as a smother crop. The land was again plowed and cultivated in the spring and put into corn. The following crop after plowing, was 60-day oats, sown immediately after preparations. The oats were cut short with another fall and spring plowing and corn, carefully cultivated, was the next crop. Under these ministrations the quack grass seemed to disappear rapidly and no crops were sacrificed.

Another method was the employment of a deep tillage machine, plowing to a depth of eight to ten inches and double disking and harrowing weekly all summer and fall. This eradicated the quack grass with the exception of a few scattering spears.

Careful cleaning of seeds by the seed house is eliminating the danger of introducing this weed into fields, formerly one of the chief means of spreading it. Now with the up-to-date cleaning and recleaning processes, quack grass is almost completely eliminated from high-grade farm seeds.

ALSIKE COVERS LARGER AREAS

More Seeds to Pound So Crop Grown is Heavier.

MORE BEING GROWN

There are two and a half times as many seeds in a pound of alsike as there are in a pound of red clover. There fore, one pound of alike slover seed means 16 seeds and one pound of red clover means 6 seeds per square foot on one acre uniformly seeded, according to scientific rates. This quota presupposes that the seed is reliable and tested for germination. In other words, as there are two and ahalf times as many seeds in a pound of alsike as red clover, more than twice the weight of red clover will be needed to secure an even portion of the two clovers.

A larger quantity of alsike is now being used than a few years ago. A bulletin, in commenting on the two clovers, says: "This may be due to its withstanding freezing, wet and acid soils better than red clover. Alsike makes a finer hay than red, but does not yield quite as well, neither does it produce as large a second crop. It frequently lives for several years, while red clover ... ever, it cannot be counted upon for more than two seasons. Alsike should be used exclusively on soils which are inclined to be wet, but a mixture of red and alsike is best where both wet and dry conditions exist, as they do in the average field."

Red clover stands drought better than alsike, as it makes longer roots and is better adapted to soils which may be affected by drought.

Now that close inspection and watchfulness by seed dealers are protecting farmers from the influx of clover seed from southern European countries which is not hardy and will not withstand our winters, clover can be planted with much more confidence and it is an absolute necessity for the upkeep of the farm.

A ton of clover hay will represent about 40 pounds of nitrogen, as much as 1,250 pounds of fertilizer containing 4 per cent ammonia. Its fertilizing value, discovered some 40 years ago, was one of the most important of agricultural discoveries.

SWINE RAISING IN ENGLAND

Some interesting details are given concerning the past year's operations on an English pig farm, owned by J. J. Calder. Large Black sows, which are kept in the open air, are crossed with a large white boar. The total number of young pigs from this one boar was 1,059, and as the average number of sows in stock was 65.8, this indicates a little over 15 young pigs per sow per annum. Of the youngsters 39 died before weaning and 99 after weaning, chiefly when between 6 and 16 weeks old, as a result of the very wet winter. There were 862 pigs sold, which brought in a sum of £7,068 12s, 5d.

Heavy feeding and no exercise on Sunday or rainy days are bad for horses.

THEY GOT RICH QUICKLY.

Thomas Hennessy, left, and Harry D. Hibbs, are held in jail in Los Angeles, charged with operating a "get-rich-quick" scheme. They are said to have swindled hundreds of persons of nearly $500,000. They told their victims they were planning to merge several large railroads of the west and that $15 would be returned for every $1 invested.

PEDIGREE SEED CORN IS BETTER

Will Give Higher Yield to Acre — Many Varieties Are Tested.

SOME ADAPTED.

Selection of seed corn to give the surest ripening crops, ripening in time to be safe from frost and give the heaviest yield per acre is an ever-present problem for the farmer. Seed houses and experiment stations are ever on the alert to help him out and it is now recognized that certain varieties of corn are best suited for certain sections and every effort is made to adapt seed corn to sections where it will do best and most certain to harden in time to escape giving the farmer a crop of "soft" corn for his season's toil. Last year taught many bitter lessons along this line and there has been more thorough study of the corn problem this season than ever before.

It is useless to endeavor to enumerate the varieties of corn developed and tested in individual places, for they are an enormous list when compiled, many of them closely similar and differing only in adaption to the section in which they have grown. Corn successful in one place may not ripen in time for another farmer.

Farm Reports

The crop report for the past week is practically the weather report. The warm weather has been general throughout the Province but unfortunately the rainfall has not been so uniform.

There is a fairly large important section of Western Ontario, extending from the south end of Peel, through Halton, Wentworth, Brant, Norfolk, Oxford, Essex and Kent where there has been very little rain for several weeks past and the crop outlook is not good as a consequence. Grains, hay and clover are all short. In some instances, Fall wheat is beginning to head out with short straw and with a prospect of small grains. Only a real good rain, very soon, could materially alter the situation. This would, of course, improve the out-... possible ... bumper crops.

In other sections of the Province there is a better picture. In the more northerly Counties of Bruce and Simcoe, and in practically all the Counties of Eastern Ontario, there have been frequent rains and the abundant moisture and warm weather have brought on the crops to a very high degree. The outlook is remarkably good and the prevailing feeling correspondingly optimistic. This applies to all kinds of crops including hay and pasture.

This is also largely true of Northern Ontario, although the season there is slightly later.

As to the fruit crop, the outlook is somewhat mixed. In the large fruit-growing areas of Western Ontario, the drought is having a serious effect. Strawberries are beginning to ripen but the size will be small and the yield limited unless there are good rains very soon. Tree fruits have not yet been so seriously affected. The showing of apple blossoms was specially favourable of an abundant crop but there is the "June drop" and the remote possibility of a late frost still to be taken into consideration. One thing is certain. The growers have devoted special attention to spraying and this has been an exceptionally favourable year for spraying, so that the crop should be of good quality.

Weather conditions, especially pasture conditions, are having their effect on live stock. In Eastern Ontario, milk production has been very considerably increased as the pastures have improved. The price of cheese is holding around 17¾c. The price of hogs at country points range from $11.50 to $13.25 and little pigs are scarce and are bringing as high as $12.00 to $15.00 per pair. There is a strengthening of prices for purebred stock as illustrated by a recent sale in Brant, where pure-bred Holstein cows brought from $225 to $300 each.

SAY BEANS ARE REPLACING CORN

Grown in Many Places as Hog Food or For Ensilage.

ARE LEGUMES.

Much interest is being manifested in soy beans, comparatively new as a farm-crop in many sections, although a number have experimented rather extensively with it. Adverse reports have been traced to poor seed, which was not secured from reliable sources and was not properly tested before it was sold to the farmers. There was also trouble because the type of seed was not adapted to the sections in which it was sown, which a reliable seed house could have advised.

The soy bean, like clover and alfalfa, is a legume, a member of the great family which includes the peas and beans. It is an annual plant of upright, bushlike growth, varying according to the type and variety from 3½ to 4 feet in height. It is a good drought resister and does well on good corn soil, and can be grown on light sandy and clayey soils as well.

In the west they are grown for hogging off and the experiment stations speak highly of this crop for the purpose. The beans, says a station bulletin, balance the ration for sheep or hogs by supplying the protein food to supplement the corn.

Being a legume and furnished with the nitrogen-forming bacteria in its roots, the soy bean is also of value as a soi builder in the same manner as clover and alfalfa although, experiment station reports say, in less degree.

They are also grown as hay and for silage. If the soy bean ever replaces any of the standard crops, station commentators believe it will be oats, the least profitable of the grain crops. However, as soy beans are a cultivated crop and demand attention at the same time as corn, this does not seem likely in the immediate future and the west will not devote much attention them as a grain crop, but use them for live stock, it is now estimated.

ROSEN RYE AS GREEN MANURE

Use is Becoming Common in Many Small Beds and Gardens.

FROM RUSSIA

With the scarcity of stable manure, home gardeners are employing a scheme practiced by the up-to-date farmer for years, that of green manuring their garden plots. While the planting of clover to be turned under is not practical for the small home garden because a season of vegetables or flowers would have to be sacrificed, the use of Rosen rye is becoming common in small beds and gardens. The eyr is sowed early in the fall and turned under the following spring before the vegatables or flowers are put in. This has been found to be a very practical and easy method of keeping the small garden in good tilth and furnishing the needed humus.

This rye was introduced by a Russian student, J. A. Rosen, at the Michigan Agricultural college in 1909, Mr. Rosen having been graduated in 1908 and sending the sample from Russia. Not knowing its Russian name it was called Rosen rye and as such has spread over the country and is finding popular use in home gardens as a fertilizer crop, as well as a grain crop. It spread rapidly from Michigan to neighboring states and under the stress of wartime conditions, when the best seed was demanded, 250,000 acres were own in Michigan in 1917 and in 1918 the acreage was doubled to 500,000.

Rye is particularly adaptable to light sandy soil, says an experiment station bulletin, and because of washing and leaching such soils should not be permitted to go through the fall and winter without growing a crop of some kind. Rye can be used to advantage on hundreds of farms to follow crops of corn and beans.

The time to plant for gardeners is the last of September or early in October to secure germination before freezing weather. Suburban gardens planted Rojen rye quite extensively last fall on beds where they had grown annuals or vegetables during the season. It is then spaded under the following April as soon as the ground can be worked.

Flowers for Farm Garden

THE GARDEN OF WILD FLOWERS.

Nearly every garden possesses an out-of-the-way or odd corner, possibly shaded, that would be very suitable for growing wild flowers. Or one's interest may be sufficiently keen to establish a regular wild garden of varying extent.

Whatever may be one's desire in this regard nature's ways should be closely studied for success. Wild flowers grow largely in colonies, each kind in the environment and soil that best suits it. Some prefer the deep shaded woods, some the more open grassy glades. Others like a deep leaf mold among rocks or a sandy bank. Between these extremes are many possible situations and most subjects will adapt themselves to different environments and even the soil and situation of the regular garden. Providing the right soil and environment, however, is not only more interesting but will result in a more natural and luxurious growth.

In spite of the fact that most people go to the woods during the blooming season, dig up the plants and take them home, it is better to dig them later. Better results will be had if the flowers are marked this month and dug up in August when they are resting. They will at this time, of course, have died down in many cases or changed considerably in appearance but a little experience in identifying them will get over this difficulty.

Dig the plants with a good ball of earth, disturbing the roots as little as possible, and wrap them in newspapers or canvas for transportation. The shorter the time they are in transit the better they should be planted immediately on arrival.

The ground should, of course, be prepared before one fares forth on the quest and the afore-... provided. Otherwise only discouragement will result.

Wild flowers, especially asters, golden rod, Joe Pye Weed and many others, will respond to a little cultivation, and enrichment of the soil and anticipation of their wants in a surprising manner.

Native plants especially about our large cities, due to various causes such as the land being taken for building and the robbing of the more accessable points by the overzealous, are in danger of extinction. Therefore do not dig more than you can use or the whole of a clump and thus aid in wild flower conservation.

Those who cannot indulge in he. the woods need not give up the idea of having nature's beauties about their homes. Many specialists in wild flowers now list a surprising variety and will ship the plants well packed at the proper time. They will also gladly answer questions as to culture and situations for those who have not the time or the grounding necessary to their study.

There are three vitamins necessary for growing chicks—A, B, and D. A is best supplied by feeding yellow corn and plenty of green alfalfa. B is found in such grains as corn, wheat, oats, and barley. Direct sunlight will replace vitamin D. One per cent. of cod liver oil mixed weekly with the scratched grain will give good results in the absence of sunlight.

CHILDREN DRINK SANITARY MILK

Farm Children Rebel Because of Unsanitary Handling of Fluid.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS

It is a common saying that farm children refuse to drink milk because they subconsciously rebel against drinking a fluid that they have seen so carelessly handled. That is too general an indictment of farm people, but the fact remains that every precaution against dirt is a precaution against disease in our own families and those to whom milk and cream are sold. Even where the home-maker does not help with the actual milking, she exerts influence upon the general condition of the dairy barn, and the milk pails and separator are nearly always directly in her care. Not many women but are willing to do a little extra washing to provide the men folk with plenty of clean overalls to wear when they milk, and to see that hot water, soap and clean towels are handy for them to wash their hands before they set out for the barn. The dirt they have acquired on their clothes and hands while spreading manure and doing other farm work is too likely to fall into the milk dissolve and be impossible to strain out, to risk the danger, by "saving" on washing.

Sanitary care of milk pails and separator is far more a habit than a matter of equipment. As soon as the milk has been emptied the pails should be rinsed in cold water and thoroughly washed in warm water containing a good soap powder. Use a bristle brush, and never a rag, to wash milk utensils, but this does not imply that the brush can be left to take care of itself. It must be washed after every use. After utensils have been washed they should be thoroughly scalded with boiling water and placedwhere they can air and sun. Let them dry from the heat they have absorbed from the hot water; do not wipe them with a cloth. Put them in the brightestsunlight available, as sunlight is the worst enemy of germ life. When they are rinsed again just before being taken to the barn, see that the water used is clean and pure.

MANY MITES TO BOTHER CHICKS

Isolate Infected Birds and Treat With Good Dusting Powder.

USE STOCK DIP

By DR. GEORGE H. CONN.

Little chickens frequently suffer from head lice, which sometimes cause considerable losses. These are lice which are frequently found on the head of the chickens and a few of them will soon suck the life blood out of the little ones.

Prevention by properly disinfecting and cleaning up the nests where the chickens are hatched and by seeing that the old hen herself is free from lice is the proper remedy. A good louse powder dusted on the old hen, and especially thoroughly dusted beneath her wings will rid her of practically any form of louse if persistently followed up. The nest itself should be thoroughly dusted with either a good dry insecticide or a good louse powder.

Little chicks with head lice can soon be rid of these pests by the use of an ointment containing 1-2 of 1 per cent of bichloride of mercury. This is also useful for all other lice that gather in the more tender parts of the skin of poultry, namely, under the wings, around the vent, etc.

The hen should be dusted before setting her, and should be treated with the lice paste given above and should be used once a week while she is on the eggs. Make the last application on the 19th day, just before the chickens hatch. On the third day after hatching treat the chicks with a light application.

Mites.

These parasites belong to the spider family. They are also called red bugs, chiggers, or jiggers. Where they are present, clean up infected pens, taking out the litter and burning it, remove the roosts, nests and all other fittings. Paint up the inside of the chicken house and the roosts and nests and dropping board, etc., with a good antiseptic whitewash. Be sure that every crack and crevice is covered with this paint. If possible the poultry infested with mites should be dipped in a warm solution of about one part of a good stock dip to fifty parts of water since a liquid is much more effective with mites.

The deplumbing mite attacks the base of the feathers with the result that the feathers fall out. They are very small, having the appearance of fine dust when found at the base of the feather. A good lice paste applied sparingly to the base of the feathers surrounding the bare spot will be very effective.

Body Lice.

There are a number of different kinds of body lice, so called because they remain on the skin instead of the feathers. Lice powder is the best treatment for them. Grasp the fowl by the legs, holding the head down, and dust the powder thoroughly into the feathers, working it well down to the skin with the hand. ... every week.

Scaly Leg Mites.

This mite causes crusts on the feet and legs by working between the scales so that the scales are elevated by the scabby substances accumulated beneath them. Scaly leg spoils the appearance of the chickens and their legs may become sore.

Wash the legs with warm water, soapy water, soaking up the scale thoroughly. Then apply the mercury ointment given above. Do not rub off the scale. It will break off as the parasites are destroyed.

Worms.

To a certain extent worms infest poultry without noticeable harm, but when they become quite numerous they may be dangerous. The large, round worm is the most common. It is round, tapering, yellowish white, and from 1 to 3 inches long. It will be found in the cecum or blind gut. The small round worm is similar in appearance, but of smaller size. The gizzard worm remains in the gizzard, becoming imbedded in the walls, and is very difficult to treat. The crop worm is a small round worm that stays in the crop of the fowl. The tape worm, which is common in all birds, animals and man, has a head furnished with suckers and hooks by which it holds to the walls of the intestines where it feeds upon the contents. Some of them are blood suckers. Chickens with worms generally have a vigorous appetite, but where the worms are numerous they generally waste away. There is a slight diarrhoea or ... worms ca... staggering.

If worms are present, the droppings will frequently show a white mucus which seems to slowly disappear. When the chickens pick at the droppings it is an indication that they have worms.

Remove the affected birds from the flock. Clean away the droppings every morning, spray the ground where droppings are with a solution of a good stock dip. Give the poultry a worm remedy. A satisfactory worm remedy for poultry is: Oil of American wormseed, 1 ounce, chloroform 1 ounce, oil of anise 1-2 ounce, and castor oil enough to make a quart. Make up a thick wet mash and mix 1 tablespoonful of this mixture for each 15 birds.

Keep off feed 24 hours and repeat in a week or ten days. Mix thoroughly with feed. If possible remove poultry to new grounds.

MUST BUILD UP SOIL

Land Sown to One Crop for Many Years Becomes Run Down.

The growing season of 1924 demonstrated to the farmers the necessity of reseeding farms to rebuild the soil that has been robbed by twenty to forty years of steady grain growing. We found that about the only place to find dependable seed corn was on the farms that had been seeded to red clover, sweet clover, alfalfa, alsike, blue grass and the like. The season of 1944 was the acid test on grain-producing soils.

We are receiving today a crop of corn from a fifty-acre field that was in meadow for a number of years until last season. The yield is eighty bushels per acre over the scales, no guesswork. An adjoining field that has been planted to corn for twenty-five successive years produced 26 bushels per acre. That tells the story.

"SOME CORN"

BARLEY TESTS FOR GOOD SEED

Uniformity of Size, Shape and Color is a Good Point.

MUST BE PURE.

Barley growers are warned to see that their seed is the best obtainable, by experiment stations. After conducting a series of experiments to determine the best barleys adaptable to conditions, they say: "It is economy to use the best seeds obtainable. Poor seed is a common cause of thin stands, weak germination and weedy fields. Seed barley should be bright and plump. Most of the shriveled, poorly developed grains can be blown out with a fanning mill. If the barley has been injured by heating in the stack or bin, it must not be used for seed unless a germination test has shown it to be valuable."

Here are the tests for first-class barley seed, which seed houses apply to their stock:

Barley varieties vary in color of grain, type of head and persistence of awns.

Germination and vitality refer to the ability of the seed to grow. A reasonably good test is 95 per cent.

Purity means freedom from inert matter and weed seed. Cockle, wild oats, morning glory and quack grass are especially to be avoided and samples containing any of them should be disqualified for seed purposes.

Uniformity of size, shape, and color indicates that the seed has been stacked or threshed without being exposed to rain and has been thoroughly cleaned.

Uniform bright color indicates the seed has been harvested and threshed under favorable weather conditions and may indicate vigor and vitality.

... refer to the locality where grown and the original source of the variety. It is important to plant seed that grew on plants that have withstood severe conditions, as this indicates hardiness. Therefore, the pedigree should be known.

WHEAT GROWING BASIC INDUSTRY

First Grain Planted in Continent Over Three Hundred Years Ago.

PLANT GOOD SEED

Wheat is the subject of most direct personal interest to the inhabitants of the temperate regions and much in the public eye during the year 1925 because of the soaring and dipping conditions of the grain market. Wheat growing in North America celebrated its three hundredth anniversary in 1918. This season's crop will make the three hundred and seventh harvested since the colonies were established.

Wheat growing began in the Virginia colony in 1618 and moved steadily westward. With primitive machines, hand sowing and threshing, and with seed of quality so inferior to that of the present day as hardly to be recognizable, no wonder that a few meager bushels per acre were all that the pioneers could wrest from the soil.

Good seed wheat is a prime necessity for a good crop, a fact that wheat growers have come to recognize more definitely with each season. Tested seed, clean, free from weed seed, smut, mixtures of rye and weed seeds is demanded and the wizardry of the elaborate and complicated machinery of the modern seed merchant makes these demands reasonable, where only a few years ago such a condition was impossible. In addition to freedom from foreign matter, the seedsman can tell the farmer how well his seed will germinate.

The fanning mill takes out dirt, chaff and pieces of straw but it will not remove rye or foreign seeds. This is done by more complicated machinery.

Pure seed of improved varieties is handled by all reputable seed dealers and it is always advisable to see to it that the highest grade seed is planted

SWEET CLOVER GOOD FOR FARM

Is Best Adapted for Soil Building and Pasture Purposes.

IS GOOD FEED

It does not do to despise any of the nitrogen-forming legumes or members of the clover, bean and pea tribe. Sweet clover, for many years a scorned weed, now finds a valuable place on the farm with other clovers. Here is a summary of what sweet clover can do for the farm.

Good stands of sweet clover can sometimes be secured where red clover and alfalfa fail entirely or do poorly.

Sweet clover is best adapted for soil building and pasture purposes. It can be sused for hay under conditions where red clover and alfalfa cannot be successfully grown.

Stock soon learns to like sweet clover and do well on it. It will make more feed per acre than the common permanent pastures.

Sweet clover is a rapid soil builder. It is an excellent crop to seed thin run-down land. Being a two-year plant or biennial, it works into rotation better than alfalfa.

There are three kinds of seed on the market, hulled, unhulled, and scarified. The last named is seed that has been run through the seed house machinery and scarified or scratched, making the hard shell more penetrable to moisture and able to germinate more certainly and quickly, a help given to the farmer by the seedsman.

Each kind of seed gives good results, if sown at the right time of the year. The unhulled seed is for fall and winter sowing. The scarified is for spring sowing. ... hulled ... usually ... stage on ... which occur in many plants, slower of germination than the rest and said to be a device of nature for perpetuating species by retaining seed for germination if the early crop happens to be destroyed. The scarifying process makes this hard seed germinate with the rest of the crop.

Sweet clover is valuable as a honey plant, having a long blooming season and furnishing a high-grade, pleasantly flavored honey.

Cattle turned out on new clover pastures especially when wet, are susceptible to bloating. Death is likely to occur in from half an hour to three or four hours. Bloating can be avoided by not turning out on fresh grass or clover pastures when they are wet with rain or dew, or when cattle are very hungry. Giving cattle a feed of hay just before turning them out is always a good safeguard.

Do not use white lead paints in places where they will come in contact with drinking water, silage, or food products. Do not inhale the dust when scraping or sand papering surfaces coated with lead paints. Handling food with hands that are covered with lead paint is also dangerous.

BREEDING DAIRY COWS DEPENDS ON GOOD BULLS

Bull Must Be Typical of the Breed to Which He Belongs.

GOOD PRODUCERS.

Should Come From a Family Noted as Producers of Good Cattle.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The immediate possibility of lowering the cost of production of milk or increasing the flow of milk is dependent upon the care, management and feeding of our cows. It is possible within a single herd to do selecting and by purchasing replace our poorer cows with better cows; but, taking the Province as a whole, we must be content to get along as best we can with the cows on hand. The cows we have cannot be changed, but perhaps they will produce more if given more feed and better care. This limits the scope for immediate improvement. For any great improvement we must look to the future and since we must get along as best we can with the cows available, the great hope is centered in the sires we use.

Characteristics of a Good Bull.

To use a pure-bred bull simply because he is pure bred is not enough. He must either be a proven producer of good dairy cattle or else have the maximum possibilities of becoming a producer of good cattle. Such a bull should command a reasonably good price and we should be prepared to pay well for such a bull. This does not mean, of course, that we should not buy as closely as possible. A good bull should be masculine, he must have the characteristics of a good bull and should be strong in those points where the females are weak. For example, some Holstein cows with droopy rumps have been good producers. In such an instance the bull to which they are mated should not only have a good rump himself, but come from a family of good rumped cattle. Similarly cows that are low testers should be mated to a bull that comes from a high testing strain. It is well in selecting a sire to see that the family tree behind the bull is uniformly good, rather than to select a sire out of an outstanding individual with no regard for either the near or remote ancestors. Then again, the bull must be typical of the breed to which he belongs. In breeding any class of pure-bred stock type is of primary importance.

High Testing Cows at a Premium.

Since payment for milk is being made largely on a butter fat basis, there has come to be a great demand for high testing cows. Some people are trying to increase the butter-fat yield of the herd by crossing Ayrshire or Jersey bulls on Holstein cows. This practice should in most cases be discouraged, as the results when carried past the first generation are usually unsatisfactory. We cannot expect by crossing two breeds of cattle to obtain in the offspring all the virtues of each breed and none of the weaknesses. The opposite is just as likely to be true, otherwise we might expect that by crossing a heavy Draft mare with a Standard bred stallion to obtain the weight of the Draft horse and the speed of the Standard bred in the offspring. Experience has proven this is not the case.

Care in Breeding Heifers.

Heifers should attain good size and be properly developed before being bred. In many cases heifers are bred at such an early age that they turn out to be undersized cows. The only argument advanced in favor of this early breeding is that perhaps over a period of five years an extra calf may be obtained, but it must be remembered that cows which are not properly developed cannot produce. In other words, the cow should be considered as a big factory. She should have size and capacity to turn large quantities of roughage into milk. She should, like all well managed factories, be given a resting period for repair. Even iron and steel will not last forever, and machines have certain idle periods when they are overhauled and put in good running order. This is equally true with a dairy cow. She ... have a resting period before ... she should be liberally fed in order to repair the worn-out parts of her body and build up a reserve strength to be used in maximum production during the lactation period. The liberal feeding of a cow during her period of rest previous to freshening will pay and pay well.

Apply Business Principles'

Dairying as well as all other lines of business requires the application of business principles. How often have you heard milk and cream shippers doubting the accuracy of the test which is being given them. This doubt or suspicion should not be. Producers should learn to do this testing themselves. A Babcock testing machine is not so expensive as to prohibit its use. The method of testing is fairly simple. The results obtained more than justify the expenditure. It gives every dairyman a reliable check on his cows. This coupled with the weighing of the milk will eliminate much of the suspicion of unscrupulous creamery men and should be a guide for the building up of a good herd of dairy cattle.—L. E. O'Neill, Live Stock Branch, Toronto.

At the last annual meeting of the fifty County Representatives of the Ontario Representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, without a dissenting voice or an opposing vote, a resolution was passed favoring the use of "Ontario grown seed of all crops."

The High Commissioner's Office reports a good market in London for carefully selected and graded Canadian chickens. A test consignment brought grprices equal to the best British and foreign shipments.

Late hatched chicks seldom, if ever, pay, and late hatched pullets in the flock next winter are a menace to the health of the flock, as well as a hindrance to its productiveity. Ordinarily no chicks should be hatched later than June ...

GEORGE STREET CHURCH

Rev. W. Harold Young, until Wednesday a minister of a Church centuries old, stood last night the prophet of the future rather than the preacher of the past, as he told of the great new Church that had its birth during the week. The vigorously ecclesiasical figure in black, silhoueted against the ornamentation of the organ, personified the development of ages of faith and devoion and tradition. And as he stepped forward to deliver his sermon, he cut through and yet preserved this very history.

Out of its pages he marshalled hero after hero of three Churches, group after group of fervent religious workers, army after army of nation and empire builders, and bade them relive their parts in front of the splendid word-painted tapestry he so skilfully wove.

But this was only a background for the stupendous event of today. There was no longing gaze toward the ages that are dead save for these great men whose names shall live for ever. There was no sign in all the address of regret in loss.

Marching out of the very background, leaving it to the ages where it belonged, came John Wesley, John Milton and John Knox to take their places in the serried ranks of the United Church, hand in hand, the speaker said, and uniting their resources, their ideals, and their hopes on a common basis of loyalty to Jesus Christ.

As at the morning service, when the ritual followed closely that of the great inaugural ceremony at Toronto, the congregation at George Street Church was attentive to the words and alert to catch the spirit of the message. It was the birth of a new era—history in the making.

Greatest Event.

"Whether or not we have fully realized it, we have been living in this last week through one of the hours when history is made," Rev. Mr. Young said in opening his address. "A distinguished Britisher, representing one of the great religious bodies of England, said in his address in Toronto on Wednesday evening, that the events of that day were the most important in the world's religious life since the day when Luther nailed his thesis to the door of the church at Wittnberg and so doing laid the cornerstone of Protestantism. This is a strong statement, but it is not in the least out of harmony with the facts. The eyes of the Christian world have been on Canada in this last week. We are setting out upon an adventure such as no other body of Christion people in all the centuries has ever embarked upon. We are blazing a trail along which, sooner or later, others in distant lands will walk.

If any man has not felt in his bones the thrill of the pioneer, he has missed the meaning of it all. God in His mercy grant that we may be seized with a reverent sense of the greatness of the thing we are doing—and may give our very best to the winning of the golden future which today is opening up before us.

There are many angles from which one may view the coming together of the Presbyterian, Congregational and Methodist Churches to form a new United Church, but the most important is the spiritual ide. Our question is: 'What is the spiritual significance of the birth of this new religious body?'

Merging Traditions.

In the first place, it is the merging of the spirit and traditions of three different lines of Christian emphasis. One of the most solemn moments of the great service in the Arena last Wednesday was the moment when, each in turn, the representatives of the three bodies laid the offering of his denomination upon the altar of the new Church's life. First the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church declared: 'According to the grace given unto our fathers, as witnesses of the Apostolic Gospel and standard-bearers of the Church commissioned to make disciples of all nation, more especially in the manifestation of the Spirit 'in vigilance of Christ's Kirk and Covenant, in care for the spread of education and devotion to sacred learning,' receive ye our inheritance among them that are sanctified.' Then, with the same preamble was presented the offering of the Congregational Union, 'In the liberty of phophesying the love of spiritual freedom and the enforcement of civic justice.' And again the Methodit contribution, 'In evangelical zeal and human redemption, the testimony of spiritual experience, the ministry of sacred song.'

"And, in each case," Mr. Young said, as his face lighted up with the memory of the moment, "the response rolled back from the vast audience of eight thousand people like the voice of many waters: "We glory in the grace given to us in this goodly heritage."

Congregational Gift.

"All that those simple declarations stood for, it is not easy to put into words. I turn to the pages on which are written the story of the Congregational Church, and my heart is filled with reverence, at what I read there. Only a scant half century had passed since Luther defied the Church of Rome before Congregationalism lifted its head in England. The work of the reformers in the tight little isle had proceeded slowly—and a great body of men were striving to make easier the passage from Roman Catholicism to the new order by retaining some of the forms and practices of the Roman Church. Finally they pleaded for a complete break with Rome's ideas as well as Roman government, and the organization of the new church along strictly New Testament lines. They formed their body in London in 1592, but were so persecuted they had to fly to the continent for their lives. Two of their leaders were publicly hanged for the step they had taken, and so their ideals were sanctified in blood. Some returned to England, and some came to America in that historic voyage of the Mayflower.

Out of Congregationalism came the great soul of Oliver Cromwell, the mountain-like heart of John Milton. Out of Congregationalism came the tremendous influence of Jonathan Edwards; the sweet reasonableness of Henry Ward Beecher and Hugh Pedley. Out of Congregationalism came the dauntless resolve of the pioneers who carved out New England, and, besieged by the Indians, stole out of their stockades to bury their dead at midnight, lest the besiegers should know their little force depleted, and so be encouraged. Out of Congregationalism came the two greatest universities on this continent—Harvard and Yale.

Small wonder that the vast audience answered in reverence last Wednesday when the offering of Congregationalism came to the new Church: 'We glory in the grace given to us in this goodly heritage.' No one who sees and understands it all can fail to feel our life today enriched because in a sense never before true the spirit of the great centuries of Congregational history is ours.

Presbyterian Gift.

And when you turn from that to the pages of Presbyterian history, how goodly is the heritage which comes to us from the Presbyterians. Few finer stories adorn the pages of history at any place than the great tale of the struggle between Mary, Queen of Scots, and John Knox—the story of the resolute determination of the Queen and her court to save Scotland for the Roman church; that on the one hand, and the resolute will of a body of noble souls that Scotland should walk in the new path of Presbyterianism on the other. Read again the story of the Covenanters in some such pages as Scott's 'Old Mortality.' Take up such a book as Ian McLaren's 'Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush,' and read of the loyalty of the Scot to his Church and to his God. Get one of Ralph Connor's Glengarry books and see the stalwart figures of the old Presbyterian elders gathering to sing in stately measure the Psalms of David and to listen to the scholarly expounding of the Word of God. See once again the galaxy of great men Presbyterianism has given to the world: Livingstone tramping through Africa, Chalmers and McLaren in the pulpit, George Adam Smith and Henry Drummond in the realm of scholarship, the multitude whose faith has consecrated the Highland glens with the very spirit of God himself.

There are many things in the lips of the anti-unionist Presbyterians which we cannot understand, but this one we can,—their reluctance to take a step which, as they see it, severs their connections with their fathers and their past. Thank God, Union has not meant what it seemed to them it would mean, the severance of the ties which link the present to the great traditions of the Presbyterian past. As Presbyterianism comes into the Union bringing with it this noble heritage, what one of us can fail to thank God for it, or fail to realize how greatly our new life is enriched by the stream of Presbyterian influence which flows in.

Methodist Gift.

"It is scarcely in place for one," Mr. Young remarked, "who until last Wednesday was a Methodist, standing in what was until that day a Methodist pulpit, to dwell at length upon the enriching stream which flows into our new Church from Methodism. And yet we may surely be pardoned for saying that the influence of the things for which Methodism stands must not fail to be a real strength to the new Church. The great historian of the eighteenth century says of Methodism no less than this: that it was the force which saved England from revolution. In a day when spiritual life was dangerously near exhaustion came the flaming word borne by Wesley and Whitfield. The thing which they emphasized as they preached to the uncounted thousands of their followers was this, the precious possibility of a man consciously experiencing in his own life the saving power of God. That was the watchword of the new movement—experience. Methodism was born in experience, when one May night John Wesley found his heart strangely warmed and went out from that hour to the task of saving the world. The thought of Methodism has been its emphasism on experience as the final witness and test of genuine religion. Not creed or dogma, but to know God—that was, and is, and, please God, will continue to be, the chief thing in life.

Nor can we forget the offering Methodism brings in its gift of sacred song. Not without cause have we been called the 'singing Methodists.' The element of joy and gladness in religion, this comes in a special sense with our beloved Methodism into the new Church. From to-day those great hymns, 'Hark the Herald Angels Sing'; 'Jesus Lover of My Soul'; 'Oh For a Thousand Tongues to Sing,' and scores of others are no longer in a peculiar sense ours. We lay them gladly on the altar of the new Church and we say, 'With us, take them; that in our new fellowship they may belong to us all.' Who can but feel that in such things as its emphasis upon personal experience, its gift of sacred song, Methodism will be an enriching stream in the life of the new Church?

Wesley-Milton-Knox.

What an hour, this, in which to stand! It is as if by some miracle the Mississippi, the St. Lawrence, and the Nile were to unite in one mighty flowing river. To-day John Milton, John Knox, John Wesley have joined hands. To-day the pioneering spirit of the puritans, the rugged spirit of the covenanters, the passionate zeal of the Methodists, mingle in one life. To-day, by whatever name we have heretofore been known, we receive them as our common heritage.

What it may mean for us, for our country, for our world, to have these three rivers flowing together in a single channel only God Himself has dared to dream! John Milton, John Knox, John Wesley, in a single enterprise together—what a force it would have been! To-day their sons are that force united, and as the day pass we shall more fully realize what a tremendous thing it is to have as our birthright the merged spirit and traditions of those three mighty streams.

Looking Forward.

The United Church, however, has its eye not only on the past. It has in a particular sense its gaze fixed on the future. It is a Church designed for progress; a Church which has its largest hope in this — the more adequate discharge of its responsibilities to the generations of to-morrow.

Set this down, therefore, as the second element in the spiritual significance of the United Church, the birth of a force which shall in the providence of God be able to do better things for Christ than ever its component elements have been able to do in the days which have been.

There is no country, probably, on the face of the earth where the effects of needless duplication of church machinery have been so evident as in Canada. With tasks awaiting us that would challenge the strength of a giant, we have sawn and hacked away at the fringe of them like so many Lilliputians, usually managing to miss the fine accomplishments because our forces were so divided that strategic planning was impossible.

Spiritual Significance.

The third element in the spiritual significance of the new Church is the birth of new fellowship of life and work upon a common basis of love and loyalty to Jesus Christ. The curse of the life of Protestantism has been the spirit of sectarianism. Around some point of doctrine, magnified by its exponents until the peccadillo became a principle; around some detail of church government or ritual form which was never more than a detail until the microscopic eye of prejudice got to looking at it; around such little things as these, groups small and great have rallied until new sects have sprung up for which there was no need, and in the plans of God no room. Times change, and as the years pass men see more clearly, and what we have come to see is this, that some things are small, and some great, and that small things matter little, and only the great things merit our loyalty. There have been historic and far-reaching differences between the three Churches which are now merged into one. The Presbyterian has believed in predestination to salvation, the Methodist in the freedom of personal choice. The Congregationalist has believed in each Church being an independent, self-determinting unit, the Methodist in a closely-knit connection to which the individual congregation was in all things subordinate. The Presbyterian has had his Moderator, his presbyteries, his sessions and his elders; the Congregationalist his chairman and his council; the Methodist his general superintendent, his conferences, his stewards. What has happened is that these points of difference have been seen to be what they are—minor things—and rising above such details we have come together on the common basis of our common faith in a common Saviour and one common loyalty to His cause. We have heard a voice crying, "The Son of God goes forth to war, who follows in His train?" We have answered back: "Forgetful of all else but this, placing before every other consideration our following of Him, we clasp hand in hand and step out in close array, together, one, as never before." To-day, Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, who were, stand up to sing, "We are not divided, all one body we," and our one Lord is Christ.

Some Day .....

In our own great gladness in the joining of heart and hand in the one great fundamental, the service of Jesus Christ, may we not make one resolve, that we shall treat with kindness and consideration and Christian love those whose eyes have not beheld the vision which we have seen, and who have turned out of the path of progress to perpetuate the divisions of far yesterdays. Some day, let us never doubt it, they or their children, or their children's children, will see their mistake and realize the futility of what they have tried to do.

If hard things are said, let them not be said by us. If accusations are levelled, let them not be found on our lips. Misunderstood, misrepresented, let us remember we are the servants of Him, Who, when He was reviled, reviled not again. By so doing we shall the more reveal His spirit and the better enter into the spiritual heritage of joy."

Rev. Mr. Young closed his address with a reference to Rev. Dr. Pidgeon's prayer during the service in the arena in Toronto, when the great leader invoked a blessing on those who went out of the Presbyterian Church as it entered Union. "The day of bitterness is past," he said, "and now let us learn to live together in a spirit of Christian charity and unfailing kindness and goodwill."

KNOX CHURCH.

Shining through the latticed windows in Knox Church yesterday morning, the sun lighted up the same building and shone upon the same people, yet not the same Church or the same congregation, that had been there on other similar Sundays. There was a subtle exhilaration in the service—a thrill of pioneering—the sense of adventure. These people who thronged to the first communion table spread under the name of the United Church of Canada, seldom has Knox Church had so large a Communion gathering—saw a greater significance in the holy rite than had presented itself to them before. All over the city, all over Ontario, all over Canada, thousands of congregations yesterday received the sacred emblems in a spirit of consecration to a great cause. Those who broke bread in the United Church yesterday linked themselves with what they believe to be the greatest forward movement in the history of the Christian Church.

What Think Ye?

"What think ye of Christ?" was the communion question asked by Rev. M. C. Mackinnon in a deeply spiritual message that reached its height in his eloquent urge to forget all else—the new order, the old history, those who had gone out of the Church during the recent advance—forget everything but the Christ whose ordinance it is: "This do in remembrance of Me."

He should be remembered as appearing in human form, the incarnation of God, taking upon Himself our nature, the preacher said. Those who look to Him with faith in His finished work can say with reverence, "God is one with us." But Christ is more than that. He is very God of very God. He is more than man.

Jesus Christ, is complete. All great human characters have some lack, but Jesus Christ is perfect. He stands with man and yet stands out, the Supreme Being. Although born of Jewish race, He belongs to all races, red, yellow, black and white.

Great statesmen and leaders of the past belong to their own century and day, and not to ours. Our leaders today belong to this age. But Jesus Christ belongs to the centuries. He is not thought of as belonging to the first, second, eighteenth or twentieth century, but to all ages.

Jesus' message in delivering the last supper to His disciples gives a lesson in the way of remembrance. "This do in remembrance of Me," He said, and gave them the bread typifying His broken body, and the wine, His blood shed for all nations. The memory is of a suffering God, a God who gave Himself a sacrifice, Who carried the sorrows and burdens of the world.

The memory is of a loving God, Who gave His body and blood that we might enter into eternal life.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH.

The United Church of Canada was ushered in at St. James' yesterday morning by a communion service. The order of service followed was that used on Wednesday morning at the great service at the Arena in Toronto, when the formal inauguration of the United Church of Canada took place. The three hymns sung were especially chosen for the service on Wednesday because one was written by a Presbyterian, one by a Methodist and one by a Congregationalist. They were: "All People That on Earth do Dwell," "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing," and "O God of Bethel." The Psalm chosen for responsive reading was the one hundred and eighteenth, and before the sermon the pastor read the seventeenth chapter of St. John's Gospel, taking as his text, "That they all may be one."

Everyone here, Mr. Richardson said, knows something of the historic and epoch making event which took place last week. It is an event which will be one of the most important of all when the history of religion in Canada is written. The consummation of union means the blending of three distinct types of Protestantism into one communion. For a quarter of a century the churches have been moving in this direction. In Canada there were conditions that tended to accelerate the movement. There were many small towns with two or three churches, each drawing assistance from the Home Mission Board of its denomination. These, in many cases, when united, would form one self-sustaining charge. Again, in the west, many places had no church but there were a few members of one church and a few of another. There were not enough of any one body to form a church but with union a church can be formed.

Value of Unity.

The value of unity was shown by the allies during the recent war when they were not successful until all the armies had been united under one command, said Mr. Richardson. In the church, it was denominationalism that kept the churches apart. Pride and tradition were strongly entrenched. When the people saw that they were alike on the important things and that only trivial things kept them apart the dividing lines faded away.

This union begins a new epoch, said the speaker. There have been unions to form other unions, with conferences and correspondence but in Canada the churches have acted. He compared the opposition to union to the opposition against Confederation in 1867. The people who opposed Confederation were sincere in their beliefs that it would be harmful. Time had disproved their contention. So it may be with union.

Among the delegates from churches in other countries who brought greetings at the evening service last Wednesday was one from the United Church of South India. This is the only United Church, said Mr. Richardson, which preceded the United Church of Canada. The mission congregations of the Presbyterian and Congregational denominations have united to form one church and negotiations are under way to bring in the Wesleyan Methodists and Anglicans and form one great church with a membership of nearly half a million. It is not wished, said Mr. Richardson, to make churches in the mission field having the differences of the churches in the old lands but to form a Christian Church of South India.

Zeal Needed.

Mr. Richardson read the figures that showed the number of pulpits, clergy and members of the United Church but he said that membership is not the only requisite. What is needed is the power of the Spirit of God and the zeal and enthusiasm of the members. The United Church is a truly Canadian body, and such a union would not be possible in many other countries, said Mr. Richardson, recalling the Unions which had gone before when the various branches of the Uniting churches had come back to the parent bodies.

In reply to the question that is often asked, "How is each church going to continue when they are all joined in

And In The Meantime.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

Rev. George M. Ross, D.D., of St. Matthew's Presbyterian church, Montreal, was the preacher at St. Paul's church yesterday before large congregations. Dr. Ross has been attending the Assembly meetings in Toronto during the past week.

Rev. Mr. Ross' messages were crowded with much of interest to non-concurrents, giving first-hand information regarding the deliberations of the Church Fathers; and the congregations were keenly interested in the doings of the week.

Such a Time as This."

The text was chosen from the fourth chapter of Esther, part of the fourteenth verse: "And who knoweth whether thou are come to the kingdom for such a time as this.

Dr. Ross said: The past week has been momentous one in the history of our beloved Church. The notable month of June marked the birthday of the United Church in Canada. We who did not desire to enter, remained Presbyterian and preserved the continuity of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. No longer are we known as "non-concurrents." That word is obliterated from our ecclesiastical vocabulary for ever. We are to be recognized as "Presbyterians," without any limiting qualification. Many of our brethren have seen fit to secede from us. We wish them well in their new church. But we shall continue to carry on our work, preserving the continuity and unbroken history of Presbyterianism, with all its inspiring traditions and promising future.

Lost Confidence in Leaders.

We have weathered successfully the storm of ecclesiastical conflict and have emerged triumphant over the many forces combined against us to bring our beloved Church to an end. The church union agitation has proved to be anything but a spiritual movement. Congregations have been split, friendships severed and families divided. There has been bitterness and strife in many forms. Saddest of all, we have lost confidence forever in many of our once-trusted leaders, and the sacred standards of our Church have been ridiculed by many who took the solemn vows to uphold them.

Spirit of Forbearance.

But though hard to forget, we must foster the spirit of forbearance and guard against weakening our spiritual power by entertaining the spirit of bitterness and ill-will towards those who have so grievously wronged us. We must maintain the spirit of unity that characterizes our Presbyterian Church to a greater degree.

Our General Assembly has given some idea of the strength and unity of our cause. A conservative estimate is that when New Brunswick and Manitoba have voted and minorities have organized, we shall have at least 1,000 congregations and a membership of no less than 150,000. No fewer than 45 of our foreign mission staff have signified their determination to remain Presbyterian; and a number have declared they will serve in the United Church, identifying themselves later with the Presbyterian church when readjustment takes place.

Assembly Resolution

The following resolution, moved by Rev. J. G. Inkster, was adopted enthusiastically and unanimously by the General Assembly, on 13th June:

"That on this occasion, the jubilee year of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, after she has passed so gloriously through the crisis which recently befell her, the Assembly desires publicly to reaffirm its faith in our ancient and historic standard—in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, the Westminster Confession of Faith, and the Larger and Shorter Catechisms."

church since the division. There is absolute confidence, delightful fellowship, spirit of liberality, service and sacrifice that the future is full of promise. Many who have seen fit to leave us will find ere long that they have been misled, and will return, and we shall welcome them as they signify their loyalty to the church of their fathers.

The Sovereignty of God.

As Presbyterians, we believe in the sovereignty of God. Nothing can possibly occur in this universe except by His order or permission. And so, remembering that, we are recognizing that this painful experience of church disunion is being overruled for good. We are on the threshold of a great revival of spiritual life and service. We are rejoicing in the preservation of of church. We are not proud, but grateful. And we do well to express our gratitude by consecrating all we are and have to His service—We recognize Him as the only King and head of the church, even Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all. We have all come to the Kingdom for such a time as this, and God expects the very best our hands and hearts can offer.

The Call of Service.

This was the subject of the evening discourse of Dr. Ross, from the text: For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve (Act 27, 23), telling his congregation that the people should put forth all their energy in the service of the church, towards the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth.

The devotional part of the services were inspiring and enthusiastic, the congregation in the morning remaining upstanding for silent player for blessing on the church in her future life.

KNOX—HAVELOCK

HAVELOCK, June 15.—In Knox Church the minister, Rev. John Lennox, yesterday announced on account of the Assembly being unable to complete their work it would be necessary for him to return to Toronto, and, as the work of re-adjustment was important it would be advisable for the representative elder to also attend. He also stated that the assembly was determined to uphold the honor of the Presbyterian Church, and is going to make things so that anything like the present disruption would never happen again in the Presbyterian Church.

ST. ANDREW'S—COBOURG

COBOURG, June 15—At St. Andrew's Continuing Presbyterian Church the preacher for the day was Rev. Jonathan Goforth, the veteran missionary leader, outstanding preacher and teacher of Bible truth. There was a large congregation out in the morning to hear Dr. Goforth. In his virile messages he did not refer directly to the union of the churches but stressed the importance of the Continuing Presbyterian Church, going more extensively into missionary work than ever before. Dr. Goforth is a great revivalist and his clarion call to service and to sacrifice rang out clear and bold, and took hold upon the minds and consciousness of those who heard him. Dr. Goforth is a great preacher. He, himself, has gone forth to the lone outposts to garner for his Lord. His theme was "The power of the Gospel in Mission work." At night Dr. Goforth told of personal missionary experiences, speaking on General Fung and his Christian army. Rev. T. W. Goodwill, pastor of this church, is in Toronto.

ST. ANDREW'S, NORWOOD.

NORWOOD, June 15.—In St. Andrew's Church on Sunday morning Mr. G. Bennette, the pastor, took for his text, John iv., 34: "Jesus said unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work."

He said there was great responsibility in dedicating oneself to the service of God and that to do the

MUSICAL RECITAL

Following the services at Knox Church last evening, a Bach recital of organ and violin works was given, with Charles Peaker, Mus.Bac., Mrs. Thurza Clark, L.R.A.M., of Toronto, and Miss Edwina Palmer, L.R.A.M., taking part. There was a large audience, who seemed to appreciate to the utmost the splendid music rendered by the three artists.

The first number was a very brilliant fugue in D Major, called the "Jig fugue," with difficult pedal work. This was followed by a short choral prelude, "O Sacred Head, now Wounded," in soft, delicate style, and the programme concluded with the massive Double Concerto in D minor for tw solo violins, with orchestral accompaniment on the organ. The three artists, uniting in this splendid example of the genius of the great composer, displayed to wonderful advantage their mastery of their instruments. The first movement of this concerto is an Allegro Vivace in D minor, very rapid. Then comes the Largo, or principal movement, in the relative major, with a great deal of brilliant contrapuntal work in its execution. In this section of the work, the skill of the three musicians was especially apparent, in the slow tempo, with its ethereal tone and tranquil atmosphere. The last movement, another Allegro, is a difficult, quick thing, brilliant, pauseless, almost like a moto perpetuo, calling for rapid interpretation.

At the conclusion of the recital, Rev. Mr. Mackinnon congratulated and extended thanks to the three artists taking part. This is the concluding recital in a series of eight given by Mr. Peaker throughout the season, three of which dealt exclusively with the works of Bach.

HOME TOWN RECIPE.

A very timely recipe for a cooling drink for hot weather is from the cook book of Mrs. John Coughlin, 368 Rubidge street:

Take the juice of twelve lemons and grate in it the rind of six. Let stand over night. Then take six pounds of white sugar and boil with enough water to make a thick syrup. When cool, strain the lemon juice into it and squeeze as much of the oil from the grated rind as will suit the taste.

A tablespoonful of this mixture in a goblet of iced water makes a delicious drink for hot days. It will keep indefinitely.

Window Wishing

NEW YORK, June 15 (United Press).—Somehow the garment that's in the window always looks just a trifle prettier than those we see worn on the streets. That's what makes so many of us "window wishers" or mental shoppers while we may not really want the luxurious garments behind the window panes, we buy them mentally and get a big thrill out of it. We stand like little children gazing at Christmas toys.

This year the windows offer such lovely things that one looks a great deal before attempting to buy or copy. Each window offers something we feel we can't live without. For instance, what could be daintier than a white duvetyne sports coat that is worked throughout in eyelet embroidery and collared in white fox? Or the evening shawl of white silk crepe, bordered with wide black ribbon embroidered in huge white roses, and fringed with deep white fringe? When we saw this we wondered whether one couldn't purchase a square of white silk crepe, several yards of black ribbon figured in huge white roses and some deep white fringe.

In the same window is the smartest little cape, a lovely thing for dinner wear and just a bit different from anything previously seen. This cape, which extends about five inches below the hips, combines nutria fur with heavy oyster white fringe. The cape is Hade of nutria and the fringe extends to the length of the dress.

A little black cape ensemble caused considerable comment at another window. Over a slender frock of black silk crepe was a hip-length cape of the same material completely covered by three deep layers of heavy black fringe. A double frill of crepe formed the collar. The frock was made with high collar and long tight-fitting sleeves and added the severe touch that the fringed cape required to make it appropriate for street wear.

Even the cretonne sports coat turned one green with longing. This combined a border of dull coral kasha cloth with flowered cretonne, the two materials being blended together with gold stitchery.

will of God is to leave all and follow him.

In the evening the sermon was dedicated to the Church, the text being, Psalm 103, verse 17. In connection with this the first ten chapters of Genesis were taken. The speaker spoke of the advent of man into this world and how it applies to this period of life. He said we should turn back to the word of God, start anew and use the great foundation of God.

ST. PETER'S—MADOC

MADOC, June 15.—The usual quiet hours of worship were held in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church yesterday with an exceptionally large attendance.

The Scripture reading was from Acts XVI, 16-26; and from the same Chapter, verse 30 came the text:—"What must I do to be saved?"

The speaker was the Rev. Mr. Fisher, Alberta. He gave a most forceful and inspiring address on the subject of Salvation. A man full of years and wisdom he opened his sermon with the words: "Am I old-fashioned if I talk on so old a subject as this, Salvation, in this day of modernism against Fundamentalism?"

Mr. Fisher explained that he had not always been in the ministry but had for a number of years been a man among men with great opportunities for studying human nature, and he felt he was in a position to understand humanity. The key-note of the sermon was faith. "The challenge and call to each of us," said Mr. Fisher, "was never so great as it is to-day. Let us above all be charitable." The man on the street is justified in judging the church harshly to-day, unless we prove by our charitable thoughts and kindly words that we walk with the Master.. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and ye shall be saved." In referring to the change [illegible] reverend gentleman spoke lovingly of those who had felt it their duty to enter the Union. They, too, surely had gone on to do the work of the Master. He urged the congregation to forget all petty differences and serve as they never had before; to forget the past and the present and to look only to the future, pressing forward to better things. He concluded his uplifting appeal with those beautiful words:—

"Faith of our fathers! we will love
Both friend and foe in all our strife;
And preach thee too, as love knows how,
By kindly words and virtuous life.
Faith of our fathers! holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death!"

Following the sermon Mr. Baily sang with great feeling that exquisite solo—"I will not forsake Thee."

MILLBROOK CHURCH.

MILLBROOK, June 15.—Rev. G. Ingram Craw, Acting Moderator of the Peterboro Presbytery, occupied the pulpit of the Continuing Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, the congregation filling about three-quarters of the church.

Mr. Craw's former charge at Springville having recently voted to enter the United Church, his resignation was accepted forthwith.

The choir rendered the selection, "Stand up, Stand up, for Jesus," Miss Gussie Clarry presiding at the organ.

Moses' words of comfort and confidence in the 90th Psalm, with special reference to verse 9: "We spend our years as a tale that is told," were the minister's theme, his opening remarks centering round the idea, "we climb up, with the longing for God in our souls, because we needs must. He is the Tested and Tried One—from everlasting to everlasting, Thou art God."

"What is life? It has been compared to a voyage, a fight, a pilgrimage—the text says 'a tale that is told.' Sometimes the story is broken off at the most interesting point the incomplete tale here to be continued yonder. The story of life we are writing to-day will be read by God another day—how will it read? Are you writing a better page than your father, or your mother, wrote? You ought to be, and if you are, God will bless you, if not, God pity you."
